Security Lid Put On Spying

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — The White House says it cannot, for national security reasons, explain reports that Presidential detectives discovered the Pentagon was spying on Henry Kissinger, only that the newspaper versions were "distorted."

The White House neither confirmed nor denied the reports, but said they "touched on a matter peripheral to" a serious leak of national security information. The facts cannot be revealed "without detriment to the public interest," the White House press office said.

Reports by the Chicago Tribune and the Scripps-Howard News Service are based on "fragmentary accounts" and "convey an incorrect impression of the knowledge and actions of the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," Adm. Thomas Moorer, the White House said.

The reports said that the White House "plumbers" investigation office discovered the Pentagon was spying on Kissinger during the secret Vietnam peace talks in Paris, fearing that Kissinger was not passing on to the military highly sensitive intelligence information he had.

The data turned up by the operation was turned over to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and its chairman, Moorer, the reports said.

The "plumbers," the White House said, did discover during their investigation that "a low level employe, whose clerical tasks gave him access to highly classified information," was involved in "deliberate leaks of extremely sensitive" national security material to the news media.

The White House did not identify him, but other sources said the clerk was a Navy yeoman who worked in the admiral's liaison office with Kissinger's National Security Council staff, who also leaked transcripts of NSC dialogue during the 1971 India-Pakistan war to columnist Jack Anderson.

The Washington Post reported today the yeoman is Charles E. Radford, then an aide to Rear Adm. Robert O. Welander. Both men, the Post said, were ousted from their positions as Pentagon liaisons to the NSC after Kissinger learned of their activities.

The Post said it learned from unnamed sources that the military leaders were "uncertain about radically shifting U.S. foreign policy toward Russia, China and other countries."

Welander is now assistant deputy chief of naval operations for plans and policy. Radford was reassigned to a Naval Reserve unit in Oregon, the Post said.

The Post said former Attorney General John N. Mitchell authorized a tap on Radford's phone fromDecember, 1971, to June, 1972, when the Supreme Court limited the use of wiretaps.

Kissinger In Israel For Troop Talks

Secretary, Sadat Hold Conference Before Trip

TEL AVIV (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Israel today for the second phase of his Middle East tour to secure disengagement of Israeli and Egyptian armies on the Suez front.

Kissinger arrived in Tel Aviv directly from Aswan in southern Egypt where he held two rounds of talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Kissinger told newsmen before leaving Egypt that his three hours of talks at Sadat's summer villa overlooking the Nile river had been "extremely good," sparking speculation that agreement on troop disengagement was near.

It was not known whether Kissinger would confer in Israel with Prime Minister Golda Meir or other cabinet officials. Mrs. Meir was ill with what her doctor described as a case of the shingles.

The atmosphere at today's talks in Egypt between Sadat and Kissinger was cordial and relaxed. Both men laughed and and quipped while photographers snapped pictures.

Before today's meeting, Kissinger went by motorboat to the island of Philae to tour ancient Egyptian temples and visited the Aswan High Dam.

The trip to Aswan and Philae was Kissinger's second tourist expedition during his three trips to Egypt since the October Middle East War. Previously he puffed his way up the steep wall of an Egyptian pyramid.

Kissinger talked with Sadat for 90 minutes last night after arriving from Washington. U.S. aides with the Secretary said the two men discussed substantive issues in a "friendly, cordial atmosphere."

Kissinger planned to return to Aswan tomorrow after the overnight trip to Jerusalem.

Kissinger's mission was to get the Geneva Middle East peace conference off dead center. In six sessions, the Israelis and Egyptians have failed to come up with a plan to separate their troops on the Suez front, which daily is the scene of shooting between the two sides.

Ihsan Abdel Koddous, editor of the weekly Akhbar El-Yom, said the Geneva conference had failed so far because Israeli representatives insisted their troops would not move one inch without Egyptian troops also moving one inch.

"The only hope left is what Kissinger is bringing with him today," Koddous wrote.

A working dinner last night was scrubbed because U.S. officials said Kissinger would be exhausted from his plane flight. Nevertheless, he and and Sadat met for 90 minutes.

Egyptian sources said Kissinger brought a detailed plan from Washington to end the stalemate. U.S. officials said he was guardedly optimistic of success.

The Israeli command said Egyptian and Israeli troops fought tank, artillery and mortar duels on both the Egyptian and Syrian fronts yesterday, wounding two Israeli soldiers.

Egypt has its 2nd and 3rd armies on the east bank of the canal and Israel has a force surrounding the third army near Suez City. Despite the Middle East truce agreement signed by both sides, there have been sporadic incidents of gunfire ever since the ceasefire.

Warning On Oil Confrontation

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Saudi Arabian oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Yamani warned today that any attempt by the world's oil consumers to force a showdown with the oil producers would end in "disaster."

The worldwide energy crunch worsened in Holland, where motorists were limited to four gallons a week under rationing imposed today, and in Greece, where the price of premium gasoline jumped to $2.10 a gallon, a Western world record.

Yamani, speaking at a news conference in Rome, said he did not want to comment directly on the Feb. 11 oil summit called by President Nixon in Washington because any comment could be interpreted as interference in the internal affairs of the United States, Europe, Canada and Japan.

"All that we are concerned with—and we hope it won't happen—is that the consuming nations won't form a bloc that will have any sort of confrontation with the producing countries because then a disaster will occur for the entire world," Yamani said.

Yamani and Belaid Abdessala, Algeria's energy minister, held the news conference at the end of two days of talks on the Middle East and related oil situation with Italian officials. They left later today for Geneva, the third stop on a European and Asian tour.

The Saudi minister said his talks in Italy had been fruitful and that he expected Italy to announce outright support of Arab demands for Israel's total withdrawal from territories occupied in the 1967 Middle East war.

Yamani said that by openly backing the Arab demands, "Italy will have a better oil picture as far as the supply is concerned both in the short term and, it is hoped, in the long term."

The Venezuelan announcement broke with a decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), of which Venezuela is a member, that it would freeze oil prices until April 1.

There was no indication whether other members of the powerful oil organization would abandon the price freeze.

Remainder Of Weekend To Be Wet

Rain, which swept into Marin and Southern Sonoma counties yesterday, continued to fall today and federal forecasters predicted more of the same for tonight and tomorrow.

The weatherman said there was a 60 per cent chance that the drizzle will continue through tomorrow night.

The new storm, which had dumped up to .90 inch of rain on San Rafael by 10 a.m. today, was accompanied by a flurry of minor traffic accidents, with low-lying fog obscuring visibility on portions of Highway 101, according to the California Highway Patrol.

No serious injury accidents were reported, however.

Rainfall totals elsewhere in Marin for the last 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today included San Anselmo, .87 inch; Woodacre, .78; Point Reyes National Seashore, .30; Fairfax, .38 and Novato, .36.

'OPERATION CANDOR'

Some Key Questions Still Unanswered By White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's "Operation Candor," the once-highly publicized White House campaign to answer questions arising from Watergate, apparently has ended. But some troubling questions remain unanswered.

Deputy presidential press secretary Gerald Warren said last week the White House plans no more "white papers" dealing with allegations leveled against the President.

He said Nixon believes the three documents already made public concerning his personal finances, the ITT affair and the milk fund controversy will "lay to rest the allegations made."

"Now we are operating ... in cooperation with the special prosecutor and the judicial process and we do not want to do anything to interfere with that," Warren said.

But Warren declined to comment on other aspects of the scandal that Operation Candor had been expected to address.

Just a month ago, for example, the White House promised to disclose details od the "plumbers" operation, the secret White House investigative unit responsible for the September, 1971, break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist and the wiretapping of several reporters' telephones.

The "plumbers" report never came.

Scores of Republican congressmen emerged from meetings with the President two months ago, in the early stages of Operation Candor, with the impression that tape recordings of presidential conversations and Watergate-related documents would be made public. The White House now says there are no plans to do so.

Among other questions:

Watergate — Nixon insists he knew nothing about the Watergate break-in in advance, or about subsequent efforts to cover it up until late March, 1973. There has been no public documentation to substantiate his claim and no explanation of the "national security" aspects which the President says prompted him to try to curtail an investigation of the break-in.

Personal finances — Nixon's income tax returns for the years 1969 through 1972 raised questions about the propriety of a doation of his vice presidential papers to the National Archives that resulted in a tax write-off of more than a half-million dollars. They also showed that Nixon paid no state income tax and raised the question whether he should have paid capital gains tax on a California land deal.

Mondale Seeks Select Senate Energy Panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., announced plans today to seek creation of a select Senate panel similar to the Senate Watergate committee to seek answers to "a host of strange and still unanswered questions" about the energy crisis.

Mondale said the public was "confused and angry" about how fuel shortages could have developed so quickly, and even whether the crisis is real or contrived.

He said he would introduce legislation when Congress returns Jan. 21 to establish a Senate Select Committee on Energy Shortages, with the same authority as the Watergate panel, "not to assign blame but rather to get all the facts —and then to propose legislation designed to provide the American consuming public wiht the protection it deserves."

At least four congressional committees have announced they will open hearings within the next two weeks to determine the true picture of the oil industry's production, imports, reserves and supply to the domestic market. In addition, House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. predicted Saturday that Congress will look closely at oil profits and tax advantages in coming weeks.

"Action will come on several fronts early in the session," O'Neill said. "You can look for early action on legislation limiting excess profits by oil companies and possibly legislation lowering the present percentage depletion allowance," a tax writeoff intended to encourage exploratory drilling for new sources of oil.

O'Neill said a special task force of the House Ways and Means Committee is looking into whether "present incentives are really being used to increase supply —which is what they should be doing."

A subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee headed by Sen. William Proxmire, DWis., will begin oil shortage hearings on Monday, followed by the House Small Business Committee, a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee headed by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Jackson's hearings, starting Jan. 21, will hear testimony from federal energy director William E. Simon and officials of seven U.S. oil companies "to determine whether there is in fact an oil shortage," Jackson said.

Mondale said: "There are a host of strange and still unanswered questions about our present energy predicament

Reflectors On Bicycles Are Urged

The California Highway Patrol today warned parents of children who bicycle to school to equip their youngsters' cycles with lights and reflectors.

The warning comes in the wake of a rash of near accidents involving automobiles and bicyclists in the early morning darkness of daylight saving time, according to public affairs officer Myron R. MacNeil.

In addition, some young cyclists are riding "two or three abreast" on Paradise Drive and San Pedro Road, he said.

"There have been numerous near misses recently," according to MacNeil.

Several youngsters have been cited for riding bikes lacking proper safety equipment, he added.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Z'berg Gets Two Days In Jail

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Veteran Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'berg has been sentenced to two days in jail and fined $625 for his second drunken driving conviction since 1969.

Z'berg

Z'berg, 47, a Sacramento Democrat who has has served in the Legislature since 1958, also was placed on one-year probation yesterday and ordered to participate in the Municipal Court's "Alcoholic Re-Education Program."

The latest conviction was Z'berg's third brush with the law involving alcohol.

Visting Judge Haven Courtney of Atwater imposed the sentence after denying motions for a new trial and the waiving of Z'berg's earlier conviction.

Under a state law effective Jan. 1, second drunken driving convictions are punishable by a mandatory two days in jail. That law, passed last year by the Legislature, superceded a previous law which imposed a mandatory five-day jail term for second offenders.

Saxbe's Views On Impeachment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Attorney General is a defender as well as prosecutor, and William B. Saxbe, after a week on the job, is not sure which hat he would wear in any possible criminal case against President Nixon.

Saxbe

It depends, Saxbe explained yesterday in his first news conference since becoming the nation's top legal officer, on what kind of charges may evolve against the President in the Watergate grand jury or the House impeachment study.

If investigations of Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski or of the House Judiciary Committee turn up evidence of "criminality," Saxbe said, Nixon will be on his own, Saxbe said he would get no legal help at taxpayers' expense.

But if the charges stem solely from actions the President has taken "within the scope of his authority," Saxbe said, the Justice Department will represent him.

Detente Proof?

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said yesterday that he would believe there was an American-Soviet detente only when thousands of Russians came to America.

"I'll believe there is a detente when I see thousands of Russians leaving the country to come here and thousands of Americans going to the Soviet Union," Jackson said.

As proof that the detente does not exist, Jackson said, "anyone" can read "an official communique in June which cited the Middle East as an example of how the United States and the Russians would work cooperatively to avoid trouble."

Sees Reforms

DELAWARE, Ohio (UPI) — Sen. Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said last night that he believed the Watergate hearings would result in strong election campaign reform legislation.

Baker, who spoke at Ohio Wesleyan University here, said such legislation would probably outlaw campaign contributions by corporations.

"It would be my expectation that the committee would recommend rather extensive electoral reform measures, particularly in the field of campaign financing," Baker said earlier in Columbus.

Another Term

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Mills E. Godwin Jr., at age 59, was to become governor of Virginia today for the second time in his long political career.

Godwin was to take the oath of office in the afternoon at the South Portico of the historic state Capitol designed by Thomas Jefferson.

Godwin, a Democrat when he served his first term from 1966 to 1970, was elected to his second term as a Republican, after abandoning his old party because he thought it had become too liberal.

Drops Challenge

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Jim Garrison, the controversial New Orleans district attorney for 12 years, has given up a court challenge of the Democratic primary he lost to Harry Connick.

Garrison lost the Dec. 15 contest to Connick by 2,221 votes in the official count, but filed a suit saying there had been enough fraudulent votes cast to overturn the results.

Garrison said the courts had imposed "such restrictions on any possible trial of the matter that only a fraction of the story" conceivably could be brought out.

Babies' Condition

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — A Mowbray Maternity Hospital spokesman said the sextuplets and their mother, Mrs. Susan Roenkowitz, were in "satisfactory" condition today.

The babies, three boys and three girls, were born yesterday. All six together weighed just under 25 pounds. They were delivered within 10 minutes by Caesarian section.

The babies were put into incubators and were fed intravenously, the spokesman said.

Meets Students

JAKARTA (UPI) — President Suharto met with student leaders for two hours behind closed doors yesterday to let them air grievances over conditions in the country.

The students, representing 31 institutions, questioned the president and submitted suggestions.

Close Ranks Call

ATLANTA (UPI) — U.S. Sen Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., said yesterday the United States should "stop trying to be all things to all people" and start thinking more of itself than of other countries.

"We need to do what the Japanese and West Germans have been doing," Talmdge told the Fulton County Grand Jurors Association. "We need to work and produce more, negotiate harder, and develop all our own resources to their fullest potential."

Charges Filed In Foster's Murder

OAKLAND (AP) — Two months after Oakland Schools Supt. Marcus Foster was assassinated, police say they have found the owner of the murder weapon and the suspected headquarters of an organization linked to the shooting.

Joseph Michael Remiro, 27, one of two men arrested after a gunfire exchange with Concord police Thursday, was booked for investigation of murder yesterday after ballistics tests indicated his gun had killed Foster, police said.

Chief Criminologist John Davis said bullets and cartridge casings from Remiro's German-made Walther .380-caliber automatic pistol matched those found in Foster's body and at the slaying scene outside the school administration building Nov. 6.

Police said Remiro, an antiwar activist, purchased the gun in San Leandro last July 19.

He also was booked for investigation of attempted murder in the wounding of Foster's deputy, Robert Blackburn, in the same attack.

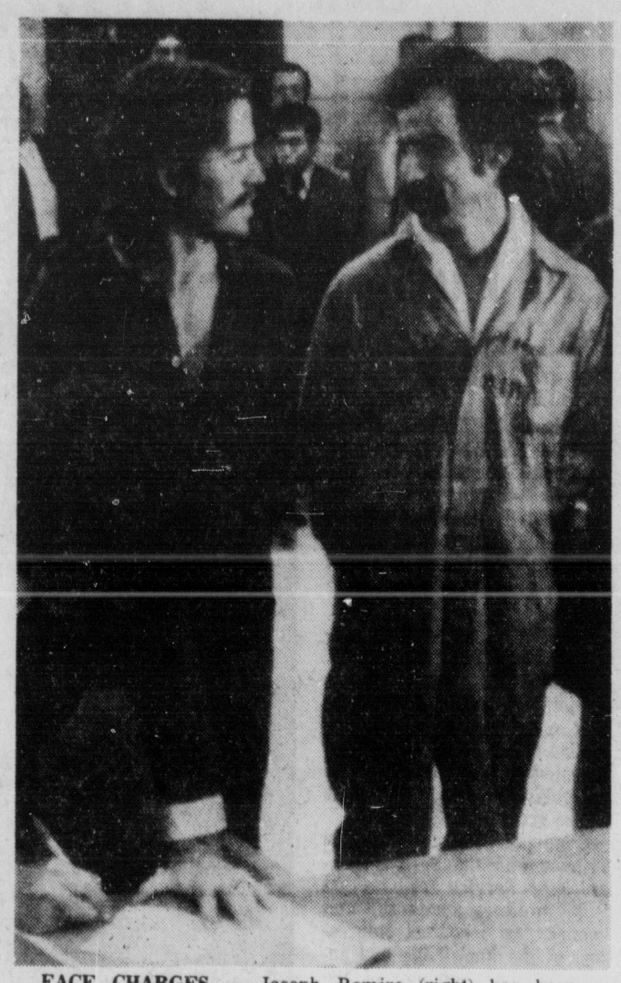
In letters to news media, a group calling itself the Symbionese Liberation Army claimed it killed Foster because he supported repressive policies such as police in schools and student identification cards.

Officials said SLA literature and other evidence was discovered in the van with Remiro, and in a nearby house which police said was set ablaze 16 hours after the arrest.

The gasoline-fed fire apparently was set to destroy evidence at the house in Clayton Valley, just outside Concord, officials said. Little was destroyed because of quick action by the local fire department.

"We have strong reason to believe the occupants of this house were involved in the murder of Marcus Foster," stated Capt. John Lothrop, chief of the Oakland police investigation.

A neighbor, Mrs. Sidney Damstra, told police she knew the house occupants as George and Nancy DeVoto, about 25. She said a cab backed quickly out of the DeVoto garage and sped off just before the fire, but she could not even determine the number of occupants in the car.



FACE CHARGES — Joseph Remiro (right) has been booked for investigation into the murder of Oakland Schools Supt. Marcus Foster. Remiro and his companion, Joseph Little (left) were arrested Thursday for firing at officers after police stopped their van in Concord. Both were booked yesterday at Contra Costa County Courthouse in Martinez on charges of assault with intent to commit murder, stemming from the shoot-out.
(UPI Telephoto)

Despite official silence on findings at the home, the Oakland Tribune reported that evidence included the original copy of a SLA letter to news media claiming responsibility for the shooting, plus revolutionary literature, two pipe bombs, a cache of weapons and an unsent communique No. 3.

Two blocks away from the house, gunshots were traded between Concord police, Remiro, 27, of San Francisco, and Russell Little, 27, of Oakland. Little suffered a minor wound after police stopped their van for a routine traffic check.

The men were held on $250,000 bail each, then were arraigned in Martinez Municipal Court Friday on charges of attempted murder and assault on a police officer. A Contra Costa County Sheriff's office spokesman said they were transferred to San Quentin Prison in Marin County for safekeeping.

Authorities said Remiro has been running the Vietnam Veterans Against the War headquarters in Oakland. But a spokesman for the chapter said Remiro was a former member who has had no contact with the antiwar group for six months.

Among items seized at the fires scene and the homes of Little and Remiro were several typewriters being checked to see if they were used to type SLA communiques.

At Little's home were discovered a .30-caliber M-1 carbine, ammunition, and an electric drill, which one investigator said was important because "a particular drill and a particular bit drilled the holes in the heads of cyanide bullets used in the slaying."

In letters to media, the SLA claimed Foster and Blackburn were sentenced to execution by cyanide-packed bullets. Blackburn survived.

Mixed Bag Of Weather: From Floodwaters To Sleet, Snow

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Floodwaters chased hundreds of families from their homes, sub-zero temperatures froze a wide band of the Midwest and freezing rain or snow plagued much of the rest of the nation early today.

Torrential rains over the past week lifted rivers and streams out of their banks from Pennsylvania to Mississippi.

In southern West Virginia, floodwaters forced evacuation yesterday of more than 300 families in Logan County, site of the 1971 Buffalo Creek flood that claimed 118 lives.

Gov. Arch Moore activated 100 National Guard troops to help people to safety and the Red Cross set up shelters for the evacuated.

The driver and 22 passengers of a Continental Trailways bus climbed through the windows to safety when the bus stalled in two feet of water at the edge of an embankment near Milan, Tenn.

Two tornadoes zipped down near the central Georgia town of Montezuman ripping apart a mobile home, several residences and two pecan orchards. No injuries were reported.

"It (the tornado) was over in a second," Macon County, Ga., Civil Defense Director Clarence Hair said.

Temperatures plummeted to record lows over the Plains and upper Misssissippi Valley. Lincoln, Neb., reported 30 degrees below zero, breaking the all-time reocrd of 29 below.

More snow was dumped over Michigan, the northern Ohio Valley, the Applachians and northern New England. Snow also fell over northwest Texas, and parts of the Pacific Northwest.

Freezing rain and snow plastered western Oregon with a thick coast of ice. Oregon State Police said parts of Interstate 5 were closed near Salem, Ore., because of the number of trucks and cars skidding out of control. Authorities reported hundreds of traffic accidents on the hazardous roads, but said there were no major injuries.

Highway authorities in New York and New England also reported many weather-related traffic accidents because of snow and ice clogged roads.

New England worked toward a weekend recovery after twin storms dumped up to 18 inches of snow and paralyzed most major cities, including Boston.

Early morning temperatures ranged from 32 degrees below zero at Bismark, N. D. to 75 degrees at Key West, Fla.

A Call For Lon Nol To Quit, Leave

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A former prime minister of Cambodia under exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk called on President Lon Nol today to leave the country so peace could be reestablished.

Son Sann, 62, a respected and well-known Cambodian leader, was the first political leader of his stature to call for Lon Nol to leave.

In a speech to students at Phnom Penh University's business college, Son Sann said he sent Lon Nol a letter three days ago urging him to leave Cambodia so the current deadlock between the government and insurgents could be broken.

For the past week, government troops have battled an estimated 3,000 insurgent troops north of Phnom Penh.

Son Sann, considered a neutral in the war between the Cambodian government and the insurgent Communist-led Khmer Rouge guerrillas, has made frequent trips to Paris recently to try to work out a settlement between Lon Nol's government and the exiled Sihanouk who is based in China.

Son Sann outlined a five-point plan for peace in the country, including Lon Nol's voluntary departure to the United States for "medical treatment" and the replacement of Lon Nol by Cheng Heng, vice president of the ruling High Political Council.

Board Seeks Policy On Meditation

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The State Board of Education yesterday directed its legislative committee to come up with a recommendation whether California public school students should be given a minute each day to meditate or pray.

The board referred the matter to the committee at the urging of member Eugene N. Ragle, Auburn, who later said such a policy would allow students one minute to think about whatever they wanted to — including prayers.

An attorney for the board has said such a policy would not violate the U.S. Supreme Court's controversial 1962 decision outlawing prayers in public schools.

Massachusetts adopted a meditation law in 1966 requiring that each school day begin with a one-minute period of silence for meditation. Last year, that legislature added the words "or prayer."

"It hasn't been challenged yet," Ragle said when asked if he thought such a law is constitutional.

The board, with the recommendation of the committee, is expected to vote on the matter during its February meeting. If the board decides such a policy is appropriate, it would then send a resolution to the legislature asking for approval.

James W. Dent, Concord, board member and retired assemblyman, said the committee would take the matter under consideration and should have a recommendation by the next board meeting.

Dent told the board that the constitutionality of the Massachusetts' law has not yet been challenged, but it still could be.

Ragle said, "By this time next month there should be some tentative conclusions."

Board attorney Thomas M. Griffin told the board the meditation period "must not be simply a camouflage for school prayer.

"The teacher must maintain at all times a strict neutrality and indifference to the subject upon which the individual student may choose to meditate," Griffin said in his opinion called for by the board.

San Rafael, air quality yesterday:
Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, light air pollution.

Other areas:
San Francisco, light air pollution.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbono monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources but the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Britain Is Facing New Rail Halt

LONDON (UPI) — Peace prospects faded in Britain's industrial crisis today.

Government officials said the state-run British Railways Board will reject a four-day ultimatum by 29,000 railroad engineers to get peace talks started by Tuesday. They said a total one-day rail shutdown Tuesday appears certain.

The government also is gearing for a fight to the finish with 260,000 coal miners over their crippling two-month-old slowdown, they said.

In this deepening crisis the government warned Britons, already on a three-day week, they must also expect drastic power cuts in order to save fuel stockpiles.

"We may have to take still sterner measures, disrupting for everybody," said Lord Carrington, named secretary for energy by Prime Minister Edward Heath earlier this week.

"There may be new restrictions and larger scale power cuts," said Carrington's deputy, Patrick Jenkin.

A poll by Louis Harris International, published today in the Daily Express, said 63 per cent of those polled believe that the government should stand firm on the present pay and prices policy.

It also said 59 per cent believed the pay offer made to miners was fair and generous and 44 per cent thought there should be a general election now.

A poll published yesterday in the Daily Mail showed that if there were an election now, Heath's Conservatives would win by 3.9 per cent.

SPYING

wanted the United States to "tilt" toward the side of Pakistan in the war, even though the White House was saying publicly that the United States was neutral.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported today that a wave of mutual spying and suspicion between the White House and Pentagon in 1971 resulted in Kissinger ordering a telephone tap in the office of then-Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

"The atmosphere at the White House and the Pentagon at the time, said one source familiar with both agencies, was one of 'endemic paranoia.' The Joint Chiefs of Staff, in a manner reminiscent of 'Seven Days in May,' reportedly felt they had been unfairly and illegally cut off from the decision-making of President Nixon, to whom by law they have the right of personal access," the newspaper reported.

Peninsula Plan To Be Studied Again Monday

The proposed Strawberry master plan will be discussed Monday at 8 p.m. by the Marin County Planning Commission at the Strawberry Recreation Center.

This is the second commission meeting on the plan which resulted from many months of work by the Strawberry Area Community Council and county planners.

Steven Chaum of the county planning department said that the commission probably will discuss the proposed zoning for undeveloped land in Strawberry as well as the plan's transportation element.

Also on the agenda is a proposed land use plan for ring mountain on the Tiburon Peninsula prepared by the Ring Mountain Advisory Committee.

state oil company said the government was considering going into the retail business in the United States by refining its own oil and selling directly to customers.

Holland became the second country in Europe to ration gasoline. Sweden introduced rationing last Tuesday and Norway plans to begin rationing of gasoline on Jan. 25.

Beginning today, Dutch drivers were entitled to a basic ration of four gallons of gasoline per week regardless of the size of their automobiles. Drivers who need their cars for work were given higher allotments. Foreign drivers were exempted.

Arab states banned oil exports to Holland because of its alleged pro-Israeli policies.

In Athens, in addition to the dramatic 65 per cent increase in gasoline prices, the government said the after-lunch siesta, a traditional fixture of Greek life—would be eliminated to take advantage of daylight hours for working time and thereby save electricity.

The government banned lighted signs after 9 p.m., ordered television stations off the air 11:15 p.m. and street lighting cut by half.

An armed masked bandit drove up to a Mill Valley photo outlet last night and escaped with an undetermined amount of cash.

According to police, a young man wearing a bandanna across his face drove into the Fotomat at 621 East Blithedale about 7 p.m., pointed a gun at the attendant, and drove off with the money. No suspect has been found.

ENERGY

that are troubling the American people more and more.

"The people realize that the Arab oil embargo is only one part of a much larger picture — a picture that only an intensive, coordinated and thorough investigation can develop fully."

Both Jackson and O'Neill said much of the public's skepticism stems from a lack of facts on which Congress and the government can make decisions. O'Neill said Congress should require oil companies to disclose secret, internal data about their operations.

Proxmire said in a statement: "The federal government's failure to come up with a coherent, consistent program to meet the energy shortage is rapidly becoming a national economic scandal. We have the appalling spectacle of a government that doesn't even have the basic data: the facts and figures essential for wise policy."

In other developments:

The Exxon Corp. announced it was boosting prices for gasoline by seven-tenths of a cent per gallon and for distillates such as home heating oil by 5.1 cents a gallon effective Saturday because of higher raw material costs.

The National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta cautioned the public to guard against the increased threat of carbon monoxide poisoning from improper use of fireplaces, catalytic heaters, charcoal burners and other home heating devices during the fuel shortage.

Russell Train, director of the Environmental Protection Agency, said after meeting with a delegation of governors that he would seek flexible deadlines for compliance with federal clean air standards to be implemented next year.

CANDOR

he created the plumbers unit to plug leaks of classified information to the news media in 1971. There has been no explanation how this operation got so out of hand that it led to the Ellsberg break-in, nor have questions been put to rest about a White House approach to U.S. District Judge Matthew Byrne, who presided at Ellsberg's Pentagon papers trial, about possible appointment as FBI director.

F. Donald Nixon — The President has said that his brother's telephone was tapped to determine if foreign powers were trying to influence him improperly. There has been no further explanation.

Neither did Operation Candor finally deal with allegations of a series of illegal or irregular Nixon campaign contributions, including the Vesco case, in which two former Cabinet officials — Maurice Stans and John Mitchell — have been indicted for allegedly trying to influence the Securities and Exchange Commission in behalf of financier Robert Vsco, who contributed heavily to Nixon's 1972 campaign.

Special Meeting

Kentfield School District trustees will hold a special meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the district office to continue review of the board's policy handbook.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDRADE, MATTHEW L. — In loving memory of MATTHEW L. ANDRADE, who passed away January 13, 1971.

Today recalls the memory
Of a loved one passed to rest
And those who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best.
You bid none a last farewell,
You said goodby to none,
Your loving heart has ceased to beat,
Your stay on earth was done.
We think of you in silence;
No eyes may see us weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

SADLY MISSED BY GRANDPARENTS MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR RICHMOND AND THE ANDRADE FAMILY

Span Reports A Drop In Traffic — Energy Crunch?

The energy problem apparently is the reason for reductions in commuter and weekend traffic counts on the Golden Gate Bridge, span officials reported yesterday.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said that while it still was too soon to assess the impact of the fuel shortage, figures from 6 to 10 a.m. for Monday and Tuesday were down from the same dates last year.

The count Monday was 18,848, down from the 20,344 on Jan. 7, 1973, which was a Sunday. Tuesday, the count was 18,838, down from last year's 19,446. Traffic across the bridge was down 4.3 per cent over the past six weekends compared to 1972, Luehring said.

Further checks will be made to get more complete figures on what is occurring, he told bridge district directors. The count for the entire month was down 3.93 per cent from last year, he said.

Preliminary figures from state bridges show the cut in traffic may be as high as 6 per cent, he added. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey reported a 7.3 per cent cut in traffic in December, Luehring said.

He also reported a sharp drop in service calls, injuries and fatalities during December, attributing much of the improvement to the new buffer lane on the bridge at night. There were no injuries or fatalities in the four accidents this past December, compared to 10 injuries, and one fatality in 15 accidents in December 1972.

Another statistic reported by Luehring was that a total of 1,019,339 passengers rode the Sausalito ferry during 1973, a drop of only 1,309 from the previous year.

He also told directors that the 600 millionth vehicle crossed the bridge on Dec. 5. It opened to traffic on May 28, 1937.

Golden Gate Bridge District district directors also:

PROP — Accepted a low bid of $3,140 by Coolidge Propeller Co. to replace a propeller recently damaged on the Saudalito ferry.

TUBES — Bought 1,500 six-inch traffic tubes from Production Engineering Ic. of San Rafael for $41,177.

PAINT — Bought 1,000 gallons of self-curing inorganic zinc silicate paint from Ameron Corrosion Control of Brea, Orange County, for $20,755. A lower bid by Engard Coatings Corp. of Huntington Beach was rejected because it did not meet technical specifications.

PLAN — Asked the Legislature to extend to April 1, 1975, the deadline to complete a long-range transit plan. The 1971 Legislature originally ordered the study done by last June, but last year the deadline was postponed to this coming June. The staff said it had been delayed by the need to coordinate the study with other agencies and to get federal approvals for funds.

STUCK — Received staff report the district may have to pay $110,000 toward the long-range study that it had asked the federal government to pay. The money was spent before getting the expenditure approved in Washington.

PROTEST — Received a statement from the Golden Gate Association, a group of commuters, opposing construction of the Larkspur ferry terminal on the ground buses are more efficient users of fuel.

STUDY — Approved an $8,000 contract with the firm of Lee Saylor Inc. of Walnut Creek to check cost construction cost estimates totaling $6.9 million for the Larkspur ferry terminal.

ENGINEER — Appointed Harry D. Reilich of Santa Rosa as district engineer, replacing Robert Shields. Reilich had served as acting engineer since November.

MARIN — Welcomed Marin County Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. as a director, replacing fellow Supervisor Michael Wornum.

Barrows Wants Post Under New Program

Marin County Administrator John F. Barrows wants himself named "project director" of a federally funded inmate rehabilitation program at the minimum security honor farm.

His proposal, contained in a letter signed by his administrative analyst, William J. Finane Jr., will be considered Tuesday by county supervisors. (All letters from Barrows' staff pass over is desk for approval.)

The rehabilitation program, financed by the California Council on Criminal Justice, has been operating since summer and offers training, counseling and schooling to trustee inamtes at the honor farm.

Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos, whose department operated the honor farm until Jan. 1 when it was turned over to the new department of corrections, currently is the project director but he wants out.

Barrows' proposal to make himself administrative head of the program would leave Ralph Merola, director of corrections, as project "coordinator" along with two of his key staff members.

The administrator last week recommended Merola be named project director and a half-time coordinator be hired, resulting in a $10,000 cost to the county because of the rehabilitation grant's complicated funding.

Supervisors rejected that proposal and directed Barrows to come up with a new plan showing no new county employees and slashing county costs.

Barrows said yesterday his proposal minimizes county cost to $2,000. He called it the best of several alternative methods studied.

Bella H. Aaron, director of the county criminal-justice planning agency, who obtained the rehabilitation grant, disagreed with Barrows. She said she opposed Barrows overseeing the program and said the proposal, in effect, would place a department head (Merola) under Brrows.

Molinari To Step Down From Coast Commission

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco Supervisor John L. Molinari yesterday resigned from the North Central Coast Regional Commission, effective Jan. 31.

He reportedly will be replaced by the chairman of the board of supervisors, Dianne Feinstein, a strong conservationist. Molinari has been among a small minority on the 14-member commission generally favoring property rights when they conflicted with conservation goals.

Molinari said his resignation was "not entirely voluntary," but due to new committee duties assigned to him by Mrs. Feinstein in addition to several posts he will continue to hold on other regional agencies. Mrs. Feinstein wanted the seat on the coast commission that went to Molinari 13 months ago.

The commission has jurisdiction over the Marin, Sonoma and San Francisco coasts.

NOTICE OF AMENDMENT TO McATEER-PETRIS ACT REQUIRING FILING OF CLAIMS OF EXEMPTION

Any person who claims an exemption from the permit requirements of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission (BCDC) for a project involving further fill in the Bay must file his claim and supporting documentation with the Commission on or before April 1, 1974, for Commission determination of the validity of those rights. Failure to file a proper claim on or before April 1, 1974, will result in the loss of any exemption rights and subject the project to normal BCDC permit requirements. In cases where the Commission has already determined that a fill project is exempt from the permit requirements of the Commission, a new claim of exemption need not be filed if those persons involved in the project have in their possession a written determination by or on behalf of the Commission that the project is exempt.

Forms for filing claims of exemption will be available at the Commission offices after January 3, 1974. Claims will be accepted for processing only on these forms, and the forms must be completed and submitted with documents supporting the claims as prescribed in Sections 10840 through 10849, inclusive, of the Commission's Administrative Regulations. Because there is a substantial amount of material required of the claimant in supporting a claim of exemption, persons who wish to file a claim should contact the Commission staff in writing as soon as possible for additional information on filing claims. Stabler Was Just On Loan

All You Got To Do Is Ask

MURRAY OLDERMAN

THE TIPOFF:

No matter what you read, Don Shula and Joe Robbie haven't been all that buddy-buddy; otherwise, the Dolphins wouldn't have their practice quarters 20 miles from the downtown office.

Q. I understand that Ken Stabler played with the Spokane Shockers before going to the Raiders. How long was he with the Shockers, and how did the Raiders discover him? — Richard Carnell, Spokane, Wash.

You have your facts a little scrambled. The southpaw quarterback did play a couple of games with the Continental League team in Spokane in 1968. But he was on lend-lease from the Raiders, who were actually paying his salary and just sent him up there for a little playing experience, since he was rusting on their cab squad. You could do that in those days. Ken was actually a well-regarded second draft choice of the Raiders.

Q. What does a player make if his team goes all the way in the NFL, right through a Super Bowl victory? — Jack Mann, Oswego, N.Y.

The explicit figures are $23,500 (broken up into $15,000 for Super Bowl triumph and $8,500 for the conference title.) But in addition he gets a full game salary (depending on the size of his contract) for the division playoff and another full game salary for playing in the College All-Star game next summer. Vivid in memory is the gleeful announcement of tackle Henry Jordan of the Green Bay Packers right after Super Bowl I: "I'm gonna cash my check in $1 bills, put 'em all in the bath tub and just look at them."

Q. How do fellows with poor eyesight manage to play football if they don't wear contact lenses, as I understand a lot of them won't? — Ollie Svendsen, Duluth, Minn.

Guys who don't wear glasses do catch passes. Chuck Foreman of the Minnesota Vikings, rookies of the year candidate, always shuns specs when he's in uniform, though he needs them to drive a car, and doesn't have any trouble following the football. Teammate tackle Grady Alderman used to wear contacts but gave them up as an annoyance. "If you can't see 'em," shrugged Grady, "you can smell 'em." Alex Karras, erstwhile Lion, used to operate by feel as a defensive tackle — and even beat up on his brother Ted once in a game against the Chicago Bears. He thought Ted was on the other side of the line for the Bears.

Q. Do the players selected for the Pro Bowl really try to win like they would in a playoff game? — Randy Morris, Mobile, Ala.

Once they're on the field, there's no doubt pride takes over and the prose put out. But practice sessions for the game are not exactly models of dedication — it's a post-season lark. So they don't come into the game in the best of shape. It has helped to get the game away from the Sunset Strip and move it places like Kansas City this year.

Q. If the Oklahoma football team is on probation and not allowed to appear on national television, why did they appear in their 21-0 Thanksgiving Day victory over Nebraska?

That commitment was made before the Sooners got fouled up in the Kerry Jackson eligibility case and slapped down by the NCAA. The penalty takes effect next fall.

Q. I was readying in George Plimpton's latest book ("Mad Ducks and Bears") how the veterans on pro football teams haze rookies. Does that kind of stuff still go on? — Ed Kerrigan, Pittsburgh, Pa.

You won't believe this, but the old turkey trick at Thanksgiving, a ploy described by Plimpton in which the veterans sic the rookies on an unsuspecting grocery store for their "free" bird, was actually pulled by the Minnesota Vikings this year. Rookie back Brent McClanahan and a couple of others went to the Red Owl for their turkeys. Oh yes, they didn't get them.

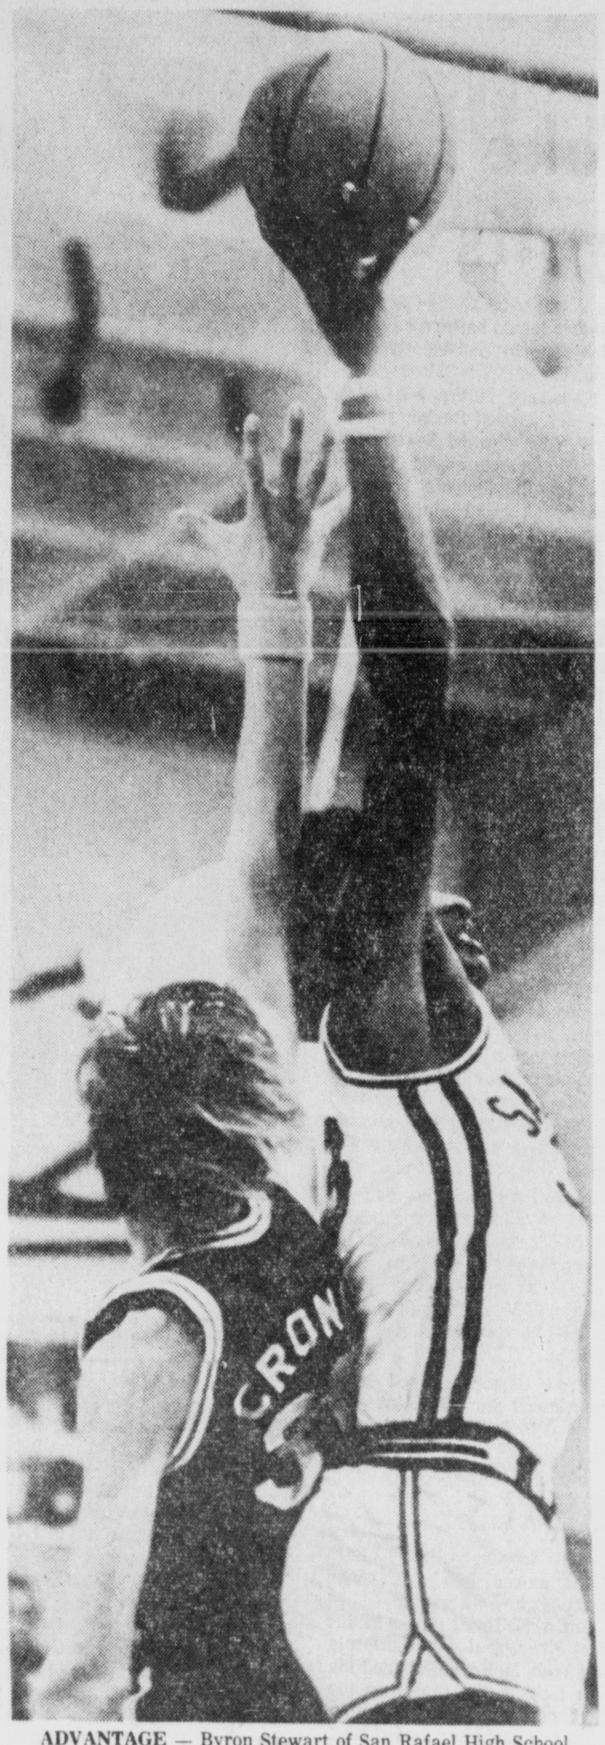
Q. Why do all you sports writers ignore hocky, the most exciting game there is? — Sam Burke, Oakland, Calif.

I'm not sure that it's ignored. But personally, my problem is that I've never seen a goal scored — there's a crowd in front of the net and someone kicks the puck in. I'd like to see them eliminate the blue line completely, a suggestion which horrifies the purists, and have scores like 12-10. It would also mean more breakaways, the most exciting play in the game.

PARTING SHOT:

Source close to the NFL Players Association tells me there are "five chances in six" there will be a players' strike next summer after the collective bargaining agreement expires Jan. 31.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)



ADVANTAGE — Byron Stewart of San Rafael High School stands 6-fee-7, with arms to match, and the advantage was obvious and frustratingly unstoppable to Terra Linda's 6-2 guard Jim Cronin last night. San Rafael beat the Trojans in a Marin County Athletic League basketball game, 71-51.

WEATHER

Problem For Super Bowl

HOUSTON (UPI) — The National Football League likes to think it plans the arrangements for Super Bowl week with the thoroughness, precision and attention to detail that is usually associated with something like a space shot.

But this week there've been a few misfirings.

For example, there were those sparrows in the Minnesota Vikings' locker room.

Now it's the weather—which is one element even the NFL can't control—that is causing headaches for league officials.

Yesterday was a dreary, rainy day in the Houston area with temperatures in the '30s and NFL officials are becoming apprehensive about the possibility of rain tomorrow — despite the optimistic forecast by the weatherman.

The official forecast for tomorrow is for no rain with the temperature in the '50s. But one official quipped, "The weatherman hasn't been right yet this week." Kickoff is set at 12:30 p.m. and will be televised nationally (Channel 5 in the Bay Area).

The irony of the situation is that the NFL passed up the Astrodome—although it was used for the annual gigantic yesterday night pregame party — for Rice Stadium because of its larger seating capacity.

The two teams—the Minnesota Vikings and the Miami Dolphins—went through light drills in the rain yesterday and planned one-hour workouts today on the artificial turf at Rice Stadium.

Manny Fernandez, the Dolphins' defensive tackle who was the hero of last year's Super Bowl, was held out of yesterday's workout because of a high temperature. Of course, wide receiver Paul Warfield was also sidelined because of the pulled hamstring muscle he suffered Wednesday although Don Shula said he is hopeful Warfield can start Sunday.

Shula and Bud Grant of the Vikings, the two opposing coaches, held their final pregame news conferences yesterday and both struck the typical coaches' pose—confident but wary.

Grant said, "They are a team that can be defeated—as we all can."

Shula, whose team is favored by a touchdown in its quest for its second straight Super Bowl title, said, "We're not overconfident. Anybody's who's intelligent has to realize they have a heckuva team."

Shula said he will start Jim Mandich over Marv Fleming at the tight end slot and Lloyd Mumphord over Tim Foley at a cornerback spot. Fleming and Foley lost their jobs when they were injured and haven't been able to win them back yet.

The Dolphin coach said the cast will be taken off Mandich's broken left hand and he will play with it heavily taped. That leaves guard Bob Kuechenberg, who has a cast on his broken left arm, as the only Dolphin who will play with a cast on.

Most of the week, Grant has been doing the complaining and Shula the entertaining with his quips but Grant managed to get in a good story at his news conference.

When he was asked why he's always so impassive on the sidelines, he said, "Oh, that's the reputation the TV directors gave me. When they see Hank Stram pacing, they say, 'Get him,' when they see George Allen cheerleading, they say, 'Get him,' and when they see me standing still, they say, 'Get him.'"

Then he added, "Well, I use a head set and it has a short cord so I can't wander so far. But I've emotions, it's just they're inside."

Pete Rozelle, the NFL commissioner, held his annual Super Bowl news conference and said he'd wait until next week to decide if Grant will be fined for his statements criticizing the team's training facilities.

Rozelle revealed he had been handing out "quite a few" fines this season. The largest was $14,000 to one unnamed club for stashing away players on its roster. A team is legally allowed only 47 players working out on its roster but sometimes teams try to hide another player or two.

The commissioner said he had handed out many fines for "flagrant violations" of the three-yard white stripe around the sidelines. The league has enforced the rule keeping this area clear because players have been injured crashing into people in that area.

Drake Five Turns Back Novato, 59-51

By LEW CODDINGTON

Eight words from Pete Hayward summed it up best. "We kept the big guys out of there," he said.

Drake High School's basketball team, which Hayward coaches, shut off Novato High's strong inside scoring game to post a 59-51 Marin County Athletic League basketball victory last night before about 750 fans at Novato.

The Pirates single-mindedly worked to keep Novato's two exceptional leapers, 6-foot-5 Willie Barnes and 6-2 Curtis Saine, away from short-range scoring opportunities.

"We even had 5-9 guards in there tipping the ball away," exulted Hayward. "The guys really played defense. They knew what they had to do."

The scorer's table looked like a pre-flight check-in counter at San Francisco International as Drake substitutes came and went. Hayward would send in three and four players at a time, leave them in for a couple of minutes, then make more changes.

"Andre Carson (a forward) played his best game of the year," said Hayward, shaking his head over statistics which showed him with only six points and five rebounds.

"Dan Trimble (center), Bruce Katuna (forward) did great jobs. Eddie. Steve Harnsberger." Hayward didn't name the rest of his roster, but he would have been justified in doing so.

Eddie Joe Chavez scored 19 points to lead the way, and Harnsberger added 14. Trimble had only one point but 15 rebounds, leading Drake to a 39-26 edge in that department.

Novato's Saine was held to nine points, and Barnes' 13 came mostly from outside. Mike Moroski, given the ball frequently in the corner after it became obvious the Hornets couldn't get inside, also scored 13.

Novato missed 13 of its first 16 shots and fell behind, 12-6.

The Hornets closed to 20-18, fell back, then closed again to 30-28 before Drake put them away with a 19-6 spurt late in the third period and early in the fourth. Characteristically, six Pirates scored during the burst.

The victory gave defending champion Drake a 2-0 MCAL record and reduced Novato, which had a 9-2 pre-season, to 0-2 in the league.

Stewart Leads San Rafael Win

By DAVE DEL GRANDE

Byron Stewart scored 20 points and grabbed 23 rebounds to lead San Rafael High School to a 71-51 Marin County Athletic League basketball victory over Terra Linda before 1,200 fans at San Rafael last night.

The victory leaves San Rafael tied for the league lead at 2-0, while the Trojans fell to 0-2.

Stewart's 16 points along with the unselfish play of his teammates led San Rafael to a 33-25 halftime lead. San Rafael's first half offensive strategy was to hit Stewart inside and let him fire over the smaller Trojans.

"We felt Byron (Stewart) could get position and some good shots off against their zone," commented San Rafael coach Bret Tovani. "Our ballhandling was excellent (only eight turnovers) and our patience to take only good shots really paid off," he also added.

In the second half it was a different ballgame, though. While Stewart controlled the boards, Steve D'Ambra, who scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half, and James (Pee Wee) White executed a devastating fast break which helped the Bulldogs pull away at the end. During one stretch in the middle of the fourth quarter with San Rafael on top 55-45, the Bulldogs scored on five consecutive fast breaks to ice the game.

For Terra Linda's Trojans it was overall hustle and competitiveness that kept them in the game before the spree. Led by the scoring of senior Brian Morey and junior Doug Carlisle, with 12 and 10 points respectively, the Trojans trailed by only eight after three quarters, only to fall victim to the Bulldogs' fast breaks.

For the game San Rfael hit on 30 of 53 shots for 57 per cent while Terra Linda scored on just 20 of its 47 shots for 43 per cent.

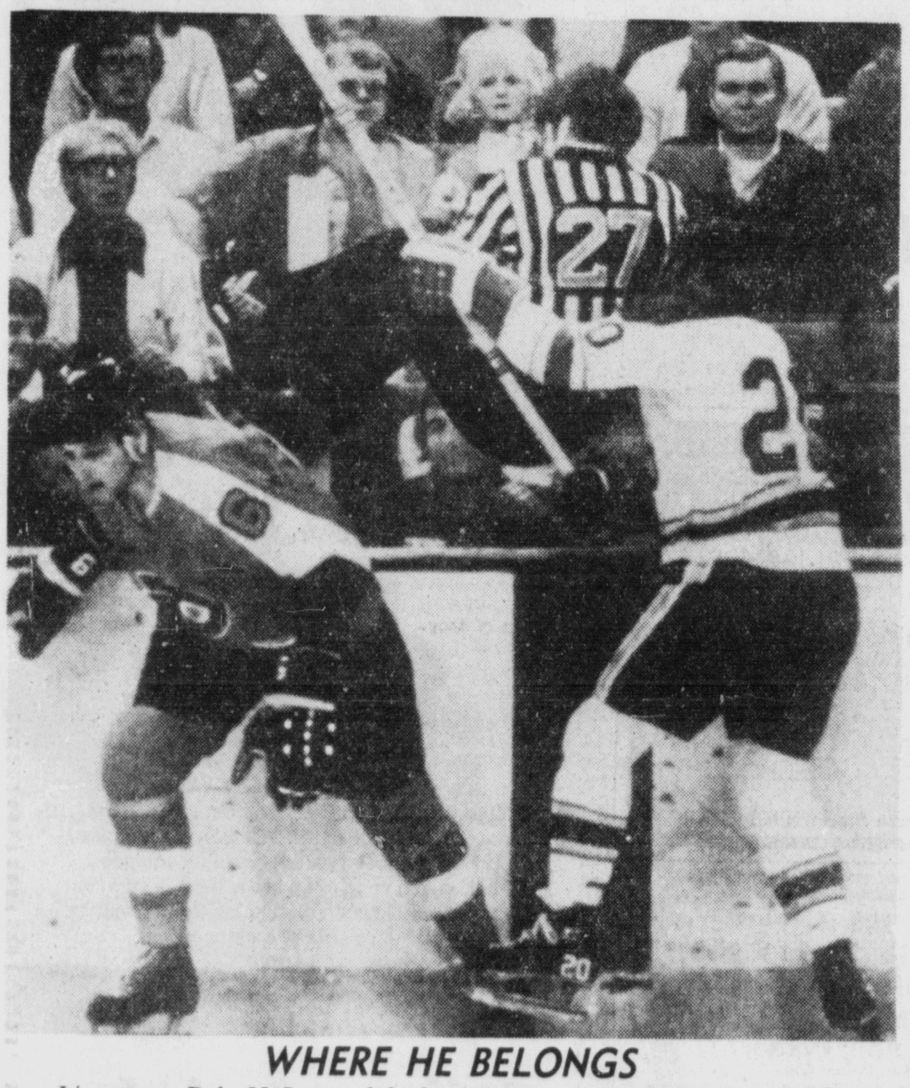
ARNOLD IS LOOKING TO PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Steve Arnold of Corte Madera, a co-founder of the World Football League, was reported to have met Thursday with businessman Bob Hazen and city commissioner Frank Ivancie to talk about a possible franchise in Portland.

The WFL has awarded nine franchises and would like to start next fall with 12.

Arnold said an average attendance of 25,000 is needed to break even. Ivancie was reported to have drawn up plans to improve Civic Stadium here if the football franchise is awarded. One of the options being considered is an umbrella cover.



WHERE HE BELONGS

Linesman Bob McLaren loked like he was jumping into the stands — wouldn't you, if somebody were waving a hockey stick in your face? — but actually he was just climbing high on the boards to avoid the action in last night's National Hockey League game in Atlanta. Philadelphia's Andre Dupont (6) and the Flames' Bryan Hextall (20) battled for a loose puck during Philadelphia's 7-6 victory. See story, page 13.

Redwood Rally Rips San Marin Quintet

By TOM THOMPSON

Extending a three-point halftime edge by sinking 13 of its 26 shots from the floor after intermission, Redwood High School overcame San Marin, 56-43, last night in a Marin County Athletic League basketball game before about 700 fans at the losers' gym.

Redwood out-shot the Mustangs 43 per cent (25 of 57) to 32 per cent (19 for 58) for the evenings, to win its second game in two league starts. San Marin is 0-2.

San Marin stayed close with the visitors, particularly before intermission, keeping within one or three points most of the way. Mustang center Skip Starnes scored 12 of his 18 points in the first two periods to lead his team's early charges, while Randall Miller put through 10 of his 14 for Redwood's first half.

It was a different story after the third quarter's first five minutes. With Redwood leading, 35-30, the Giants rattled off eight unanswered points and led by 13 with five minutes left in the game.

By rarely giving the Mustangs more than one shot from the floor, and only allowing them on the free throw line twice in the second half, the Giants increased the lead even further before winning coach Dick Hart played his reserves.

"Every game counts now," said Hart, whose team is tied for the MCAL lead with San Rafael and Drake. "It's good to win. Starnes is a tough player, but we cut him off in the second half and we shot well."

Redwood center Darrell Elder tied Starnes for game scoring honors with 18 points, while pulling down 11 rebounds. Miller added 13 from the boards. Bruce Smith contributed 15 points for San Marin.

"You just can't win, shooting 32 per cent," losing coach Andy Frauenhofer said.

BASKETBALL

Aroused Tam Tips Wildcats

Playing "an aroused, enthusiastic game of basketball," in the words of coach Bernie Schneider, Tamalpais High School rolled to a 74-59 victory over host Marin Catholic last night in Marin County Athletic League action.

The Indians vaulted out to a 20-10 lead early in the second quarter and never let the host Wildcats catch up. Tam's victory evened both teams' league records at 1-1.

Mike Dinehart scored 24 points and grabbed 14 rebounds for Tam. "He was tremendous," said Schneider, "and not only his scoring. He did a good job of seeing people with five assists."

Post man Hollis Owens and guard Ethan Winterling added 14 points apiece, and Owens snatched 12 rebounds. When Marin Catholic unleashed its full-court press, Dan Lucia and Bill Clarke "handled the ball beautifully. It was a tremendous team effort."

Mike Mahoney led the Marin Wildcats' effort with 16 points, and Terry Ahern contributed 12.

Seals Lose Battle Of NHL Tail-Enders

OAKLAND (UPI) — In the battle of National Hockey League tail-enders, the California Golden Seals came out losers.

After a wild 2-2 first period in which the Seals got two goals and missed 15 other shots, California managed only 11 shots the rest of the way and Vancouver got a second goal from rookie Dennis Ververgaert for a 3-2 Canuck victory last night before about 4900 Coliseum Areana fans.

The two teams entered the contest with 23 points apiece and played about equally throughout, but it was a discouraging loss for the Seals. Vancouver had dropped all eight of its previous road games against Western Division foes and California could

NBA ROUNDUP

Buffalo, Detroit Take Steps Toward Playoffs

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Buffalo Braves and Detroit Pistons, both seeking National Basketball Association wildcard playoff berths, each took another step in that direction last night.

"Defense in the third quarter was the key," said Braves Coach Jack Ramsay after his team whipped the Houston Rockets 117-99. "Defense and the way Jim McMillian and Randy Smith stopped Jack Marin and Calvin Murphy from scoring."

The Braves made the Rockets their sixth straight victim as they posted their 22nd victory of the season to equal last year's number of wins. The triumph also evened Buffalo's record at 22-22 and moved the Atlantic Division third place club two games ahead of Atlanta, runner-up in the Central Division, whom the Braves are battling for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Detroit beat Cleveland 106-96 to improve its record to 28-17, good for only third place in the Midwest Division, but 5 ½ games ahead of Pacific Division runner-up Golden State as the two teams battle for the last playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Los Angeles tripped Boston 111-103, New York downed Seattle 107-98, Milwaukee edged Capital 115-113, Philadelphia whipped Atlanta 121-100 and Kansas City-Omaha downed Phoenix 117-100.

Buffalo broke open its battle with Houston in the third quarter when it outscored the Rockets 43-22. Bob McAdoo, the league's leading scorer, paced all scorers with 30 points while Marin led the Rockets with 24 points, but was held to only six in the key third period.

Curtis Rowe, hitting on 10 of 16 shots, posted his season high of 28 points and Dave Bing, with 10 of 15 from the field, finished with 24 to lead Detroit. Austin Carr, with 10 fourth-quarter points, topped the Cavs with 25 points.

Connie Hawkins exploded for 14 of his 22 points in the third period as Los Angeles stormed from a seven-point halftime deficit to top Boston. The Celtics' John Havlicek scored 26 points, bringing his career total to 20,003—making him just the eighth player in NBA history to reach the 20,000 point plateau.

New York took the lead for good on Walt Frazier's basket with 52 seconds gone in the second quarter and from then on, built up an edge of 17 points, 57-40, at the half enroute to its 10th straight victory over Seattle.

Fred Carter pumped in 30 points and Steve Mix tallied 24 to lead Philadelphia past Atlanta.

PHOENIX LEADER

Wynn Fighting For Tour Life

PHOENIX (UPI) — Bob Wynn is fighting to stay on the pro tour and he took a big step toward that end in the second round of the $150,000 Phoenix Open.

Never a big winner in his three previous years, Wynn now is on the verge of losing his sponsor and needs a victory to assure his expenses for the rest of the season. He moved closer to his goal yesterday when he shot a 67 to grab the lead at seven-under-par 135 for 36-holes.

Wynn said he may lose his sponsor after March, but added, "Maybe he'll stay with me if I play good, but I'm playing now like I'm on my own."

Wynn has never won more than $18,000 in one year.

Closely pursing Wynn was 1971 Phoenix winner Miller Barber, who has two 68s for a 136 total.

Two strokes further back at 138 were six others, including U.S. Open Champion Johnny Miller, Lanny Wadkins, and Mike McCullough, all with two straight rounds of 69. Also in that group were Phil Rodgers, who had the tourney's best round with a 65 yesterday, local golfer Paul Purtzer, who had a 70, and Jim Colbert, 67. Napa's Ron Cerrudo fired a 68 yesterday to make the cut with a 141.

Just making the field of 74 golfers who survived the midway cut was Lee Trevino who hit the cutoff point of 145 with a second round 70.

Ousted were Tom Weiskopf, a four-time winner in 1973, former U.S. Open Champion Orville Moody and Bob Rosburg.

Barber said he would not have his sights set on passing Wynn in the third round.

"I don't try to chase anyone," Barber said. "If you do, you shoot 100. I try to beat the golf course."

Miller, coming off a victory in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am was hopeful of solving putting problems for the final frounds.

"I'm just not making them," Miller said after the second round.

The first round co-leaders, Artie McNickle and Mark Hayes, both shot 72s for a 139 total. Also in that group were John Schroeder, John Mahaffey, Jim Hardy and Hubie Green.

Sonoma Defeats Stanislaus '5'

Sonoma State College extended its home court victory string to 16 games last night with an 89-80 nonconference basketball win over Stanislaus State College before 500 fans in Rohnert Park.

The Cossacks, who resume far Western conference play against visiting Sacramento State College today at 8 p.m., raised their overall mark to 6-6 with the triumph.

Apparently unexcited about the prospect of playing the non-league Warriors, the Cossacks were a little falt except for scoring sprees in both halves that were the difference in the game.

Sonoma played on fairly even terms with Stanislaus for the first 11 minutes of the opening half, but then went on a 9-0 tear and outscored the Warriors 20-4 in the next seven minutes to build up a 19-point margin. Art Shanks foiled this spree with four straight baskets, though, to cut the Cossacks' lead to 11 points at halftime.

Slowly chipping away at the lead, Stanislaus closed the gap to 52-50 with 12 minutes to play, but Sonoma then caught fire and scored 4 points in a matter of minutes to go back on top by a comfortable 16 points.

The Cossacks got a balanced scoring effort with five players in double figures. Steve Tiedeman and Bob Lebrun led with 18 tallies each, Bill Belander put in 17, Tom Fitchie 16 and Dan Heien 11.

Down 19-16 at halftime against the slow down tactics of Sonoma, the Rohnert Park cagers exploded for 37 points in the second half while hitting 52 per cent of its shots from the field.

"I was pleased with the way we played," Rancho Cotate coach Mike Francis commented afterwards. "We were behind by three at halftime, but played our game in the second half and started to put the ball in the hoop."

The Cougars (1-1 in SCL play) were ahead by as much as 18 points in the second half, but committed seven turnovers in the last few minutes of the game to help Sonoma cut the final margin down to eight points.

St. Vincent (1-0 in NCL action) had a surprisingly tough game against Upper Lake, but got 16 second-half points from sophomore forward Jack Overton to beat the Cougars. Overton had his finest game with 18 points and 11 rebounds. Ray Serna added 17 points and Dan Tocchini picked off a game-high 15 rebounds to help pace the Mustangs.

Frazier: Knicks Not Slumping

OAKLAND (UPI) — Some people think the New York Knicks are in a slump, but Walt Frazier is satisfied that his team is doing as well as it is.

The defending National Basketball Association Champs are 27-18 coming into tonight's 8 o'clock game here with a Golden State Warriors team that has won two straight Although New York seems unlikely to catch Boston in the regular standings, it also seems very likely to make it into the playoffs again.

"Injuries and illness have really hurt us," the great Knicks guard said. "I don't think we're going to get 12 men healthy at one time.

"Willis Reed is out for the season. Jerry Lucas has been hurt. Earl the Pearl (Monroe) has been in and out. And now Henry Bibby, Instant Offense we call him, hurt his foot. We've doing pretty good to keep up there."

Meanwhile, on the Warriors side, coach Al Attles said he hoped that two things that blossomed in Thursday's romp over Seattle would continue to bloom—a stout Warrior defense and Joe Ellis.

Should Golden State take the Knicks, it would give them their longest win string since four straight victories late last November.

Ellis played 21 minutes and made 17 points in the Warriors 125-89 stampede over Seattle Thursday, but he is still not happy to be spending most of game time on the bench. "I'm not playing here and I'm not ready to retire." But he adds "I haven't asked to be traded."

Exciting Hockey For Atlanta Fans

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Atlanta's fledgling hockey fans saw the most freewheeling, high scoring game of their team's existence last night. Everything was exciting except the finish.

For two periods, coach Bernie Geoffrion's Flames showed the Philadelphia Flyers why they're the most improved team in hockey and why Atlanta has suddenly gone gaga over the new sport in town.

The Flames jumped off to a 2-0 first period lead and then withstood a five-goal onslaught from the Flyers in the second stanza with four more scores of their own before succumbing in the final period when Gary Dornhoeffer and Cowboy Bill Flett tallied to give the western division-leading Flyers a hard-fought 7-6 victory.

In the only other Nattional Hockey League game, Vancouver edged California 3-2.

In the only World Hockey Association game, Winnipeg beat Edmonton 7-4.

Atlanta and Philadelphia got off a total of 87 shots for the night and the nine goals in the second period ranks as one of the all-time NHL one period highs. Flett, who scored the winning goal with a bullet-line slap shot from 45 feet out, started the Flyers five-goal outburst in the second and was joined in the scoring by Terry Crisp, Rick MacLeish, Joe Watson and Bobby Clarke. Adding to the excitement was the fact that only 13 seconds elapsed between MacLeish's and Watson's goals — thus breaking the previous NHL record of four seconds which had stood for 43 years.

Larry Romanchych, Keith McCreary, John Stewart and Curt Bennett accounted for Atlanta's four goals in the period.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

UCLA, Sans Walton, Cuffs Cal

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Even without Bill Walton, the UCLA Bruins cuffed the California Goden Bears around as though they were cubs.

UCLA was awesome last night in its 92-56 Pacific 8 basketball win over California as brilliant Keith Wilkes hit 24 to pick up the slack caused by Walton's absence with back problems. That gave the Bruins a record 46 conference victories in a row to go with their 86-game win string going into this afternoon's meeting with Stanford.

But coach John Wooden announced that Walton probably still won't be ready for the Jan. 19 battle at second-rated Notre Dame which puts a lot of pressure on tall youngsters Ralph Drollinger and Richard Washington, who hit eight each against the Bears.

Meanwhile, either USC or Oregon would seem to have the next best team in the Pac-8, which could mean that one of them might wind up in the NIT.

The Trojans got 22 points from Clint Chapman last night in outfighting Stanford 64-57 as Rich Kelley had 16 for the Cards. Oregon joined UCLA at 3-0 in the conference standings with a 69-54 win over Washington State. Guards Ronnie Lee and Burt Frederickson combined for 33 points while Cougar freshman center Steve Puipokas had 17.

Oregon State rolled over Washington 87-63 to atone for a loss to the same team in the title game of last month's Far West Classic.

Action tonight finds Cal at USC while the Oregon teams swap foes. The Pacific Coast Athletic Association resumes tonight with Long Beach State at UOP, Long Beach State at San Jose and Santa Barbara at Fresno State.

In the West Coast Athletic Conference scramble, heavily favored Nevada Las Vegas was stunned last night when Craig Casault's layin with 11 seconds to go gave St. Mary's the 69-66 win over the nationally-rated Rebels.

That left the door open for University of San Francisco, which rolled at Pepperdine 73-59 with guard Phil Smith getting 23 and big Kevin Restani 18. Brazil Olympic star Marcos Leite made his first appearance for the Waves and scored six points. Former Redwood High School star John Boro added four points for the Dons.

Santa Clara edged Loyola 75-71 with Vester Robinson scoring 21 and six men hit in double figures as Seattle took Nevada-Reno 80-66.

In the Far West Conference, Arlandos Lee hit 18 to lead Chico State past San Francisco State 89-66 and the Cal Aggies got 19 from Tom Henderson in downing Hawyard State 74-67.

Mark Haddow hit 11 of 16 shots and 26 points as Grand Canyon ran its record to 13-0 with a 77-73 win over Chapman. But Oregon Tech took its first loss after 10 wins in a tough 61-60 defeat at Eastern Washington.

1st Place Is On Line For Marin

First place will be at stake — a fairly common occurence, this time of the season — when Foothill College of Los Altos comes to Kentfield tonight at 8 o'clock to face College of Marin's basketball team.

The visting Owls, in fact, have never lost a Camino Norte Conference game.

Foothill is one of the two new teams in the Camino Norte, and if the Owls are no more respectful of their elders than is Alameda College, Marin is in trouble.

Alameda pressed Marin last Saturday in Kentfield, 55-50. Marin followed that up by escaping from Santa Rosa Junior College Wednesday, 49-44, for a 2-0 Camino Norte record and a 14-game winning streak this year.

Foothill, meanwhile, was dusting off Solano of Suisun City, 76-69, and Alameda, 50-46, for a 2-0 conference mark and 7-7 overall slate.

Although they are new Camino Norte members, the Owls are no strangers to Marin fans. They played the Tars for the championship of last season's College of Marin Invitational and lost, 69-49.

Starr Owns Mark In Passing Accuracy

GREEN BAY (UPI) — Bart Starr once threw 294 consecutive passes for the Green Bay Packers without an interception.

The Packers' quarterback achieved the feat during the 1964-65 seasons.

CASKET OUTLET

Needs Of Pet Owners Filled

"You have given your pet the best in life. You will not want to do less in death."
— From a brochure of the Lawler Manufacturing Co. Montevallo, Ala.

By REBECCA LARSEN

Richard Hayes' casket showroom would fit well in the most opulent mortuary.

Cream-colored brocade covers the walls. Metal stands hold cascades of pink, blue and yellow plastic flowers. Soft golden light from two art deco lamps gleams on tiny satin-lined caskets, each designed to hold the body of a beloved pet.

An upholsterer on East Blithedale Avenue in Mill Valley, Hayes has been selling animal caskets as a sideline for about five years now and estimates he has about eight customers a month.

He smiled while describing his sideline, but on the whole, he thinks he fills a deep and serious need in modern society.

"Any pet that's been with a family for 14 or 15 years is very important to them. It's hard to visualize what some of these pets mean to people," he said.

A middle-aged bachelor and owner of a Pomeranian, Hayes got into pet coffins by accident when he first opened his upholstery shop, Mill Valley Interiors, five years ago. "Years ago, upholsterers used to be coffin-makers. Older people remembered this and when they wanted a casket made for a pet they used to come to me. After a while, I thought, 'Why should I make these up myself, 'I'll order them from the factories where they can do a much better job."

He now features caskets from two firms whose models range in price from about $40 to $400. The cheapest, made of styrofoam, resembles a dimestore picnic cooler lined in satin.

The most expensive model is a miniature of a human casket, a completely metal casket with tufted satin pillow and lining. In between are redwood boxes covered with pink or blue brocade on the outside and satin inside. Many of these, in the medium price range, selling for about $100, are indented to fit a dog or cat's nose and its front and back legs.

The largest sizes available are about four feet long, but Hayes can special order to a dead pet's needs.

The last $400 casket which Hayes sold went to a middle-aged man who wanted to bury his hunting dog. "Middle aged men are my number one customers," he said. "It surprised me at first, but it's not the sweet little old lady who buys one. They're afraid they will look silly, but men are very bold. If they want to spend a dollar, they will do it."

About 60 per cent of his caskets are sold to dogowners, the rest go to cat lovers.

Buyers come from all over Marin and from San Francisco. He thinks he may be one of the few animal casket outlets in the Bay Area. Some customers get his name out of the yellow pages. Others read his brochures in the lobbies of veterinary hospitals. "Many know their pet is going, and while they are still rational, they make arrangements for a casket."

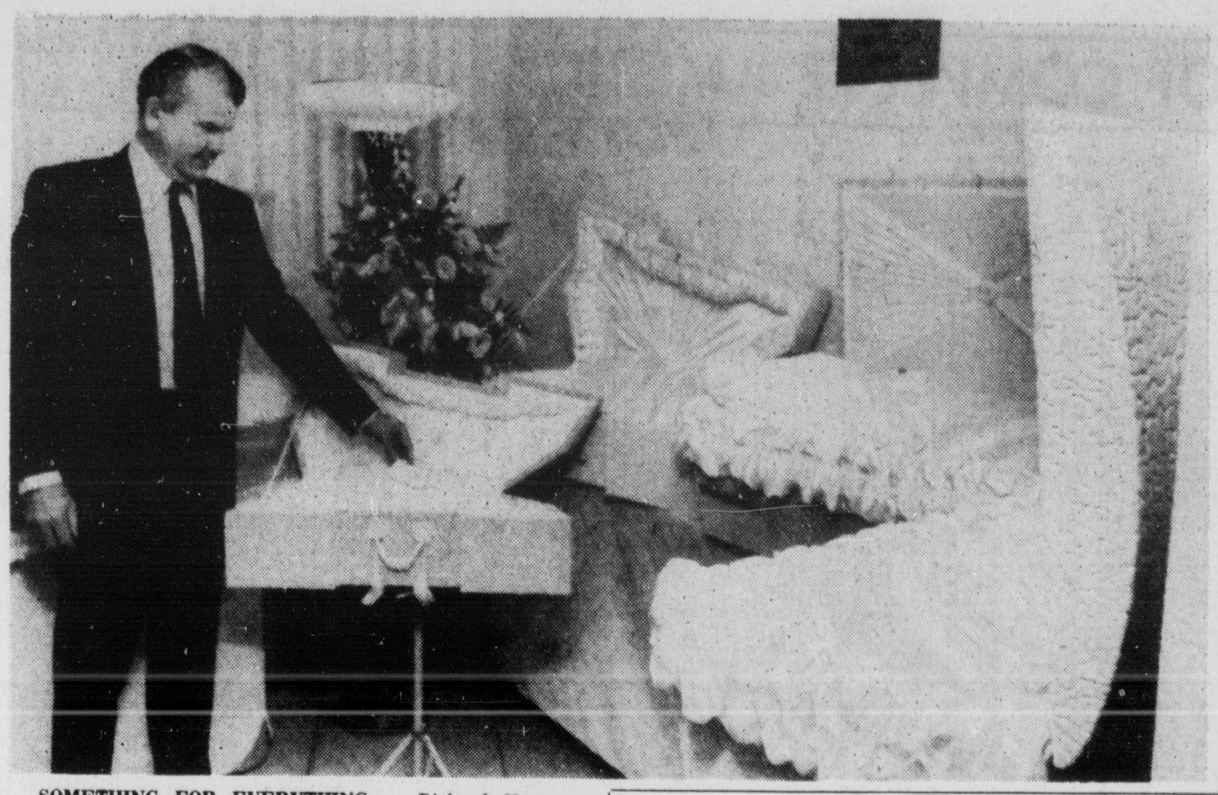
Buying beforehand is what Hayes calls his "pre-need plan."

Besides selling coffins, he has cans of embalming powder to sprinkle on pets and name plates for animal graves. But the rest of the funeral is up to a pet cemetery or the owner.

Hayes said he doesn't enjoy having animal owners pour out their sad stories. "But you do have to be sympathetic and so most of the time they tell me anyway. I'm just like a funeral director, but I don't want to get involved unless I'm forced into it."

Has he ever buried a pet of his own in a casket?

"My little sheepdog, 16 years old, got hit by a car. He got the very best," Hayes said, waving toward a powder blue casket with satin swirled through its interior. "I did it because he was part of the family."



SOMETHING FOR EVERYTHING — Richard Hayes, owner of Mill Valley Interiors, displays some rather unusual caskets — designed for animals — which he sells to bereaved pet owners. His most frequent customers are middle-aged men who pay from about $40 to $400 for the custom canine and cat coffins. (Photo by Jim Kean)

An Answer To Conflict Law Critics

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. George Moscone, whose new conflict-of-interest law has come under increasing attack recently, yesterday lashed out at his critics as "wishful thinkers."

"I suggest this is nothing more than step one" Moscone said of the law that went into effect Jan. 1. He hinted at even tougher legislation later this year.

The Moscone-written bill requires some 7,500 public officials to disclose sources of income and locations of major holdings. Some local officials have resigned rather than comply and are challenging the bill in court as unconstitutionally vague and discriminatory.

"How could a bill written by George Moscone and signed by Ronald Reagan be anything but Utopia?" asked the San Francisco Democrat in a prepared statement.

Moscone said he found it significant that fewer than 1 per cent of the persons affected have resigned in protest over the law.

Waste Disposal Future Course To Be Studied

The future of waste disposal on the Tiburon Peninsula will be discussed Tuesday at 8 p.m. in a joint meeting of the Tiburon Sanitary District and the Belvedere City Council at Belvedere City Hall.

The sanitary district board has been deliberating for months on whether to follow a Southern Marin Subregional Sewerage Agency recommendation that all existing sewer plants in Southern Marin be abandoned and a new plant built at Point San Quentin or whether to keep its present Tiburon plan and improve its level of sewage treatment.

James Murray, sanitary board president, said that the two agencies will discuss engineering reports and financial studies done on the alternatives.

Homeowners Council Is Announced

Homeowners organizations in East San Rafael, following the lead of counterparts in Las Gallinas Valley, have banded together to form the East San Rafael Peninsula Homeowners Council.

The group, like the recently-formed Las Gallinas Valley President Council, is composed of the heads of local homeowners organizations, according to Lee Markrack, president of Loch Lomond Homeowners Association.

No meeting of the new group has been set, he said.

"We just thought it would be better to organize all associations on matters of mutual concern," he said.

The council will eventually represent 1,700 families along the San Pedro Peninsula, he said.

SMALL CARDS

West opens the four of hearts, and East wins with the king. East returns the eight of hearts, and South plays the ten.

West must refuse this trick by playing a low heart. If West wins the second trick, he can get one other heart trick but no more. The defenders will get only three hearts and one club.

KNOWS SITUATION

West knows the situation because East is supposed to return his highest heart. If the eight is East's highest heart, South must have Q-10-9.

So far so good, but there is more to the defense than just unmasking South's deceptive play. The next heart lead must come from East, through South's queen.

DEVELOPS CLUBS

Declarer leads a diamond to dummy and returns a low club. If East plays the three, South will gladly play low, allowing West to win the trick. Later South will cash the ace and king of clubs to establish the rest of the suit.

East foils this plot by playing the nine of the first round of clubs. South must play the ace to keep East out, and now West must drop the queen of clubs. This enables East to win a trick later with the jack of clubs; and a heart lead by East then defeats the contract.

A FOOLISH HOLD

If West foolishly keeps the queen of clubs, he will be allowed to win a trick with it on the second round of clubs. The wrong defender will have the lead, and South will make his contract.

Today is Saturday, Jan. 12, the 12th day of 1974 with 353 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. Technically there is no morning star. The evening stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury.

American patriot and statesman John Hancock was born Jan. 12, 1737.

On this day in history:

In 1932, Mrs. Hattie Carraway, an Arkansas Democrat, became the first woman in any state to be elected to the U.S. Senate.

In 1943, the wartime Office of Price Administration said standard frankfurters would be replaced by "Victory Sausages" consisting of some meat and some soybean meal.

In 1970, Dr. Martin Sweig, suspended administrative assistant to House Speaker John McCormack, was indicted on charges of defrauding federal agencies.

A thought for the day: Early American statesman Daniel Webster said, "Whatever makes men good Christians, makes them good citizens."

Churchmen Awe At Nixon Giving

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

One aspect of President Nixon's tax returns has scandalized many church leaders, including his usually uncritical friend, the Rev. Billy Graham.

The tax returns, covering the years 1969 through 1972, were made public recently as part of Nixon's effort to show that he is financially as clean as a hound's tooth.

Public attention has centered primarily on the relatively small amount of taxes paid by Nixon during those years — mainly as a result of a deduction of $576,000 he claimed for giving his vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

But the most striking thing about the returns to many Christian pastors and laymen was the disclosure that Nixon has been far from open-handed in giving to his church.

The East Whittier Friends Church, a Quaker meeting in Whittier, Calif., is Nixon's home church —the only religious institution in which he has ever held formal membership.

To his church he gave, according to his tax returns, $250 in 1969, nothing in 1970, $1,000 in 1971 and nothing in 1972.

Thus his contributions to his church averaged $315 a year over a four-year period during which his government salary alone —leaving aside expense accounts, capital gains from real estate deals and other sources of income —was $200,000 a year.

That figures out to about one-tenth of 1 per cent of his salary. The biblical norm of a tithe is 10 per cent of income.

Nor was there any evidence that Nixon's small contributions to his church were offset by generosity to other religious or philanthropic institutions.

The only large charitable gift he reported during the four-year period was $4,500 to the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association. The donation was made in 1970, the year Nixon appeared at a Graham crusade in Knoxville, Tenn., There is nothing in the record to show whether he made the contribution in cash (by writing a check) or in "donated services" (such as making a free speech).

The total of all Nixon contributions to religious, charitable, educational and health organizations from 1969 through 1972 came to about $13,500. During that period, his adjusted gross income was $1,122,264. So his total contributions amounted to about one-tenth of one per cent (.001) of income.

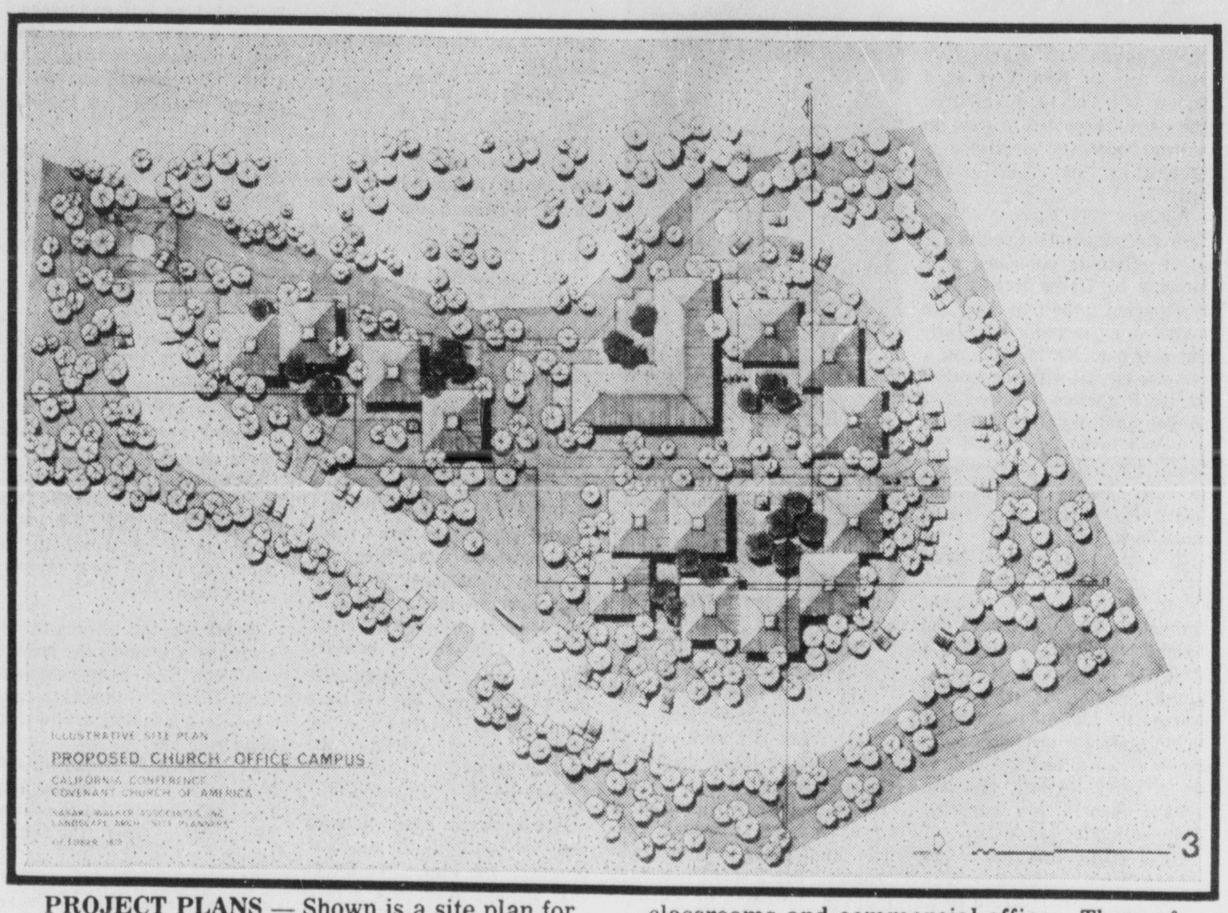
Billy Graham, who has refused to criticize any Nixon action from war to Watergate, was moved to say that he was "surprised at the small amount he reported giving to charities in relation to his total income."

Others were more blunt.

"No church could possibly survive if all of its members followed this type of practice," said the Rev. Dr. Carl McIntire of Collingswood, N.J., well-known conservative radio preacher. "No minister in the country who is a pastor of a church dependent upon the contributions of its members could be other than shocked by what came out."

MARIN COVENANT PROJECT

Church Plans An Unusual Development



PROJECT PLANS — Shown is a site plan for the proposed church-office-campus project of the Marin Covenant Church. The L-shaped building in the center will be occupied by the church, with the pods around it serving as classrooms and commercial offices. Three of the pods will originally be used as classrooms and the others will be converted to church use as needed by letting the leases on those used for commercial purposes expire.

An unusual proposal by a Marin congregation to build both church facilities and additional buildings to be leased initially for commercial uses is "a dream that started here," according to the church's pastor.

Rev. Gary R. Copeland of the Marin Covenant Church told how he and his congreation have been working toward the goal of building a permanent home during the five years of the church's existence.

The Marin Covenant Church, though, like all other new churches, Copeland said, faced the problem of finding a suitable parcel of land, paying for it and then finding the money to construct buildings.

Rather than leave most of the land undeveloped at the start, the congregation and pastor have come up with a scheme to build a whole package at once.

With help from the National Covenant Properties, a financing group set up separately from the national Evangelical Covenant Church, the congregation has purchased a seven-acre site on the east side of the Highway 101 interchange at Lucas Valley Road.

Because the church is county-wide, rather than a local congregation, the property just north of the Chateau Restaurant was selected as a central location.

This week site plans by Sasaki, Walker Associates of Sausalito were released.

They envision an L-shaped building located in the center of a complex which will include 14 other "pods." A driveway winds around the group of buildings with parking on both sides of the street.

The plan is, according to Reverend Copeland, for the church to occupy the L-shaped building, using it both for worship and other activities, and to use three of the pods for classrooms. The other 11 buildings (each with 2,500 square feet) are to be leased as commercial office space.

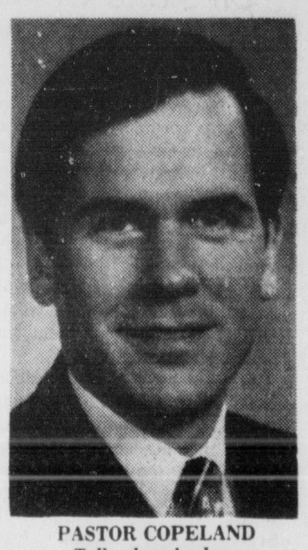
As the church expands, Copeland said, it is envisioned that leases would be allowed to lapse on the other buildings and they would be taken over one at a time by the church. He added, though, that the church expects to rent out various facilities for Monday-Friday use by such groups as day-care centers or nursery schools.

The plan, Copeland said, would allow the church not only to complete all its building at once, but also provide landscaping and "piggy-back" parking.

The landscaping cost, he said, will be financed through the leased buildings and the parking will be used commercially during the week and by church members on Sunday.

"We are very committed to landscaping," Copeland added, pointing out the numerous trees shown on the plans for the project.

In the meantime, the church continues to meet Sundays in the Miller Creek School in Marinwood. There is a church office at 25 Mitchell Boulevard in the Northgate Industrial Section.



PASTOR COPELAND
Tells church plans

The Marin Covenant Church has been in existence since July 1968, when it began meeting in the Lucas Valley home of the Copelands. The congregation has grown from the 18 persons who arrived on the first Sunday to an average of between 175 to 200 who attend now on Sundays. A second pastor, Marv Fogleman, was added to the staff in September 1973.

(The move from Pastor Copeland's home was one that was greeted enthusiastically by him as he and his wife have two small children.)

Although the Covenant church, not as familiar in California as in some parts of the Midwest, had its origin in Sweden when a group of Protestants broke away from the state church, "we try to appeal to people of all national origins," Copeland said.

The denomination is an evangelical faith, with much emphasis on the Bible and less on liturgy than in its parent church, the Lutheran.

In Marin, the new congregation is made up of members about equally divided between the Novato area, Terra Linda-San Rafael and southern Marin, Copeland said.

As for the plans for the new buildings, they have received initial approval to proceed from the San Rafael Planning Commission. An environmental impact report is now being prepared and the church's application for rezoning and a use permit are on file with the city.

"We have found no resistance from homeowners' groups" in the area to the proposal, Copeland said.

He hopes the church can proceed this year with the plans which will eventually end in a "mini-campus" of buildings and landscaping atop the hill.

Quakers Want Nixon Out Of Office

NEW YORK (AP) — In the light of their particular religious links to President Richard Nixon, Quakers have been among the most outspoken of church groups in urging impeachment proceedings on his conduct, or his resignation.

Other religious bodies generally have avoided this sort of specific demand. But a growing number of Quaker meetings have issued such calls to him as a brother sharing their tradition.

"They feel a special responsibility in the matter because of his background as a Quaker," says Walter Ludwig, of Yonkers, N.Y., legislative committee chairman of the New York Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends.

Among the latest of the Quaker groups taking such a stand was the Stanford-Greenwich, Conn., meeting, which late last month appealed to the President as a fellow Quaker to resign from office.

Citing his Quaker background, the meeting said there appeared to be "serious discrepancies" between traditions he would be expected to respect and actions for which he was responsible, citing a list of them, and urging him to resign.

"We feel tender toward you in the moral dilemma in which you have placed yourself, and sympathize with you in your pain," the meeting added.

"However difficult your resignation may be to you personally, it would aid in dispelling the atmosphere of corruption in our national government. We pray that the power of light will give you courage and consolation."

Several other Quaker meetings, including those in Baltimore, Columbia and Adelphi, Md., have backed impeachment proceedings against the President.

Although many other church bodies have debated the issue, they mostly have refrained from demanding impeachment steps. Only sub-units of the United Methodist Church have done so among major denominations.

Most of them have stressed the need for national repentence and moral renewal. Some Quaker meetings also similarly have shunned advocating impeachment procedures.

Baptists To Be Told About Jews For Jesus

Moishe Rosen, spokesman for Jews for Jesus, will speak at the First Baptist Church at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The Jews for Jesus movement grew out of the Jesus revolution which began in the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco in 1966. When "flower children" began turning from drugs to Christ, several were young Jews. When these Jewish hippies turned to Christ, instead of abandoning their ancestral religion, their interest in their own Jewish heritage and culture increased.

Between 1956 and 1970, Rosen was minister to the two largest Hebrew Christian congregations in the country — the Beth Sar Shalom Hebrew Christian Fellowships in Hollywood and New York City. Sponsored by that organization, he left his position in New York to begin a ministry in San Francisco to meet the spiritual needs of the young Christian Jews. In September, 1973, he terminated his employment with the Beth Sar Shalom Fellowship to devote his ministry to the Jews for Jesus movement.

Jews for Jesus was a slogan to proclaim an identity. Rosen believes that when a Jew accepts Christ, even if he is baptized and a member of a church, he does not cease to be a Jew.

The Jews for Jesus observe many of the Jewish traditions and customs. Most attend synagogue as regularly as other Jews, yet they manage full participation in local churches.

In doctrine, Jews for Jesus are fully Christian; yet in culture and orientation, they not only continue with their Jewishness but seek to nourish these elements of their own lives which are Jewish.

Most of the young people involved in the Jews for Jesus headquarters support themselves in secular jobs while giving at least 25 hours a week for the volunteer work of writing and distributing pamphlets, preaching on street corners and providing instruction for young Jews and Gentiles who want to know about Christ.

MOISHE ROSEN
To speak tomorrow

In the past year, rallies at Madison Square Garden in New York and McCormick Place in Chicago, which featured Rosen as the principal speaker, were attended by thousands.

Rosen has been interviewed on numerous television and radio programs, has written more than 50 simple, illustrated pamphlets called "broadsides," and authored numerous articles and is a frequent contributor to religious magazines.

He has written two books — one on the history of the Jews for Jesus which is published by Fleming Revell, and the other a collection of witticisms and Jewish proverbs titled "The Sayings of Chairman Moishe," published by Creation House.

Rosen and his wife, who is also Jewish, reside with their two daughters in San Rafael.

Prior to that he received his bachelor of divinity degree from Chicago's McCormick Theological Seminary and served parishes in Minneapolis and Chicago. He will talk on the future of the churches.

Friday, Louis Cobbs, secretary for missionary personnel for the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, will speak on "The Glory of His Call."

Bob Hughes, Dixie Hunke, John Oliver and Berta Ozeran make up the drama group, "Two By Two." Hughes, director of the group, wrote the sketches. Each will take from five to seven minutes and will dramatize the life of a New Testament character. The story of Stephen will be presented Tuesday in "Emphasize People." The woman at the well is dramatized in Wednesday's sketch, "The Life Changer," "A Constant Miracle" will be presented Thursday, dramatizing the story of Lydia. Friday's presentation, "A Wrestling Match," dramatizes Phillip.

The music group, "The Winds of Change," is under the direction of student, Tom de Graaf. The group will provide two musical specials in each chapel service. Soloists in the group include de Graaf, his wife Shelley and Phil Nall. Other members are Dixie Hunke, Paula MacDonald and Diana Rieck.

World Mission Week will be concluded at the seminary when over 300 college and college-age young people arrive for the Golden Gate Mission Conference. This weekend event features guest speakers, seminars and worship and social hours.

Work Under Way For Commission On Status Of Women In Marin

By BARBARA HOSMER

Following in the footsteps of women in Santa Cruz and Santa Clara counties, a group of Marin women has been meeting the past month to consider proposing a County Commission on the Status of Women in Marin.

Representatives from various established women's groups here have participated in three meetings so far to mull over the purpose of such a commission, which would somewhat parallel locally the State Commission on the Status of Women to gather facts on California women's needs and point them out to the governmental bodies.

A whole bevy of Marin clubs have been contacted for their interest and support, ranging from the leagues of women voters, the university women, through the women's service clubs, the Tamalpais High School District women's task force, the Marin Women's Political Caucus, Marin NOW and many others. The women's support is there, says Glenna Shelby, Marin Business and Professional Women's Club president who represents the Soroptimist Club on the committee. Currently the ad hoc group is polishing up the idea on paper and taking further soundings in the county.

If such a commission materializes, it will have its work cut out for it; and if not, at least the ideas for it has brought together women's groups to find they have similar concerns over women's needs. A tentative coalition of women's groups which began last year with the Aug. 26 celebration and over some issues looks to be further cemented this year in Marin.

NOW THAT the last of the sugarplums is eaten, it's a good time to look at some 1973 fallout that is more lasting. Several new laws affecting California women's legal status have gone into effect this month, bringing California law into better alignment with its ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment in 1972.

Now protective labor laws, which only covered women and minors, will be extended to men workers.

The newly established State Joint Committee on Legal Equality is given the job of combing state law and department guidelines for sex discrimination and recommending changes, a far-reaching piece of work.

A new credit law gives married women equal credit rights, allowing wives to engage in credit transactions in their own names without their husbands' consent. It prohibits denial of credit to a wife if her earnings kept separate from her husband's or separate property are enough that a man having the same amount would receive credit. And the community property is liable for a wife's contracts made after marriage if the couple's property is comingled into community property.

Pregnant employees may collect disability benefits for up to 26 weeks with doctor's certification of abnormal or disabling complications stemming from pregnancy. And unemployment disability insurance benefits are extended to pregnant workers.

Another new law requires that social science courses in schools study the role and contributions of women, so parents may want to check their children's schoolrooms for enforcement.

A new tax law allows heads of households to be taxed at the same rate as married couples filing joint returns. This will mean a tax reduction for many widowed and divorced women with dependent children, who as a group have been low on the economic totem pole.

And, of course, the community property law revision will go into effect next year.

PUBLISHER LAUDS EFFORT

Former Marinite Writes A Cookbook

MARILYN McCLENAHAN
A new cookbook

When Marilyn Van Syckel McClenahan left Marin five years ago for New York as a widow with two small children, she hardly expected to wind up writing what her publisher is tabbing its "big book for the year."

But her "The Epicure's Very Low Carbohydrate Cookbook," to be officially published next Monday by David McKay Co., is expected to be that, said the author a bit incredulously. During a trip to Marin while on a few weeks visit with her mother in San Francisco, Marilyn Van Syckel said that her book is expected to be the needed followup for weight maintenance to "Dr. Atkins Diet Revolution," the recent best seller from McKay.

It came about some three years ago when a New York friend wanted to lose weight through something like "The Drinking Man's Diet" and keep it off. Marilyn Van Syckel, a home economist who had worked for Life magazine prior to her marriage and subsequent move to Ross, had the idea to do a book, because she had always favored low carbohydrate eating for her family.

HER IDEA was for a low carbohydrate cookbook — not a "very low" carbohydrate cookbook — but the Dr. (Robert C.) Atkins diet came out and her publisher got her together with him.

"Dr. Atkins pooh-poohed that it would be low carbohydrate so I took things like rice or noodles out," explained Miss Van Syckel. "But if I were serving them I would leave them in," she remarked.

"The publisher asked for a bread chapter. I thought 'No way am I going to do a bread chapter,' but I spent two days making batches of cottage cheese and soya powder to freeze or let set. Then I found that the children had come home with friends and were eating it."

Actually she took Dr. Atkins' basic bread recipe, changed the proportion, and tried it in smaller amounts such as muffins, so it wouldn't have to be sliced. It doesn't slice well, she said. "But I wouldn't make them," she confided.

The dessert chapter was the hardest, she found. "I hate the taste of sugar substitutes, so the recipes call for sugar," she explained.

MARILYN VAN SYCKEL said that her book is not for weight loss, but for maintenance. Often the recipes use cream and other fatty foods.

"I'm not of the age when I am concerned with cholesterol. But I do think this whole generation eats too much sugar . . . For our own dinner, I put in the starch — the rice or noodles. But we don't eat candy. We don't eat dessert. We will have some vanilla ice cream in the freezer — it lasts a month," she said of herself and son Terry, 12, and daughter, Barbara 10.

People really have changed their way of life in the past few decades, she said. "We forget that our dads pushed a mower —now we hire it done or have an electrical machine. When I was a kid we walked to school. There were few two-car families, and mother walked to the store," she pointed out, recalling her childhood in Philadelphia.

"I would like to see home economists re-evaluate carbohydrate charts. They haven't been since about the '30s.

"I don't think we're food nuts," she said.

While married to the late Dick McClenahan, Marilyn lived in Ross for about five years, and they loved to entertain at dinners. An advertising executive with Campbell-Ewald in San Francisco, her husband really inspired her to learn to cook gourmet dishes,she said.

"He'd say his favorite was such-and-such, and I'd learn to make it. Once a month, or every two weeks, we'd have big gangs for dinner."

MOST OF the recipes in her book are standards she collected from San Francisco and New York restaurants and which she adapted to low carbohydrate use.

"I went to 20 restaurants in New York and got menus, laid them all out on the floor and found they have the same things."

Marilyn Van Syckel majored in home economics at Drexel Institute in Philadelphia, has lived in France, Gstaad, Switzerland, and in Italy and learned to cook the local cuisine. "But Italian cooking comes naturally."

During her five years in Marin, Marilyn and her husband, along with several other couples, founded the Marin Montessori School, and she worked on the headlands committee for Marincello. Now she and the children spend summers and weekends at Fisher's Island, off Connecticut, taking great delight in musseling daily at mussel beds and clamming.

"We have people come every weekend and every guest has different suggestions for cooking mussels — white wine — a bayleaf, stirring in sour cream . . ."

Writing a book was very time consuming and a solitary thing, she found. "When you're writing a book you have no social contacts. I have many friends who are writers who have never done books." She said she'd never do another.

But she does hope her book will help weight maintenance and diabetics, who can't eat much carbohydrate.

Women Told To Stop Thinking About Selves As Half Persons

By PAT BALMES

"Understand really where your situation is. Most people do not do this, neither men nor women. We are unaware of the options available to us. We sleepwalk our way through life, unaware of the world outside us which is conducive to growth," says marriage counselor Mel Krantzler.

Author of the new book "Creative Divorce," Krantzler spoke on "The Modern Woman, a Half Person or Whole?" Thursday morning for Belvedere and Tiburon women gathered at Community Congregational Church in Tiburon. His was the first of five Thursday talks about women and their opportunities.

Unless people are challenged they do not grow, and there is no excitement in their lives. Happiness comes in the struggle to achieve themselves. The overwhelming majority only stretch themselves to 5 per cent of their potential; they are half people, he said.

Krantzler became personally aware of a housewife's dependence on her husband when the author stayed home for three and a half months working on his book.

"I lived in the house like a housewife, writing every day, deliberately canceling my entire practice, as well as phone calls and dinner dates," he said.

HE TOLD his amused audience that, seeing no grownups all day, he began to feel lonely, abandoned and thought, "Poor me, no grownup to talk to." He waited eagerly for his wife to come home to tell her about what he had accomplished, and if she came home late he was irritated.

"When the book was finished I went back to my exciting counseling work like a bat out of hell," he said.

Men are totally unaware of this dependency, the counselor said. That experience taught him what women go through. He can sense the enormous hostility women feel against society, against men. But their restricted life is not men's fault, he stated.

"If you have a restricted life, enormous levels of your personality are unused. You are a half person," he said. A half person is unaware of what is going on within herself. Beyond constricting roles, she thinks she is nothing, Krantzler said.

A recently divorced woman told the counselor that her former husband was her better half and that she would feel like a half person until she found another man. He pointed out to her that she was also a person of education, artistic talent, skilled in business, a mother and an adventuress. She was wrong to consider herself solely a wife, thinking that without a house and a husband she was no longer a person. She accepts only one or two aspects of her whole personality in doing so, he said.

FOR A healthier relationship between the sexes, the counselor advised people to give up mind-reading and take up communicating to find out where their mates are. Some men feel trapped as money-making machines, he told the women.

"We must learn that life must be more than sheer Puritan effort, just work at home or at the office and to die bitterly," he said.

One woman in the audience asked how to make her husband understand her. Krantzler replied that the answer is difficult. Intimacy makes people think they know where their mate is. "Take the risk of openness to let the other person know where you are at and check out your husband," he said.

In the United States we are a group of adolescents; we have not adjusted to demands of modern life, Krantzler stated. There are no instant answers. We have to earn our way to a relationship with another person, he said.

"Emotional survival depends on ourselves. The best helping hand is at the end of our own arm," said Krantzler.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

A Mill Valley Family Holidays In Mazatlan

By MOLLY MARIN

Chilly Marinites may well envy the Herbert L. Marsh family of Mill Valley who spent three weeks in Mazatlan, Mexico, returning the first of the year.

Mrs. Marsh's mother, Mrs. L. F. Morel is a permanent resident of Mazatlan and was hostess to a family group of 21 during the holidays. The Marsh children, Edward, 15, Lyn, 13, and Gail, 11, were in the family group and Marsh's mother, Mrs. H. B. Marsh of Novato accompanied them. Joan Marsh's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morel, who also live in Mazatlan, entertained the visitors, too.

MR. AND MRS. Wyman Hicks of Sausalito spent two weeks in Hawaii, enjoying the beaches of Kauai. They returned to chilly Marin last week.

Anne Hicks is the director of the Marin Child Development Center, and Wyman is professor of management at Sonoma State College.

THE MARIN Symphony Auxiliary is presenting a free, public preview of the Jan. 22 Marin Symphony concert on Friday at 11 a.m. at Dominican College.

Speaker will be Richard Howe, dean of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, who will discuss the music of Ravel, Rodrigo and Brahms, which will be played by classical guitarist George Sakellariou, featured soloist at the concert.

Sherry will be served following Howe's talk.

TWO MARIN County American Field Service students returned today from a three day excursion to the University of California at Davis and a visit to Sacramento. Yoshi Kasuga of Japan is spending the year in San Rafael with the L. J. Gilliland family, and Zvonko Krstevski of Yugoslavia, is staying with the family of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lesko in Greenbrae.

The excursion is sponsored by the U.C. Davis AFS Returnee's Club. The visitors stayed in homes in the state capital one night after touring points of interest in the capital and meeting legislators. In the latter part of their visit they stayed in dormitories on the campus with other AFS students from Northern California.

BETSY STOLTE left Jan. 3 for Stanford University's campus at Stuttgart, Germany, where the 19-year-old sophomore will study German language, politics, history and economics. She will return to Belvedere in June.

While at Stuttgart she will attend classes four days a week, live in an all-girl dormitory and use the long weekends for meeting local people and travel. Regular field trips to Rome and Berlin are planned.

Betsy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Stolte of Belvedere. She studied French while attending Marin Country Day School and the Katharine Branson School. Now an industrial engineering student at Stanford's Palo Alto campus, Betsy believes that engineering schools are eager to have girls, according to her mother.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

No Self Pity Is Needed For Maintaining Clean Relationship

RAP:

"Disillusioned Girls" who blame their unpopularity on the fact that they're virgins are almost as wrong as the girls who insist they're the school super-cools because they put out to every guy.

Certain types of boys will date only girls they can score with, but on the other hand, a lot of guys would never take a chance with a put-out — and VD isn't the only reason. They just don't want anything that easy and over-used.

Making a big issue over complete virginity is dumb, too. A lot of girls have had one experience or one affair, and then they decide it's better to wait for real love, so they revert back to "as was." Why should they be classified with the bed-hoppers? I'd call them "now-virgins" and consider them in the hold-out class.

As you two said, it's the way a girl views herself that counts, not the unimportant fact that she had a small physical experience, now over and done with.

The girl I'm dating is a "now-virgin" and I respect her for it. When we both believe we are sincerely and lastingly in love, maybe her status will change, but I'm — NOT PUSHING

RAP:

"Disillusioned Girl's" description of "what Is a virgin?" needs a rebuttal, so here's mine:

A virgin is one who knows what's happening and practically everyone it's happening to.

She is a girl who treasures love and life. She's not disturbed by remarks about her because she knows many are made in envy.

A virgin doesn't brag about her virginity, yet she doesn't feel she must deny it either.

She doesn't count the days and hope and pray she doesn't miss her period.

She needn't wonder if a guy likes her or is he just using her? She doesn't mistake sex for love.

A virgin can have a wonderful relationship with a guy — out of bed.

She's the one whose parents, friends and relatives love her and demonstrated their love so she doesn't think she must "earn" it any way she can, with whatever guy comes along.

Most of all, though:

A virgin looks at her friend who had a shotgun wedding and is now divorced. . . .

Or her sister who had to give up her baby. . .

Or her other friend who kept hers and is now living for the day when she and her guy can "get things together."

Or the girl who had an abortion. (How could she call it "making love" if she can kill the result of that love?)

A virgin looks at these people and thanks God. See, a virgin isn't scared, she's sure.

She knows that when she finally makes love to a guy, whether she's married or not, it will be because they are both deeply in love with each other and willing to commit their lives to that love. — ELLEN

SEW SIMPLE

Reward Of Home Sewing: Easy, Economical And Fun

By EUNICE FARMER
Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

With the New Year, let's do the things we have promised ourselves in the past and didn't get around to. How often I've heard the remark, "I really wish I could sew," and I always say, "You can." It's just a matter of making up your mind to do it — no one was born knowing how.

This is a perfect time of year to take some lessons. If you already sew, include some new techniques. Find the best school available in your area, preferably one that has small classes where it is possible to have more individual attention. However, if the teacher is knowledgeable and knows how to teach, she can manage a large class too.

The reasons for sewing are many. You have hours and hours of pleasure and the savings of many dollars, freedom of choice of what to make, your own choice of fabric — in other words, whatever pleases you, your way of life and your figure. With the high cost of living in every area of our lives, this is one way we can save more money for other essentials.

This is the time of year we need a lift, after the holidays are over and before spring is here. Make your hours pay off, and remember, I am here beside you, willing and anxious to help you with your new adventure. Please write to me, in care of the Independent-Journal, and I will try to answer all letters.

DEAR EUNICE,

I made a beautiful wool knit pant suit about two years ago. The jacket is still perfect, but the legs of the pants are too narrow and definitely out of style. Is there any way I can add to the pants to make the legs straighter? I have some of the knit left over and it doesn't seem to have changed color.

MRS. E.E.H.

DEAR MRS. E.E.H.,

One of my customers showed me a pair of slacks she actually changed because the legs were too narrow, and I must admit that if she hadn't told me, I would never have noticed it. She is getting a lot more wear from her pants.

Open the inseams of the legs, from the knee to the lower edge of the pants. Cut an elongated triangle from the knit you have left, possibly about 3 to 4 inches wide at the hem, tapering to nothing just about the knee area. If your triangle is shorter, the piece you have added will give too much of a flared look; the more gradual the triangle, the more it will be unnoticed. Attach one side of the triangle to one side of the seam, the other to the other seam, ending as gradually as possible.

Of course my directions must be rather general since I haven't seen each and every possibility you might be faced with. It is sure worth a try however, since you can't wear the pants the way they are and feel comfortable.

DEAR EUNICE,

Please tell me why the patterns have changed. Now I see all kinds of new measurements for the metric system that have me very confused. I hate it.

MRS. A. C.

DEAR MRS. A.C.,

The metric system of measuring is on its way, and although it won't be changed over completely for 10 years, pattern companies are one of the first to begin giving you both measurements so that you will gradually become familiar with it.

This is a system of measure that we have inherited from the English, and it is actually used and accepted around the world with the exception of the United States and Canada. I have to admit, it's been a long time since I went to school and anything as new as this frightens me a little too. However, everyone claims it will be very simple and we'll catch on quickly if we don't fight it.

For the time being, you can be sure that all pattern companies will still use the yards, and inches we are familiar with (the metric system is printed right next to them). So relax, it won't concern you for a long time. We should be glad that the pattern companies are aware of this and preparing us for it well ahead of time instead of popping up with the changes overnight.

MRS. M.H.H. SAYS:

I've had trouble with skipped stitches sewing on tricot and lightweight polyesters and nylons. Today, I covered the bottom of the straight stitching presser foot with masking tape and not one skipped stitch. I know many others have had this unhappy experience too, so please ask them to try this practical idea.

DEAR MRS. M.H.H.,

Thanks for any suggestions that might help others. What works for one, doesn't always work for others, but it's certainly worth a try. It's ideas you all send to me that tend to make "home sewers" one of the nicest group of gals around.

ART REVIEW

Student Show Is Exciting

By ADA GARFINKEL

Subtle wit, fastidious workmanship and personal viewpoints mark the art student exhibit now showing in the College of Marin's Fine Arts Gallery.

Some of the artists engage in spoofs or "put-ons," and other works depict states of mind or being.

Jack Scott's painting "The Nature of Influence" slyly spoofs the art department's emphasis on the separate studies of figure, still-life, and landscape, by combining them interchangeably in the currently favored "splintered-realism" style.

"Photo-realism" — the process of painting from a photographic likeness or illustration — is effectively used by Marion Elkjer to present her dashing "1930 Cadillac Sports Car," and by Edwin Martin in his ethnic portrait entitled "Mountain Man-American Mask."

Richard Standard's two intent musicians, foreshortened and huddled over their instruments, are sculpturally outlined in the bright light and cast shadows of his painting and seem to move forward into the space of the audience.

Evelyn Ryan's painting of huge boulders and airless sky and James Marc Jr.'s "Landscape for Anxiety" are both unusual and personal visions. And another kind of reality is seen in the supra-real perfectionism of Catherine Atkinson's monumental fountain pen in a super-clean, unoccupied landscape.

Puns and satire and some handsomely sketched complexities come from the drawing board of Robert Bradley Johnson in "Presidential Papers Aren't Pedigreed Enough," "Working To Your Wit's End" and "The Painter Is Paid Too Late."

The smallish sculpture display includes Melisa Panages' "Humble Abode" — a large, three-story, ceramic "fairy-tale gingerbread-house," and Miles Babcock's gigantic ceramic cricket, Wendi Kallin's woven textile "The Eye of the Scorpion" and Christine Rutzen's floor-piece, a pair of immense knitting needles of cloth. Also a modular construction made jointly by David Berger and Mary January.

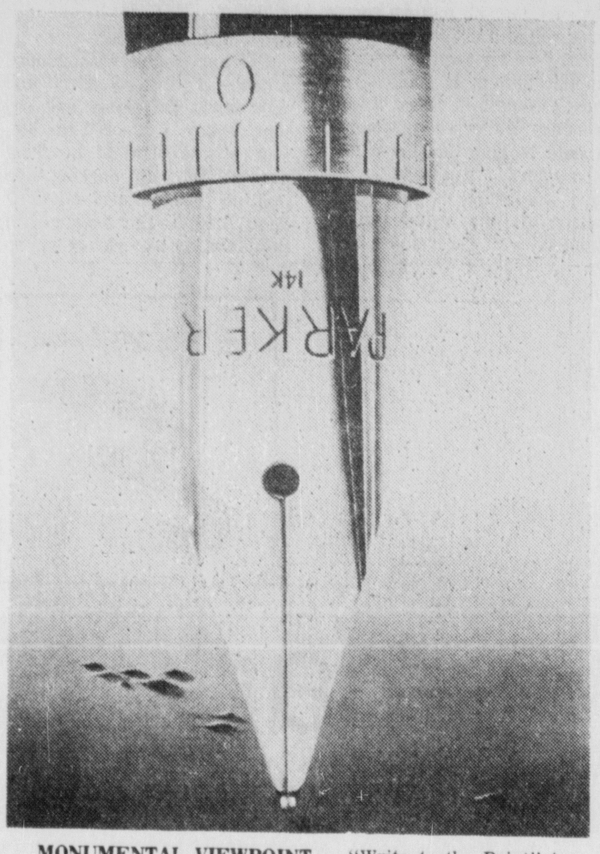
Unusually perceptive character studies lend dignity and grace to several elderly people in the photographs of George Berticevich and Jordan Harris, while a play of light upon interior or architectural forms makes for some interesting photography by Paul Critchett.

Debra Baldwin's blurred and dematerialized figures float in graffiti-inscribed dungeon-like interiors, and John Montana's color-shot of a gleaming chrome-and-red motorcycle is quite spectacular.

Other works of interest are paintings by Bob Johnson, Tom Panages and Khosrow Sayyah, and photographs by Gary Gross, Gerry Jaroski, Jeffrey Levy and David Marshall.

Also jewelry by Naomi Baird, Tim DuPertuis, Ivy Ginsberg, Giselle Kappus, Lynette Matson and John Wuoltee.

This show will continue through Feb. 1 and may be viewed weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 6:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.



MONUMENTAL VIEWPOINT — "Write to the Point" is the pun title of Catherine Atkinson's supra-realist painting which is included in an all media show by College of Marin art students in the Fine Arts Gallery.

Judge Dismisses Bad Check Count

A bad check count against Barbara Ann Damas, 44, of Novato, has been dismissed by Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court due to lack of evidence.

She was charged with the felony after Novato police said she cashed a $260 check at a Novato bank in August with insufficient funds to cover it.

Dymally Seeks Oil Policy Support

SAN DIEGO (UPI) State Sen. Mervyn M. Dymally, D-Los Angeles, sought labor support yesterday should his bill to place oil companies under Public utilities Commission regulation fail to pass the state Legislature.

Dymally asked the western regional conference of the Third Auto and Aerospace Workers Union to help qualify the legislation for the November ballot as an initiative measure in case of legislative failure.

The bill would require the PUC regulation of oil companies in the same manner electric, natural gas and transportation companies are regulated.

"The principle of my bill is very simple and is deeply rooted in our tradition, so well established that it may accurately be described as an integral part of our competitive free enterprise system," the Democratic lieutenant governor candidate said.

"The principle is simply that whenever the actions and decisions of an industry directly affect the lives and prosperity of millions of our fellow citizens it is not only appropriate but absolutely necessary that the industry come under close public regulation."

The industry already is under federal regulation, but Dymally said such claims would be comical if the situation were not so serious.

He said federal regulation has meant oil companies have been able to post their highest third quarter profits in history, have enjoyed a major tax loophole, have received price increases without providing necessary information and have allowed an unprecedented shortage of oil products.

Court Rips Away A Legal Fiction

If a person has committed a crime, is he any less guilty because the evidence of what he did is discovered accidentally while investigating another crime?

For many years, courts in this country have maintained a legal fiction that he is.

This comes about because of what is known as the "exclusionary rule," which has been applied in federal courts since 1914 and enforced on state courts by U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

THE RULE WAS promulgated as insurance against violation by overzealous officers of the Fourth Amendment, which says:

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

The exclusionary rule held that if search for evidence of one crime, being made under a legal warrant, turns up evidence of some other crime, that evidence cannot be used in court. It is illegal because the evidence found is not the "things to be seized" described in the warrant.

OVER THE YEARS, the exclusionary rule has been more and more strictly applied, until, as a public prosecutor complained to us a few years ago, "You could have a car full of firearms in full view, and two dead bodies in the back seat, and we couldn't do a thing about it without first swearing out a search warrant specifying they were there."

The prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures was put in the Constitution for good reason. The people of the newborn United States wanted to be free from the fear of the midnight raid by police or troops, the secret arrest, the star chamber conviction — all things that were as common under the tyranny of crowned kings as they are today under the tyranny of equally despotic dictators.

But they did not intend — nor did the Supreme Court when it adopted the exclusionary rule — that this freedom should be perverted into protection for criminals.

BECAUSE IT HAS been so perverted by the way the rule has been applied, the Supreme Court has begun to turn away from the exclusionary rule. In a landmark decision this week, it decided — by 6-to-3 vote — that such illegally seized evidence can be used in a grand jury proceeding, though not in a trial.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who wrote the majority opinion, pointed out that the grand jury hearing is an investigatory proceeding, not a trial to determine guilt or fix punishment. To invoke the exclusionary rule at that stage, he wrote, would "halt the orderly progress of an investigation and . . . necessitate extended litigation of issues only tangentially related to the grand jury's primary objective."

THIS DOES NOT mean that the court's new ruling will have no effect on trials, however.

Under the strict application of the rule which has prevailed in recent years, it has sometimes been impossible to bring a felon to trial because the initial evidence against him was discovered while investigating another crime — as was true in the case which brought the new Supreme Court ruling.

Because a prosecutor was forbidden to use this evidence, he often was precluded also from using further evidence developed as a result of the chance discovery. A defense attorney could challenge the whole case for lack of an initial warrant specifying the "things to be seized."

Thus, in the case before the Supreme Court, a search for evidence of bookmaking turned up evidence that the suspect was a loan shark. He was prosecuted and convicted for that, but the appeal was carried because the search warrant specified bookmaking materials as the "things to be seized," and loan shark books illegally confiscated were shown the grand jury.

THE SUPREME COURT has ripped away a protection for the guilty by its new ruling. It has not damaged the rights of the innocent. It has not opened the door for the midnight raid. But it has affirmed what seems obvious:

Hiding evidence of a crime, however it was found, obstructs justice.

Such hiding of evidence, when it is not done through legal manipulations, is a crime itself: that of being an accessory after the fact.

The high court's decision should help reduce appellate court calendars and contribute to the investigation of crime and the administration of justice.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Collective Bargaining Advantages Cited

Your recent editorial comment on collective bargaining for public employees failed to enumerate some of the advantages that would accrue both to the public and to public officials. The selection of only one representative to bargain for employees is something dearly coveted by boards of trustees and supervisors who are tired of dealing with umpteen employee organizations (the way it's done now), each trying to "get more" so it can steal away the others' members. The Certificated Employees Council with which school boards must negotiate under the Winton Act is such a disfigurement.

The rights of management would not be taken away from public officials as you suggest. Every employer-employee contract that could work contains a "management rights clause" which reserves to management its function of "running the place." The subjects of collective bargaining would continue to be wages, fringe benefits and working conditions.

True collective bargaining — under legislatively-defined ground rules — should require less of administration's time than the non-professional drawn-out haggling that often occurs today. And public employees would enjoy the dignity of sitting down to bargain as equals with the folks on the other side of the table — something workers in the private sector already enjoy and have no real right to withhold from their brother workers in public service.

(Under the Winton Act, school boards in effect deal with a single organization representing certificated employees, since membership on the certificated employees council is in ratio to membership in the unions organized among the teachers. The union having a majority on the council therefore speaks for all. However, it is not permitted to impose an agency shop, set rules as to who shall be hired, or do many of the other things, going well beyond pay and working conditions, that would be permitted under exclusive bargaining in Assembly Bill 1243 — Editor)

Write Legislators To Stop Union Grab

This letter is in regard to your editorial on Jan. 7 on AB 1243.

I could write paragraphs on my feelings against unions in general and Bob Moretti in particular, but will sum it up by saying that there are two things this state doesn't need. One is more union power and control, and second is Bob Moretti.

The idea that this bill is even for discussion or consideration is frightening.

Watergate has literally destroyed the credibility of our government. Almost daily we read of more and more legislation for government control. Surely people can realize that there is a need to get the government back into the hands of the people. To add insult to injury, Moretti has the audacity to initiate AB 1243. If this bill were to pass, it would mean a handful of union officials would have control over all civil and public employees.

All people have to do is look at what happens in this country when one union goes on strike. It has a far-reaching effect on almost everyone.

I sincerely hope that people will write to the committee members involved in AB 1243.

If people want to stop some dangerous legislation, now is the time.

Sorry About Christmas Present, But Your Comet Was Recalled

WASHINGTON — For the first time in my life, I am terribly embarrassed. At Christmas, a few weeks ago, I gave all my readers a present. It was the comet Kohoutek. I told you all that if you looked up in the sky from Christmas until Jan. 31, you would see it. It was your comet, and it was given to you as a token of appreciation for how nice all of your had been to me in 1973.

You can imagine my consternation when I discovered the other day that Kohoutek had not been delivered, and I have received many letters of complaint asking where it was.

I IMMEDIATELY CALLED the Universal Star Co. to find out what went wrong. After a dozen calls, I finally managed to get the sales manager in charge of comets on the phone.

After I had explained the problem, he said rather tersely, "Kohoutek, Kohoutek? Oh yes, here it is. Your comet was recalled. It had a faulty tail and a bad paint job. We're trying to make repairs on it now."

"But," I protested, "I was promised a dazzling display of celestial brilliance which would fill the sky with a million moons. I don't want a used comet that's been recalled for a faulty tail."

The sales manager replied, "If you look at your 90-day warranty you will see that the company is responsible for everything that goes wrong except if the comet fails to shine or light up the sky."

"BUT WHAT GOOD is a comet if you can't see it?" I asked.

"The Universal Star Co. has the best quality control of anyone in this business. Occasionally a mistake is made and we try to rectify it. But we cannot be responsible if something goes wrong with a star that is 50 million miles long, particularly during the energy crisis."

"But you advertised Kohoutek as the greatest thing since Halley's Comet. You said that when it emerged from behind the sun it would be the most magnificent display of fireworks in the 20th century. You claimed it would be the most breathtaking galaxy of light in 2,000 years."

"Yes," said the sales manager, "our advertising agency did go a little overboard on its copy. But there was no fraud intended. The comet is out there — it's just that you can't see it."

"WELL, I THINK ALL of us should get our money back."

"We can't do that," the sales manager replied. "If we refunded money to everyone who expected to see Kohoutek this January, the Universal Star Co. would go out of business."

I became angry. "If you don't refund my money I shall write a column saying the Universal Star Co. is a fraud and that they sell cheap, unsafe comets."

"We're sorry you feel that way. But if we exchanged Kohoutek for you, we'd have to do it for everybody. Every universe has a lemon or two. All we can do is fix the tail and hope for the best."

I hung up in disgust.

SO, DEAR READER, that's the story of your Christmas present. I wish I could give you something else in its place, but Kohoutek used up all my money. It was one lousy rip-off and I assure you it's going to be a long time before I buy a comet for anybody again.

The only thing I can do now to make up for the gift you never received is to promise in 1974 that I will never say in my column, "Things have to get worse before they get better." I know it's not much of a gift compared to Kohoutek, but I'm sure as time goes on you'll appreciate it more and more.

Population Vs. Shortages Poses Major World Problem For Future

By RICHARD L. STROUT

WASHINGTON — There are those in Washington who think that the perambulator is a more dangerous weapon than the atomic bomb.

There are also those who think that oil is just the curtain raiser of many shortages as world population swells.

Lester R. Brown of the Overseas Development Council is one of the first: He warns that world population will double in 36 years at present rates, and that some global resources are running low.

C. Fred Bergsten of the Brookings Institution is one of the second: He says that the United States should start aiding the "third world" (underdeveloped) countries fast.

THE WORLD'S PRESENT population is 3.9 billion, Mr. Brown said recently, and he expects it to double by 2008. He does not see enough food to go around by then unless something is done, and he says industrial raw materials seem to be running low, too.

"Uncontrolled human fertility may pose a greater threat to our future well-being than any other factor," he says in his book "World Without Borders."

Mr. Bergsten says that the "third world" has things the United States needs (like Arabian oil) but that the U.S. is not cultivating it.

"The United States is the least responsive to third-world needs of any industrialized country at this time," he charges. "U.S. help is small in quantity, and getting smaller. Its quality is declining. It lags far behind the policies of Europe and Japan. The administration and Congress must share the indictment."

Both men wrote their comments before the current oil shortage developed.

Both see other shortages likely.

Both say America now must think globally; above all they warn that the United States, with 6 per cent of the world's population, will find it hard to continue to use one-half of the world's material resources.

STUDENTS HAVE MADE these arguments for years; now they hope the oil shortage has caught America's attention.

The situation has alarmed others, as finite world resources face infinite population potential.

Starvation came in 1973 to crowded parts of Asia and Africa. The United Nations has designated 1974 as "world population year," with an international conference in Bucharest in August. Many think there's a global race between food and population.

Here is the score for the United States on 13 basic industrial raw materials required by a modern economy, as set down by Lester Brown.

— In 1950 the United States was dependent on imports for more than half of only four of these 13: aluminum, manganese, nickel, and tin.

— In 1970 the list had increased to six, as zinc and chromium were added.

— In 1985 the list will probably be nine, with iron, lead, and tungsten added.

— In 2000 the United States will be import-dependent on each of the 13 (adding potassium, copper, and sulfur) with the exception of phosphate.

Representatives at the Bureau of Mines say they have seen the shortages coming for a generation — but haven't been able to rouse much interest in it. Maybe the gasoline shortage will help, they say.

THE UNITED STATES should not panic, according to Lester Brown. It has vast resources of its own.

One is its enormous fertility, and it is expected to export wheat, soybeans, and other foods in days ahead to a degree that will pay for its imports of industrial raw materials.

Before the oil crisis Fred Bergsten wrote in the quarterly, Foreign Policy, that continued neglect of the third world might bring "highly emotional and even irrational responses. . . especially if that country is the United States."

Key products are controlled by a few countries: copper, four countries, 80 per cent; tin, two countries, 70 per cent; rubber, four, over half; bauxite, four, over half. There are others on the list. The Arabs have since shown them how to unite.

"The United States must, in its own national self-interest, adopt much more cooperative and responsive policies toward the third world," says Mr. Bergsten.

"A unified global society must now be regarded not as a fiction or an ideal, but as the inevitable reality toward which we must move," says Mr. Brown.

And Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., put it like this in an interview:

"We preached to ourselves that we were the richest, the most powerful, the strongest economy the world has ever seen. Then suddenly we have seen that it is as vulnerable as the dickens, just by the cutting off of a spigot. This is an idea that we are repelled by and just refuse to accept. But we've got to accept it."

MARQUIS CHILDS

Shock Waves From Chile Felt In Always-Sensitive Mexico

MEXICO CITY — The shock wave of the overthrow of the elected government of Salvador Allende in Chile is still being felt throughout Latin America. The bloody violence of the military coup, far from having run its course, may prove to have been only the preliminary to a wider and more desperate struggle.

Seen from here, the possibility of civil war cannot be ruled out. Dissident elements not subdued have gone underground and they are certain to get help from leftist forces outside Chile. Given the hundreds of miles of deeply indented coastline, smuggled arms and even guerrilla bands could not be kept out.

IN MEXICO, where stability is based on a carefully calculated balance of the forces of left and right, the tragedy of Chile is seen as a classic example of the attempt to impose Marxist socialism on a nation with 100 years of constitutional government. Having come to office with only 38 per cent of the vote, Allende made no effort to achieve unity. Instead he forced through socialist decrees with disastrous consequences for the economy.

The one hope today is for the military junta to renounce revenge and follow a generous course. With sufficient time for the wounds to heal, a free election would almost certainly see the rejection by large majorities of the left extremists. Conceivably Eduardo Frei, the Liberal Democratic head of state before the Allende debacle, could be returned to restore harmony and rebuild the economy.

This is the hope — admittedly a frail hope — of those who fear the consequences of a Chilean civil war in an already troubled continent. Mexico took an understanding and a compassionate view of Chile's tragedy. While Communist embassies were barring their doors, the Mexican embassy in Santiago admitted more than 500 Chileans seeking asylum from the organized killing.

Many of the refugees have now been brought here under the protection of the Mexican government, with only about 50 still in the embassy in Santiago. Allende's widow is in Mexico City, but she is expected to make Europe her long-term residence. A Chilean government in exile here has been ruled out.

DESPITE PERSISTENT problems, such as the thousands of illegal passings back and forth across the border, the United States is fortunate in having as the closest neighbor to the south a stable Mexico. With one or two spectacular exceptions, nothing like the wholesale assassinations and kidnapings plaguing Argentina have occurred here. Secty. of State Henry Kissinger's friendship with Mexico's Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa is one of the pluses in the relationship between the two neighbors.

Ever since expropriation of U.S. oil properties in 1938, a government monopoly has run the industry from production and refining to the gas station. Prices were kept unchanged for 15 years as successive presidents feared the political consequences of upping the cost of a gallon of gas. Two years ago President Luis Echeverria bit the bullet and put the price in line with that north of the border.

A new field in the State of Tabasco in the far south is being opened up. Exploration in Baja California, it is hoped, will result in wells comparable to those in neighboring Southern California. The pinch is on here with a refinery shortage, but it is not so stringent as that in the United States. And as elsewhere around the world, the curse of inflation, with a rate officially conceded to be 18 per cent annually, presses hard.

Echeverria and the able younger men around him stress Mexico's role as a leader of the third world. They heard an echo in the recent interview with the Shah of Iran when he declared that the day was over when the industrialized West could live with a high standard of living on the low cost oil of the Middle East.

Raw materials from Latin America have consistently fallen in price, while manufactured products from the north have risen. That day, too, is ending with oil setting the pace, Venezuela having just tripled the per-barrel export price. As Fausto Zapata, the brilliant 30-year-old aide to President Echeverria, put it: "Things will never be the same again."

Montgomery Ward guarantees its passenger car tires to the original purchaser against premature tread wear-out with the exclusion of tires used commercially*— as follows:

PREMATURE TREAD WEAR-OUT

If a Montgomery Ward passenger tire wears down to the top of the tread wear indicators (to 2/32" tread depth) within the period of months or number of miles stated for a given quality of tire, Montgomery Ward will replace the tire for a prorated charge determined by the months or miles of use, whichever serves as basis for the guarantee.

Premature tread wear-out due to malfunction of the suspension system is excluded.

All prorated charges will be based on actual selling price in effect at the time of adjustment at the retail store to which returned or the catalog price in effect at the store or agency to which returned, in either case, including Federal Excise Tax.

For adjustments under this guarantee, return tire with the guarantee booklet issued at the time of purchase to any Montgomery Ward branch.

*Commercial use is defined as use on any vehicle for other than family or personal use.

- Due to the importance of proper vehicle maintenance in delivering stated mileage, Montgomery Ward will rotate tires purchased at retail or catalog stores having installation facilities free of charge, every 5,000 miles. Wheel alignment and wheel balance may be checked at that time.
- Montgomery Ward will repair nail punctures free of charge for the full term of the tread wear-out guarantee.

10-Fold Fund Increase Asked For Spending Law

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed state budget calls for a 10-fold increase in funds for enforcement of California's political campaign spending laws.

In the past, employees of the Secretary of State devoted part of their working hours to collect and review campaign contribution and expenditure reports at an estimated annual cost of $60,000.

But for the 1974-75 fiscal year, Reagan's budget would provide a record $615,000 to hire 43 state employees to audit campaign spending reports and prosecute violators of the state's new campaign reporting law.

The bulk of the money, about $450,000, would go to the Board of Equalization, which will be charged with auditing all campaign reports. The remainder will be split between the attorney general and secretary of state.

The increased enforcement, which would begin with the upcoming Nov. 5 statewide election, was authorized by a campaign contributions law by Assemblyman Henry A. Waxman, D-Los Angeles, that was passed last year.

More Funds For Bike Lanes Asked

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Reagan administration has proposed a $17 million slash in state highway construction next year but called for increased spending for bicycle lane construction and mass transit.

The $521 million budgeted for highway construction — down from $592 million the current fiscal year-reflected declining gas tax revenues because of the energy crisis.

Revenues from the state's seven cents per gallon tax on gasoline — the major source of highway financing in California—is expected to drop to $648.9 million in 1974-75 from $673.8 million the current fiscal year.

Finance Department officials said the proposed budget envisoned 200 fewer Transportation Department employes out of a total of 2,000, due to the energy crunch. Their departure probably would be handled by attrition and the state was hopeful of obtaining federal funds to pay salaries of other department employes threatened with layoff.

The total $786.1 million Department of Transportation budget also called for spending $700,000 for the design and construction of bicycle lanes and separate bicycle paths throughout the state.

The World Of Weckler Is World Of Color—

By DON KEOWN

The Christmas gift of a camera and film processing equipment back in 1936 started Charles A. Weckler to taking pictures at age 12.

"But," he admits, "I had no idea then that photography was going to be my profession.

Born in Grand Rapids, Mich., Chuck Weckler was the son of a DuPont civil engineer. Since both parents were college graduates, they urgently desired their son to go on from high school to a university.

Dutifully, he did so, first at Michigan State University (then College) and then at the University of Utah.

HIS UNCERTAINTY as to his future continued into college. First he studied anthropology. Then he moved into script-writing. World War II intervened, and he was called into service.

He had already begun dabbling with photography in various part-time jobs. But it was his U.S. Navy stint that really turned him toward the camera and film as his future.

It began in an unlikely manner with assignment first as a hospital corpsman, then as a pharmacist mate. But this led him into medical photography.

An asthmatic condition put him into the Public Law 16 rehabilitation in-service program.

OUT OF THE military, he enrolled in the Fred Archer School of Photography in Los Angeles, and in 1948 completed his work there as a member of the school's third graduating class.

"Fred Archer," Weckler explains, "was one of the first advertising photographers in California. He was also the originator of the glamor portrait for the movies. And a contemporary of Ansel Adams.

"Archer, a great photographer, passed away five or six years ago."

Despite the example set by Archer, young Chuck Weckler still wasn't pointing particularly toward advertising photography — the field that was late to bring him into prominence.

"I WAS THINKING more generally of industrial photography," he says.

And color film in which Weckler was to stake out a considerable reputation in the advertising and travel photography worlds was still in a pioneering stage, very expensive and sometimes uncertain.

"I had been introduced to color at the Archer School," Weckler says. "But it didn't really turn me on at that time."

After various short term jobs in photography, Weckler went to work in Glendale for Librascope, a company producing fire-control computers for the government. His job there was to set up an industrial photography department.

IT WAS WHILE at Librascope, in 1953, that he married wife Cindy, who was also working for the same firm.

Weckler left Librascope to go into business for himself, opening a general purpose studio in Burbank where he did both commecial and portrait work.

Then, in 1956, he seized an opportunity to go to work for Technicolor Inc. as chief photographer in the graphic arts department.

"And that," he says, "was when I really got into color."

"WHAT TECHNICOLOR wanted to do," he explains, "was to establish a commercial printing company using the new three-plate color process that had been developed at Eastman Kodak."

But, he adds, Technicolor was acting too early. "And the program went the way of all good ideas ahead of their time. They finally had to close the doors on the program."

By then, Weckler, thoroughly saturated in color work techniques and filled with enthusiasm for its future, had already left Technicolor to form with four other men involved in color photography what they called Colorage Inc., with headquarters in Burbank.

"WE STARTED OUT doing stamp catalogs for what were our first clients," he says. But Colorage Inc. was soon into color catalogs and color advertising for such major clients as Max Factor, SunKist and Liberty Albums.

Much of the work wound up in the slick magazines. And this was still the heyday of the slicks.

In 1960, Weckler decided he wanted to get totally into color advertising photography, and on his own. "In the cliche of the day," he says, "I wanted to do my own thing."

AND HAVING KNOWN and liked the Bay Area as a serviceman, he decided to base his new enterprise in this region.

So, the Wecklers moved north, and on Jan. 19, 1960, Chuck opened his studio in San Francisco.

He still uses a San Francisco business address — Post Office Box 26103, Zip Code 94126 — for Charles Weckler Photography.

At first the Wecklers lived in Strawberry, then, in 1963, moved to Sausalito where they still reside.

IN MARIN, CHUCK and Cindy Weckler have reared one son, Charles III, who to his parents' great pride is attending famed Brooks Institute at Santa Barbara and studying to be a photographer ("he's a very good photographer right now,"

Weckler set the camera for the color picture, then shifted from photographer to "model" for the snapping of the shutter. He has used the photo blwon up for a large color poster to publicize his photography services of undertaking assignments for commercial advertisements or brochures, or supplying color transparencies from the huge stockpile of travel pictures he has assembled. His panel truck has become his "trademark."

San Rafael Artist Is Proving That There Is Too Something New In Art

By L. ROSS BEHRENS

Spaghetti, left over six weeks in a refrigerator, will sprout a pale green and fuzzy mold, and while most of us would dismiss such stuff as garbage, there are those strange others who lift the lid only to mutter, 'hmm . . . interesting."

Well, that was four years ago. Scott A. Behrens, now 27, was an undergraduate art student at Webster College in St. Louis when he found himself intrigued by the textures and subtle colors of mold.

He wondered how growth could be controlled. And could the mold be applied to canvas? Do you slap on spaghetti sauce and just let it happen?

IT WASN'T UNTIL he moved into his cluttered basement apartment 515 C Street in San Rafael with his Doberman Pinscher and began postgraduate work in art at Lone Mountain College in San Francisco that Scott began experimenting.

"He'd spill milk on the kitchen counters," said Phyllis Lahargoue, his next door landlady, "then lay paper, cardboard, old wood, anything, in the soured milk by the window where the sun comes in." She shuddered.

Then there were the little oranges and pineapple guava and other fruits of her splendid backyard garden that she'd give him — and they'd rot.

Well, Scott was nurturing mold samples: scraping off bits and transferring them to the wet salvage wood or whatever other backing material he happened to be experimenting with that week.

THE RESULTS WERE not pleasing — though interesting, at least to Scott. But there was no form, and no control. Mold spread helter-skelter. Sometimes it simply appeared.

Coming home from school one night, Scott discovered the loaf of bread he'd purchased that morning already spotted, the musty freckles having mystically formed within a tight seal of cellophane.

But it wasn't until Scott Behrens found Meran Dave, a microbiologist at Dahl Biological Supply House, that mold really became art.

"Meran had been working in the lab with algae and bacteria," Scott said. "I'd called dozens of places and finally stumbled onto Meran. He told me to bring over one of my experiments. He liked it, and said he'd help."

WHILE SCOTT TALKED, my attention drifted to a large work of mold art framed on the wall behind him.

From a distance it would be mistaken for an abstract in conventional oil. But the colors are so oddly subdued, and so very, very earthy. It's as if some one had sprinkled the canvas with a rich forest soil. Damp browns, shady olive-greens and mossy grays predominate. There are flashes of brighter oranges, yellows, and occasionally, white; but even these colors are somehow too complexly mixed yet natural to have come from an artist's palette.

"Most artists," says San Rafael's Scott A. Behrens, "try to represent life. But my paintings are life. Maybe they represent art; but they are life." He is talking about his canvases with living mold.

"Most artists," Scott said, "try to represent life."

"But," he pointed, "these paintings are life. Maybe they represent art; but they are life."

Life representing art: living art.

IS A PAINTING ever finished? Does the mold stop growing?

"It has stopped now," he said. "The mold is dormant, in suspended animation. It won't grow again or change until I feed it. It only grows when it has food, you know?"

The food, or nutrient medium, is a sabourad or dextrose solution which can be stored in a dehydrated powder form. It's the solution that was Meran Dave's contribution.

To rehydrate, the powder is added to freshly distilled boiling water. Then it's sterilized in an autoclave at 121 degrees centigrade for 15 minutes. Poured over canvas hot, it quickly cools, hardening like candlewax.

It's a time-consuming process that may take up to two months from beginning to finish.

FROM HIS COLLECTION of sample molds, Scott chooses colors and textures, and sprinkles the spores onto the dextrose treated canvas. Within days the painting begins to develop: a dab of orange fingers downward; a musty green swirls and spins off toward upper right: fields of dark speckles appear, unexpected as buckshot. Chalky fuzz, like long lint stood on its head, drifts toward the center.

From one edge a girl peers. But step back and she becomes a toad springing, stretching into a galazy. Backstep. Are

The little coffee house
Around the corner,
Maybe you have visited
For a breakfast,

Maybe to meet

Or leave a message,
Or just to gab;
Its still there
For a visit,
During the New Year.

from the poplar trees,
and in a bare, lonely way I feel their nakedness.
Winter birds wing to the evergreens.

It's been a long time. How long is long when the sound of time is more silent than before?
Like falling leaves, thoughts turn wild in the wind.

When late shadows dwarf the leafless trees,
my eyes dress them in Christmas lights and adorn their limbs with garlands.

How bleak the trees when the wind blows the leaves away and winter birds

WHY NOT

No!
I am saying no to you—
No to your mouth,
No to your hands,
No to the eyes I live by, take my life from—
No to love,
No to life,
Because of a yes,
An old, fertile yes,
Holding me
Unmoving, steady, strong—
Yes to promises kept,
Yes to always;
Yes to faith and trust,
Yes to (who says it any more?) honor, constancy, devotion,
Yes to the lesser pain, taken and given.

DR. CHARLES GRIFFIN is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael, a congregation that has a very new sanctuary, but a very old history in San Rafael, having been founded back in 1869. Dr. Griffin came to the church in 1968.

PROFILE OF A MARINITE

As pastor of the more than a century old First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael, Dr. Charles C. Griffin enjoys a congregation that is filled with "decision-makers" and with "so many competent people."

By MARY LEYDECKER

Dr. Charles C. Griffin has found "grace" or unexpected blessings" of life wherever he has served in the ministry, but at First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael he also has found a certain rewarding intellectual challenge.

He said his present congregation is filled with "decision-makers" and with "so many competent people" worshipping at the long-time San Rafael church.

For the 48-year-old minister, who started adult life as an engineer, an interest in stimulating and intellectual people is understandable.

GRIFFIN WAS born in Omaha, Neb., but considers himself a Kansan, as he spent most of his youth in Wichita and Salina.

The son of a Presbyterian mother and a Baptist father, the young Griffin mostly attended his mother's church.

"I can remember her pointing to my baptismal certificate hanging on the wall and saying, 'Always remember, you're a Presbyterian.' "

Griffin was not a rebellious youth. In his teen years he remembers his pastor as "my friend" and he said he found his faith a reasonable one.

"I had a good church experience as a youngster and a teen-ager," he said.

NEVERTHELESS, young Griffin did not first see himself as finding a career in the church.

Before World War II, he attended Northwestern University on a scholarship, studying engineering.

Then the war came, and he served as an engineering officer on the Nashville, a light cruiser, which saw duty in the Pacific Theater.

It was at the end of the war that Griffin had experiences that made him start to reshape his goals in life.

HIS SHIP SPENT some months anchored in the Whangpoo River at Shanghai in China and there he saw "filfth, prostitution, poverty and confusion."

"Every morning at 0800 we would empty our garbage barrels over the stern (of the ship)," he related. Very soon the "sampan families" who lived on little boats in the harbor learned of the daily dumping of garbage from "the rich Americans" and would wait next to the cruiser to pick up cigarette butts and scraps of food.

Then when he was coming back from shore liberty, he said, he often saw young newsboys who lived — or existed — under the columns of the porches of big banks in Shanghai.

"SOME OF THEM expired from pneumonia" due to their lack of food, warmth and medical care, Dr. Griffin said. "I began to wonder, 'why them' and 'why not me?' "

Although he had begun to think of the possibility of a "social profession," Dr. Griffin came back from the war and finished up getting an engineering license from Northwestern. That year he also met his future wife, Camilla, whom he married on his graduation day in 1947.

Then for a year or so Griffin worked in the gas production plant of an oil company in Southern Illinois, but he soon realized that an engineering career was not for him.

"IN 1948 WE came to San Anselmo — to the Presbyterian theology seminary," he said.

Griffin's habit of using the "we" pronoun often is his conversation reflects his feelings about his wife. If a man is in a social profession, he said, and "his wife is not only for it, but also encourages it, forget it."

His own wife provides "low key" support, he said, "operating parallel with me" as a "wife, homemaker and friend."

During Griffin's three years at seminary, his wife supported the couple by teaching in San Anselmo. Then in 1951, the new minister went to his first church, Community Presbyterian in San Juan Capistrano.

THERE, THE Griffin's two older children, Christina, now 22, and Ray, now 20, were born. (The Griffins also have a third youngster, Rebecca, 16.)

The Griffins enjoyed San Juan Capistrano ("we were there in the last part of the beautiful era"), but in 1954 Griffin accepted a call to the First Presbyterian Church of Golden, Colo.

It was the proximity to the Colorado School of Mines which drew Griffin to Golden.

"The president of the School of Mines and the gardener there" both served on the church's board of elders and "that's the kind of church I like to have."

AFTER FIVE YEARS in Colorado, the Griffins returned to California "to one of the greatest churches in the West," Pasadena Presbyterian Church, where Griffin served as assistant minister and worked on a doctoral program at the University of Southern California.

He earned his Ph.D. in education from the university and then accepted a call to Oxnard in Ventura County, where he served until 1968 when the pastor-finding committee from San Rafael's First Presbyterian called Griffin to the Marin church.

The church and congregation, which had its beginnings way back on Sept. 26, 1869, with a gathering of 13 men and women in the village of San Rafael's schoolhouse, celebrated its centennial anniversary the following year.

The San Rafael congregation is different "in a positive way" from others Griffin has served, he said.

He called the local group "a sharp, ambitious, thinking church" made up of "a lot of top-flight people."

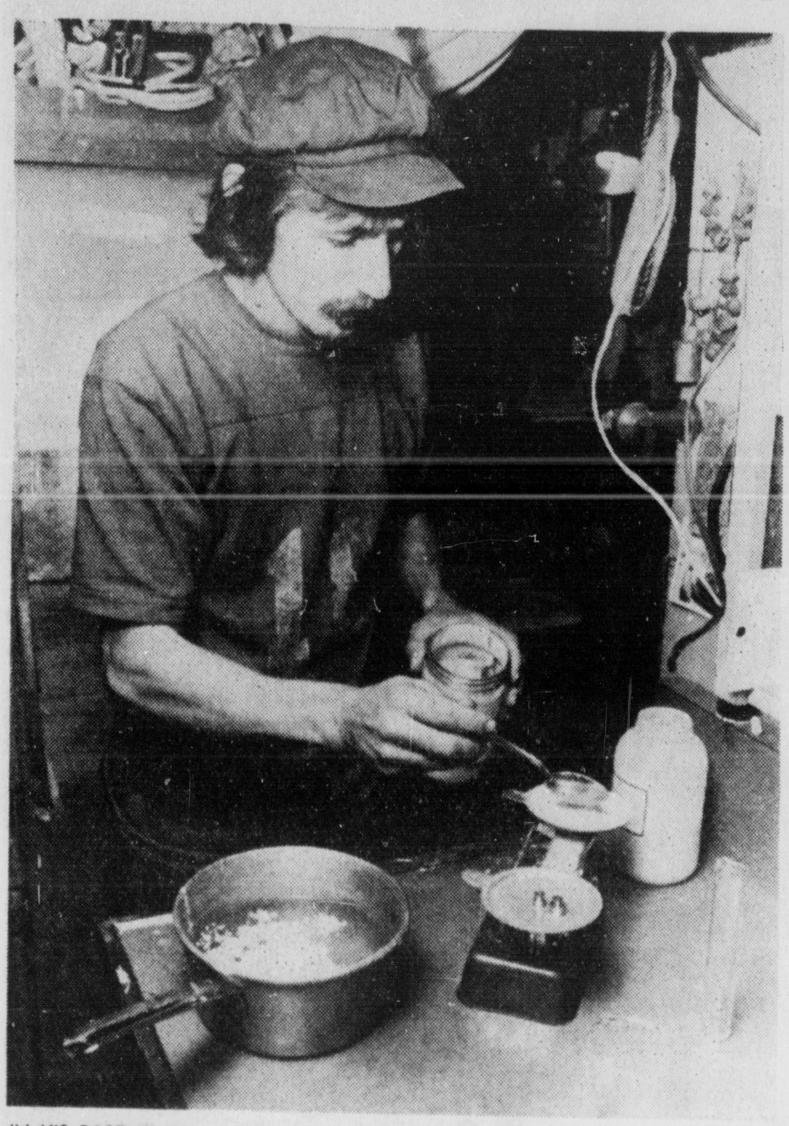
SEVERAL YEARS ago the congregation was somewhat split over whether to tear down its lovely old church building and construct a new one. The eventual decision was to raze and rebuild.

This past year, though, has been marked by a resurgence of unanimity and cooperation in the parish, according to Dr. Griffin.

He praised the congregation for "the way people responded" to the building program, donating such extras as landscaping and performing even such tasks, in one case, as supervising the construction of the new sanctuary.

"I like it here," Dr. Griffin concluded but he added that the length of his stay in Marin will be "subject to the will of God."

Mold Is The Medium For Marin Artist



IN HIS BASEMENT apartment in San Rafael that also serves as his studio, artist Scott A. Behrens weighs out a "helping" of dextrose solution in the dehydrated, powdered form in which he keeps it stored. It's part of the unusual technique by which he "paints" with mold, still alive, feeding and growing on a dextrose-treated canvas.

those reeds reflected in water? Or the blood of cut flowers?

Up close it's nothing but mold, each spore breeding a universe, a supreme fantasy clinging to the hair of old peaches and cream, forgotten apple pie, and wasted spaghetti.

But is it art?

THE PUBLIC HASN'T judged yet. Up to now only a few art students and friends have seen Scott's work. But the public will have its chance.

Scott's plan is to grow his mold on a billboard which, according to an advertising circular put out by 'The Committee in Support of Scott,' "will be donated to the City of San Francisco as a beguiling monument to the idea of beauty inherent in all living things regardless of how trivial or ugly they may first appear, and as a reminder that art, very simply, is life."

The Committee in Support of Scott is made up mostly of friends who have seen Scott's work, are enthusiastic about it, and who want to help raise money for the billboard.

A BENEFIT FOR that purpose at Davood's restaurant in Mill Valley last month resulted in 70 people donating $3 each to see an exhibit of Scott Behrens works. "Unfortunately," he says, "expenses exceeded proceeds by $50."

"The response," said Scott, "has been incredible. There are so many people who want to help. So many. You know, it's really true that people want to help one another."

Out of this sentiment, Scott has formed the Help One Then Another Party.

Originally restricted to painters, writers, musicians and other artists, the party now welcomes everyone.

"Our only requirement is that a prospective member sincerely realize that in order to accomplish his own goals he needs the support of other people."

"Okay," Scott said, "so when somebody helps somebody else, then that other person owes his help in return. What we're really talking about is: I help you and you help him and he helps her and, wow, together, all of us, we can do anything. Anything!"

SCOTT BEHRENS USES a paddle to apply the mold that he uses as his painting medium to a treated canvas. His paintings, says Behrens, don't just represent life. They are life, since the mold is still alive and growing. But to control that growth, the artist simply controls its feeding. Unfixed, the mold becomes dormant and the painting will go into a state of suspended animation.

IT'S NOT A new idea. Every membership group from Christianity to our Democratic and Republican parties, to trade unions, to Communism, to the United Fund, and even to neighborhood improvement associations has the appeal of members helping one another somewhere hear its core.

Yet, in a time of food shortages, energy crises, stricken government, a plummeting Dow Jones, labor layoffs, and the huge possibility of a major recession, a new party devoted only to helping its members might well find a warmer welcome than it would in less awesome times.

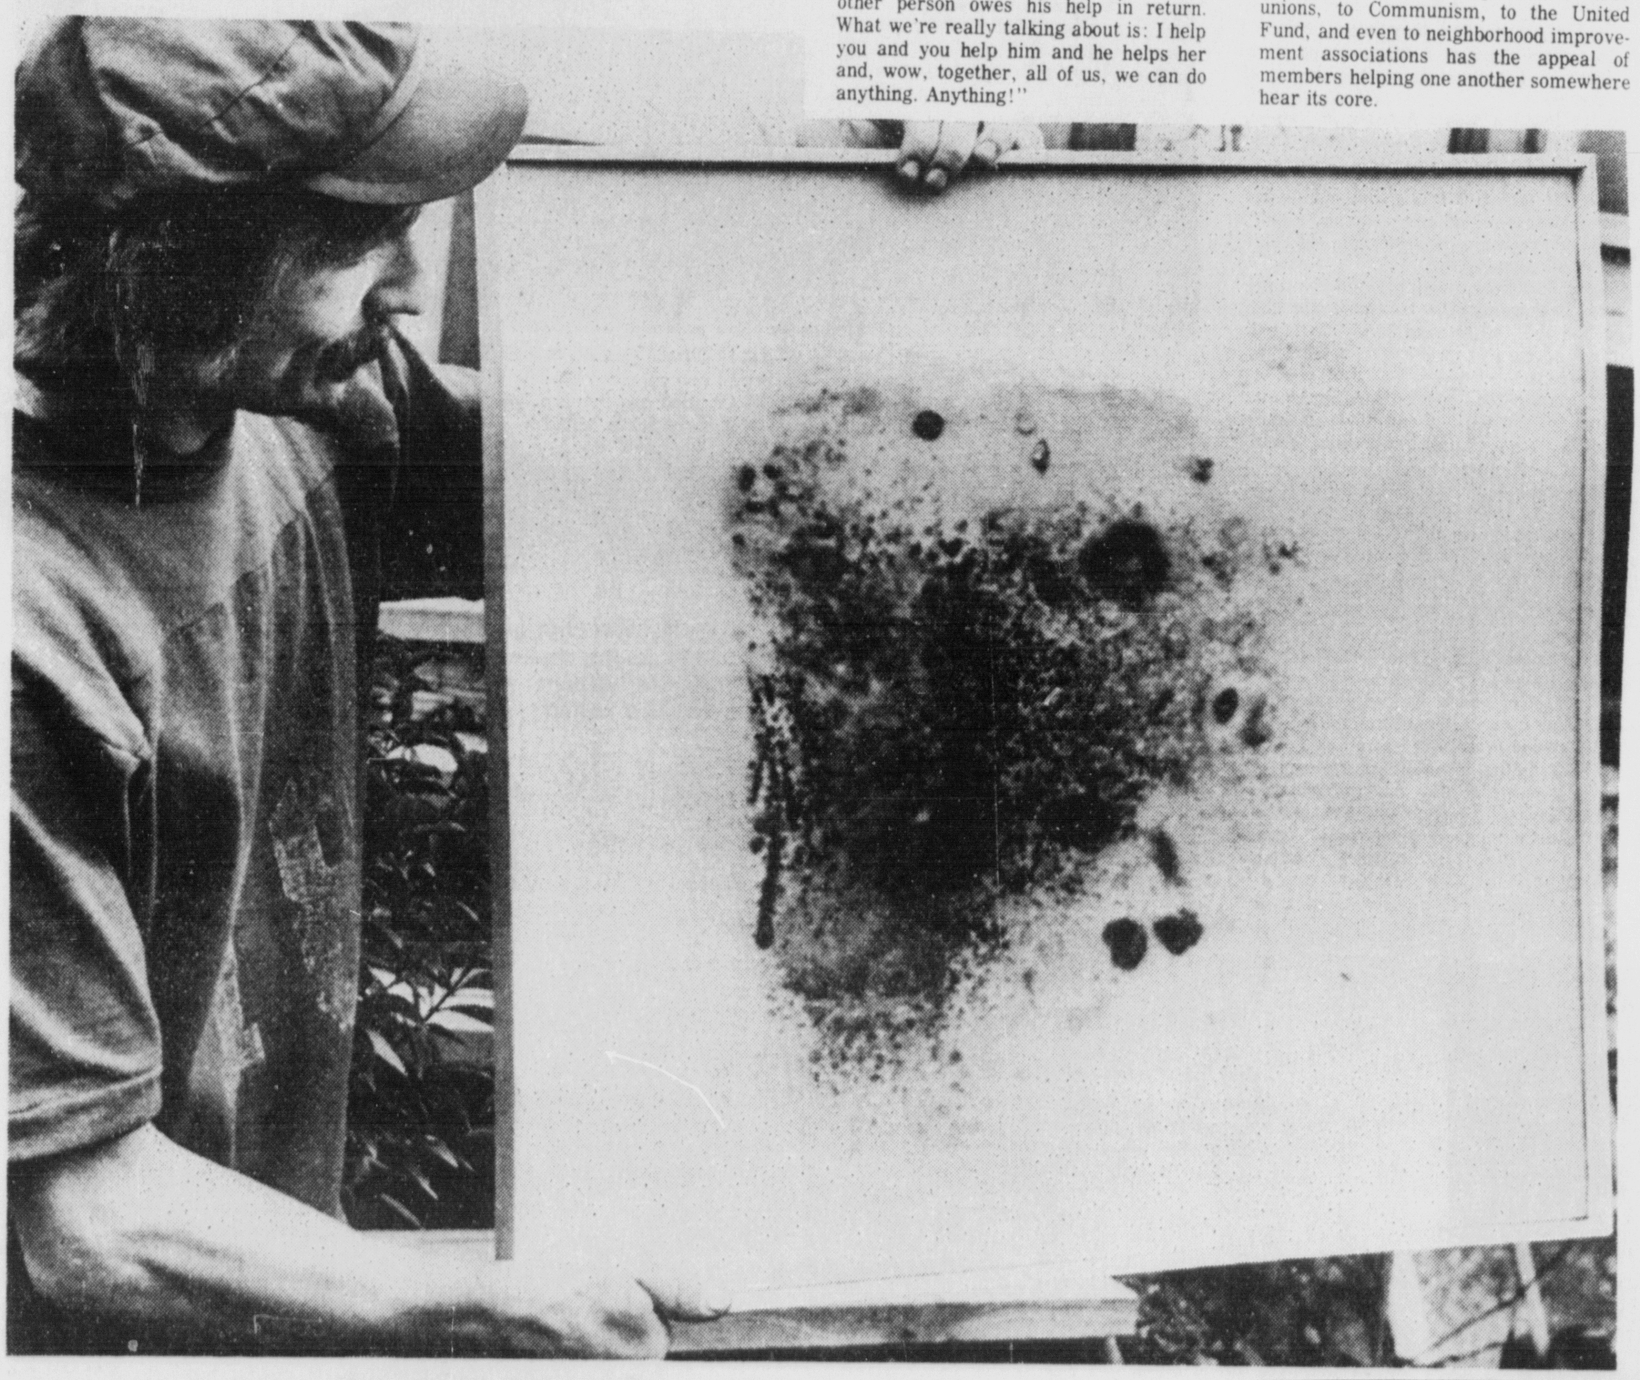
"I'm not a politician," said Scott. "I'm an artist. I don't want to wind up speaking in a football stadium filled with a hundred thousand people and searchlights."

He laughed: "But sure, I'd talk to 5,000. Yes, I could do that."

RIGHT NOW, Behrens supports himself as a part-time bartender.

But what he would like to do is to support himself with his art. He frowns on the tradition of the painter who struggles along perfecting his art, unconcerned with sales or recognition in his life-time.

"I don't go for that," he says frankly. "It's pointless for me to make more paintings when I'm not getting anything back from them. I want my paintings to be worth something. I want to live off what I enjoy doing."



ONE OF HIS PAINTINGS done with mold is shown by the artist, Scott A. Behrens. The effect is abstract or impressionistic, with the viewer sometimes making out one shape from one view, another from a differing perspective. The colors are earthy and subtle. And the texture of the mold on canvas is also a part of the work.

THIS IS ANOTHER of the abstract paintings done with mold by Scott Behrens. So far, except for one showing at a benefit affair in Mill Valley, only a few of the artist's friends have viewed the work. But Behrens is hopeful his unusual art will win public acceptance, and that he will be able to support himself with his paintings.

Chuck Weckler Has Passport And Camera, Does Travel says his mother); and two daughters, Rebecca, 18, and Kristina, a 16-year-old Tamalpais High School student.

Says Weckler of his business: "We are in a transitional stage right now.

"We started out purely as an advertising photographer. We worked specifically for advertising agencies, and not for the direct accounts.

"FOR INSTANCE, in our work for Wells Fargo Bank, some of our best known color advertising photography, I was more or less involved in developing the stagecoach campaign, working with Mort Kohn of Ross, the art director with McCann-Erickson Inc. agency."

The campaign, on billboards and on television as well as in magazines and newspapers, became familiar to millions.

Starting in 1963, Weckler also began doing work for the Matson Navigation Co. for advertising for its cruise ships and their destinations. Other clients in the travel field followed.

"And as I began to travel more and more, I also began thinking more and more about developing another business," Weckler says.

THE PHOTOGRAPHER says that the Matson and other travel assignments accorded him a high degree of independence.

"They would give me a title," he says, "and then it would be up to me to go out and shoot the pictures to fit the title and to satisfy the agency."

Thus to a degree, Weckler, on these trips, had time of his own. The new business that he was thinking about was to build up a stockpile of travel photographs upon which agencies and other clients could call as needed.

IT BEGAN IN July of 1969, with a jaunt to Tahiti for Air New Zealand, Weckler stayed a month, using the extra time to take additional photographs for his own stockpile.

In September of the same year, the Bank of America asked him to go to South America. Again he remained there for a period on his own time, taking photographs for his stockpile.

Since then, on any assigned trip, Weckler has managed to also work in some shooting of his own.

The result has been some extremely extensive and intensive photography "safaris." Says Weckler: "You can get a lot done by working hard, but you can't rush this kind of thing."

MOST RECENTLY he was in New Zealand and Australia for five weeks. He returned with 140 rolls of color film shot there and in Fiji and Hawaii. Twenty-four separate plane rides were involved.

The new business has been named Weckler's World, location photography. And it operates from the San Francisco post office box address.

Mrs. Weckler handles much of the business end of Weckler's World. "She has to," notes her husband, "since I am gone so much of the time."

Mrs. Weckler laughs when she says, "With us, it's a case of the cobbler's children having no shoes. What family snapshots we have, I have to take. Charles never has the time to take pictures at home."

WECKLER ESTIMATES that the Weckler's World files now hold some 50,000 photos from around the world, all in color. Agencies, advertisers and publications are looking to him more and more as a source of that striking photo needed to lend appeal and impact to an advertising message or a business brochure.

Meanwhile, Weckler continues to carry out assignments from agencies as in the past, using them as an opportunity to also put his Nikon camera and its 35-millimeter film to work on behalf of Weckler's World.

Before Weckler's World, its founder says, he might have flown all the way to the Carribean just for a single photograph assigned by an agency. Now, while there, he would shoot many more pictures for his own files.

SUCH IS WECKLER'S skill with the camera that in 1955 he became one of the youngest photographers to achieve the Master's Degree of the Professional Photographers of America. In less than three years he had earned a status that usually requires more like 14 years of professional experiene. He has taught at the prestigious Winona School in Indiana and appeared on national programs.

But ask Weckler for the major reason for his special success in the highly competitive field of travel-advertising photography, and he will reply: "I think it is my ability to cope with just about any kind of sitaution in any kind of setting.

"After I've been in a country about a week, I begin to feel at home there," he says. "I begin to get the flavor and the feeling of the people and the country."

HE SPEAKS ONLY English "except for a smattering of Tahitian French." But he says he quickly picks up enough of a language "to cope with it."

Looking back over the last 20 years and hundreds and hundreds of color film footage, Weckler says: "I've won a lot of awards, which is always satisfying. But, even more important, I've had the pleasure of working with the very best people.

"I wouldn't change a minute of it."

The fact that those early college courses "didn't catch," leaving him free to turn later to photography, he now regards as one of the good fortunes of his life.

Cindy Weckler notes that her husband has acquired, in his travels, many friends who drop into their Sausalito home occasionally, and who invite him to stay with them when he is in their land or region.

As a result of a 1963 assignment to Hawaii, shooting pictures for C & H Sugar, for example, Weckler became fast friends with a Kauai family, and he is godfather to their son.

HUNDREDS AND hundreds of thousands of people in the United States and other lands who have never met Chuck Weckler personally, or watched him work at capturing on film the special flavor of their locality, know his work very well.

The familiar scenes on the Hibernia Bank checks they cash — Coit Tower, Golden Gate Bridge, the cable car, etc. — are his work.

So are some of the travel films of more distant and exotic places they encounter as they thumb through the pages of Motorland or another slick magazine — and discover that the glossy advertisements are as appealing as the editorail matter.

THERE'S ANOTHER "trademark" by which Weckler and Weckler's World have come to be knwon by his Marin neighbors and by residents of other places.

A car buff, Weckler has been engaged in the restoration of Model A Fords since 1968.

"Two years ago," he relates, "I decided I would just as soon drive and work from a car that I really liked and enjoyed."

He found a Model A truck in Vallejo. "It was a complete disaster," he says, enjoying the remembrance.

WITH THE HELP of a body and fender man, over a period of a year and a half, Weckler restored the venerable old vehicle to its former glory.

Now he drives it with pride in his work, finds it economical as transportation and as a mobile office, and handy in that it offers ample storage for his photography equipment.

"Furthermore, with its commercial plates, I can park it downtown in commercial zones without worrying about tickets," he smiles.

But most important, with its designation on its sides, it serves as a moving advertising message for its owner. And the years have taught Chuck Weckler well the value of advertising.

STILL, WECKLER acknowledges that advertising and publicity are no substitutes for competency and creativity in his work.

In the brochure he did for his own Weckler's World, the photographer notes: "In recent years I've spent most of my time living out of a suitcase, traveling all over the world. For Bank of America, Unitours, Air New Zealand, TIA, Matson, PFEL, American President Lines, United Airlines, Philippine Airlines. And for myself.

"It seemed a shame not to make the hundreds of transparencies for these trips available. Because they aren't the standard sort of thing. They capture the mood, the color, the feeling of a place. I think that's important.

"They aren't the standard sort of thing," says Charles Weckler of his large and growing stockpile of travel photographs. "They capture the mood, the color, the feeling of a place. I think that's important."

"OF COURSE, IT depends on what a person's looking for . . ."

And there is this note in the brochure: "Mr. Weckler's passport and suitcase are ready to accompany him anywhere on assignment. Just call, with directions."

On the other hand, it is entirely possible that the photos being sought are already taken, filed among those 50,000-plus transparencies that make up Weckler's World in all its color.

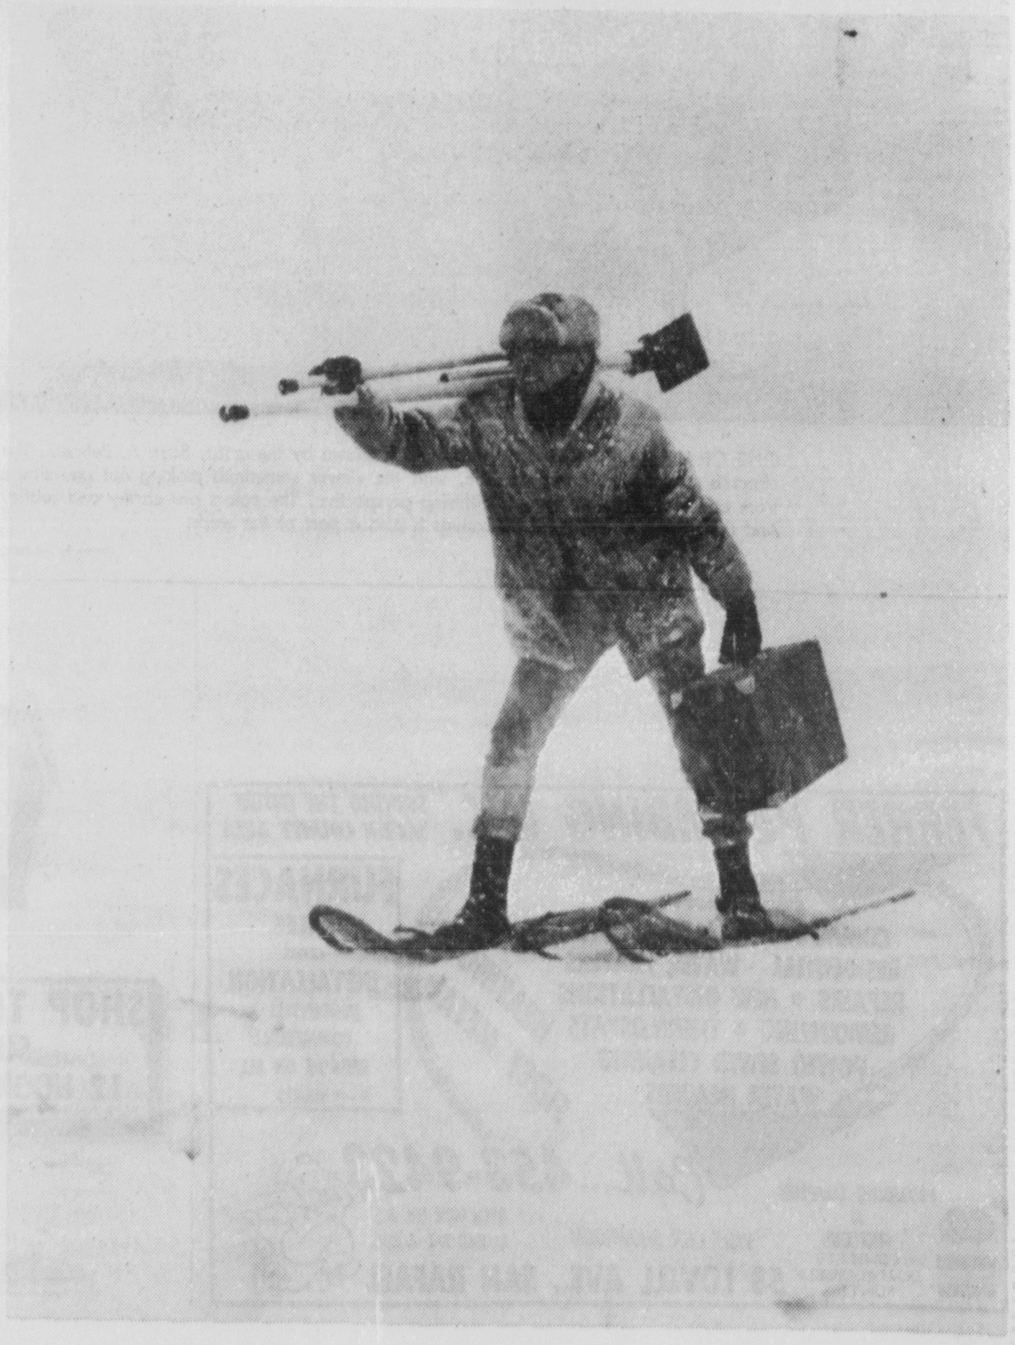
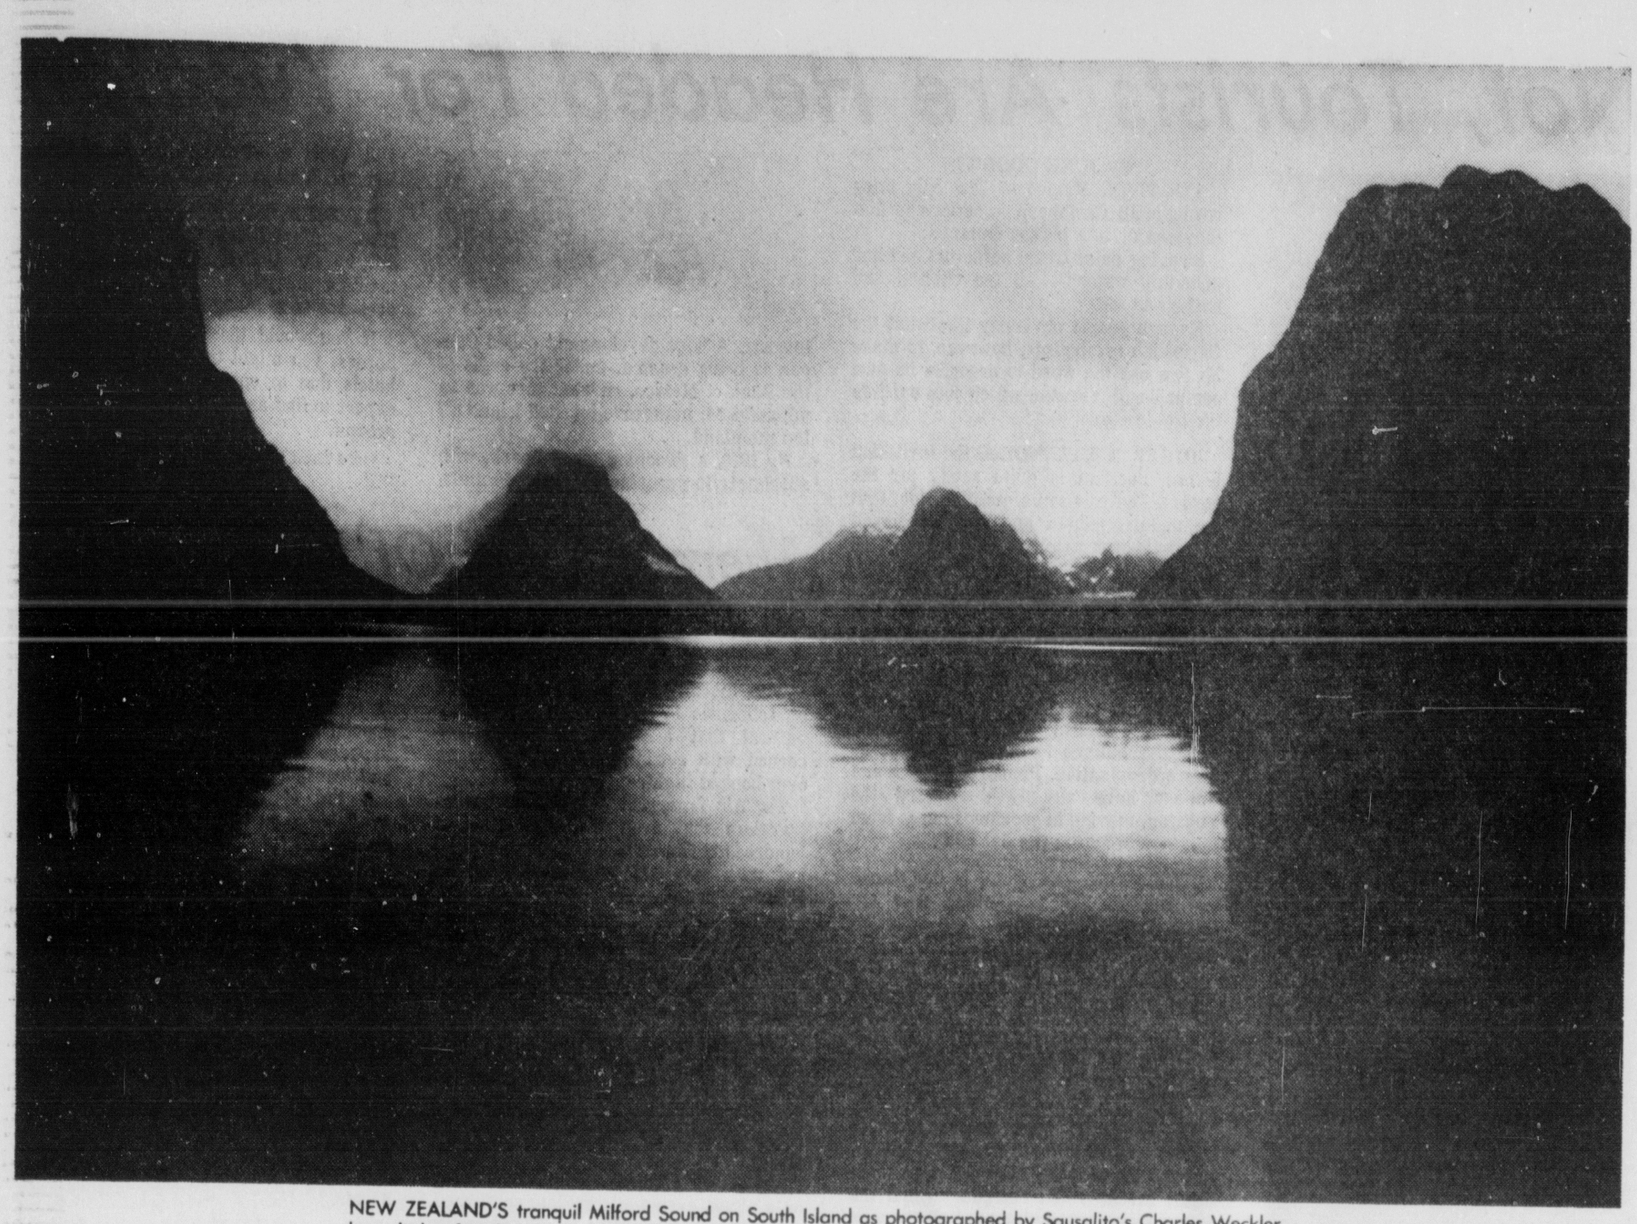
Charles Weckler attributes his success as an advertising travel photographer to his ability to adjust quickly and easily to different peoples and different lands: "After I've been in a country about a week, I begin to feel at home there," he says.

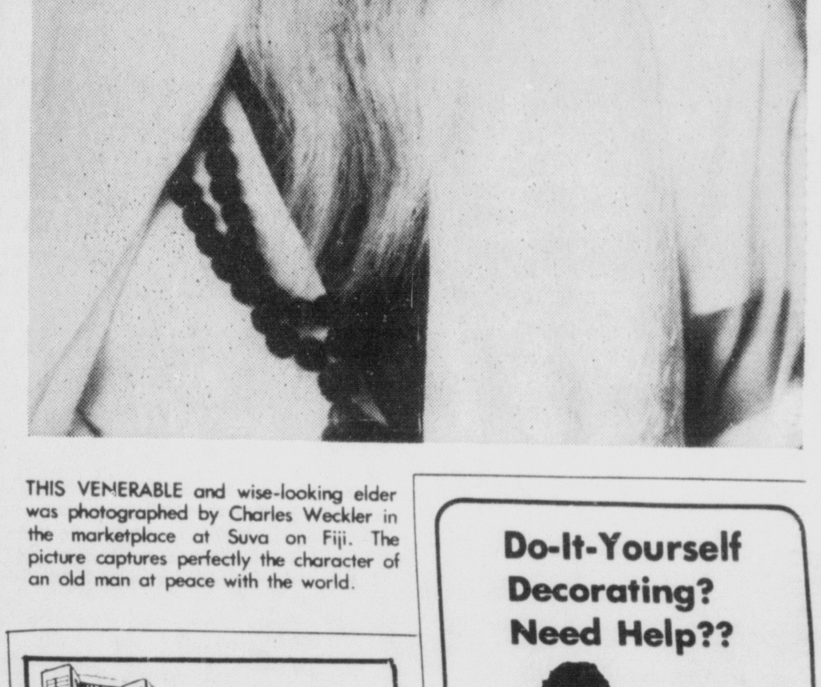
CHARLES WECKLER'S steady stream of assignments as a travel advertising photographer keep him almost constantly on the go, and expose him to a wide diversity of climates, geography and people. Representing the extremes of those locations are these two photographs. At left, in Tahiti, holding his Graphex, on assignment for the Matson Navigation Co. "I was just starting to grow my beard and mustache," he recalls. At right, in a far different environment, Weckler, on snowshoes, crosses the snowfields near Lake Tahoe, carrying out a wintry assignment for Chevrolet trucks. It is his ability to adjust quickly and easily to a new region, or a new people, that has stood him in good stead as a traveling travel photographer, Weckler says.



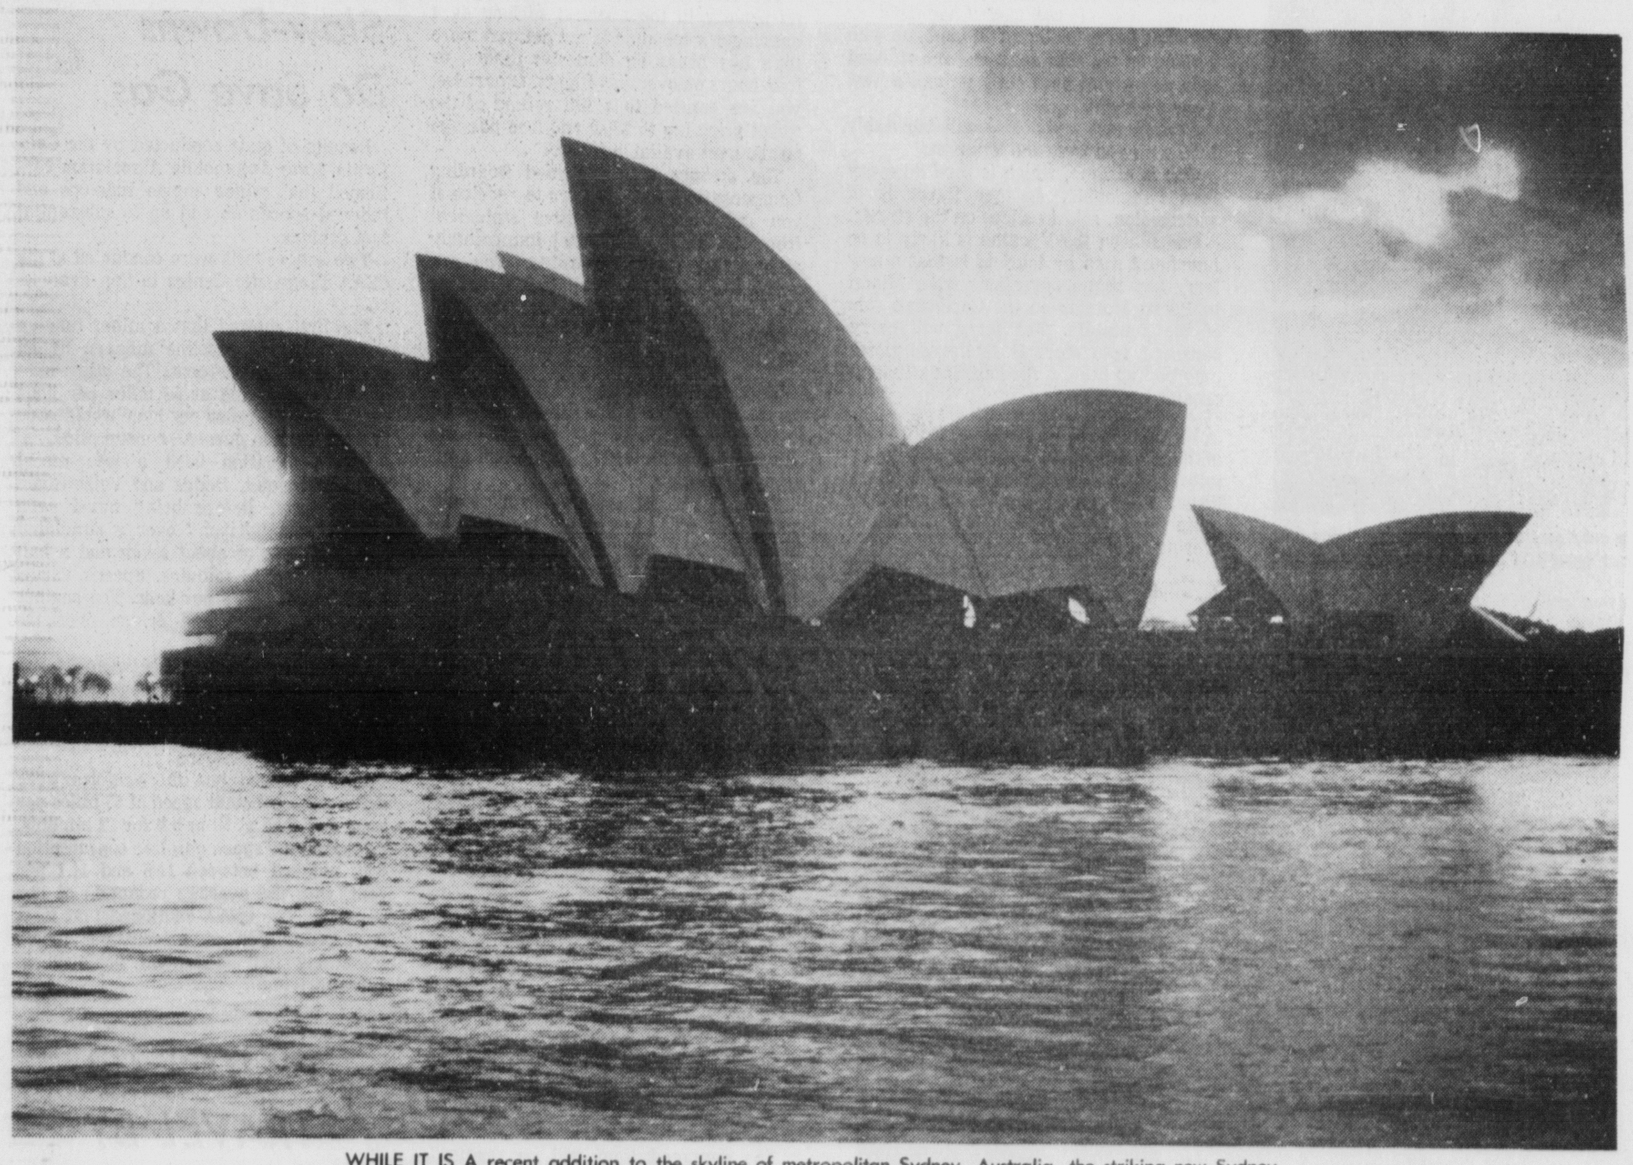
MARIN LIVING



NEW ZEALAND'S tranquil Milford Sound on South Island as photographed by Sausalito's Charles Weckler loses little of its beauty, even when transformed from the original color to a black-and-white photograph. It was one picture from 140 rolls of color film that Weckler shot during his most recent trip overseas — a five-week jaunt across the Pacific. Weckler also shot film in Australia, the Fiji Islands and Hawaii.



THIS VENERABLE and wise-looking elder was photographed by Charles Weckler in the marketplace at Suva on Fiji. The picture captures perfectly the character of an old man at peace with the world.



WHILE IT IS A recent addition to the skyline of metropolitan Sydney, Australia, the striking new Sydney Opera House is already one of the world's most famous landmarks. And much photographed. But no one has pictured it in its waterfront setting more impressively than Charles Weckler. Again, the original color slide has been transformed to a black-and-white print.

IN HIS 20 YEARS as an advertising photographer, Charles Weckler has been responsible for some of the nation's best-known magazine, newspaper, brochure and billboard color photographs. One of his most effective projects was his stagecoach series for Wells Fargo Bank. Weckler cooperated with Mort Kohn, art director with the McCann-Erickson Inc. agency and also a Marin resident, in developing the highly successful stagecoach advertising campaign for the bank. Two of the photos that were used extensively are reproduced above in black and white.

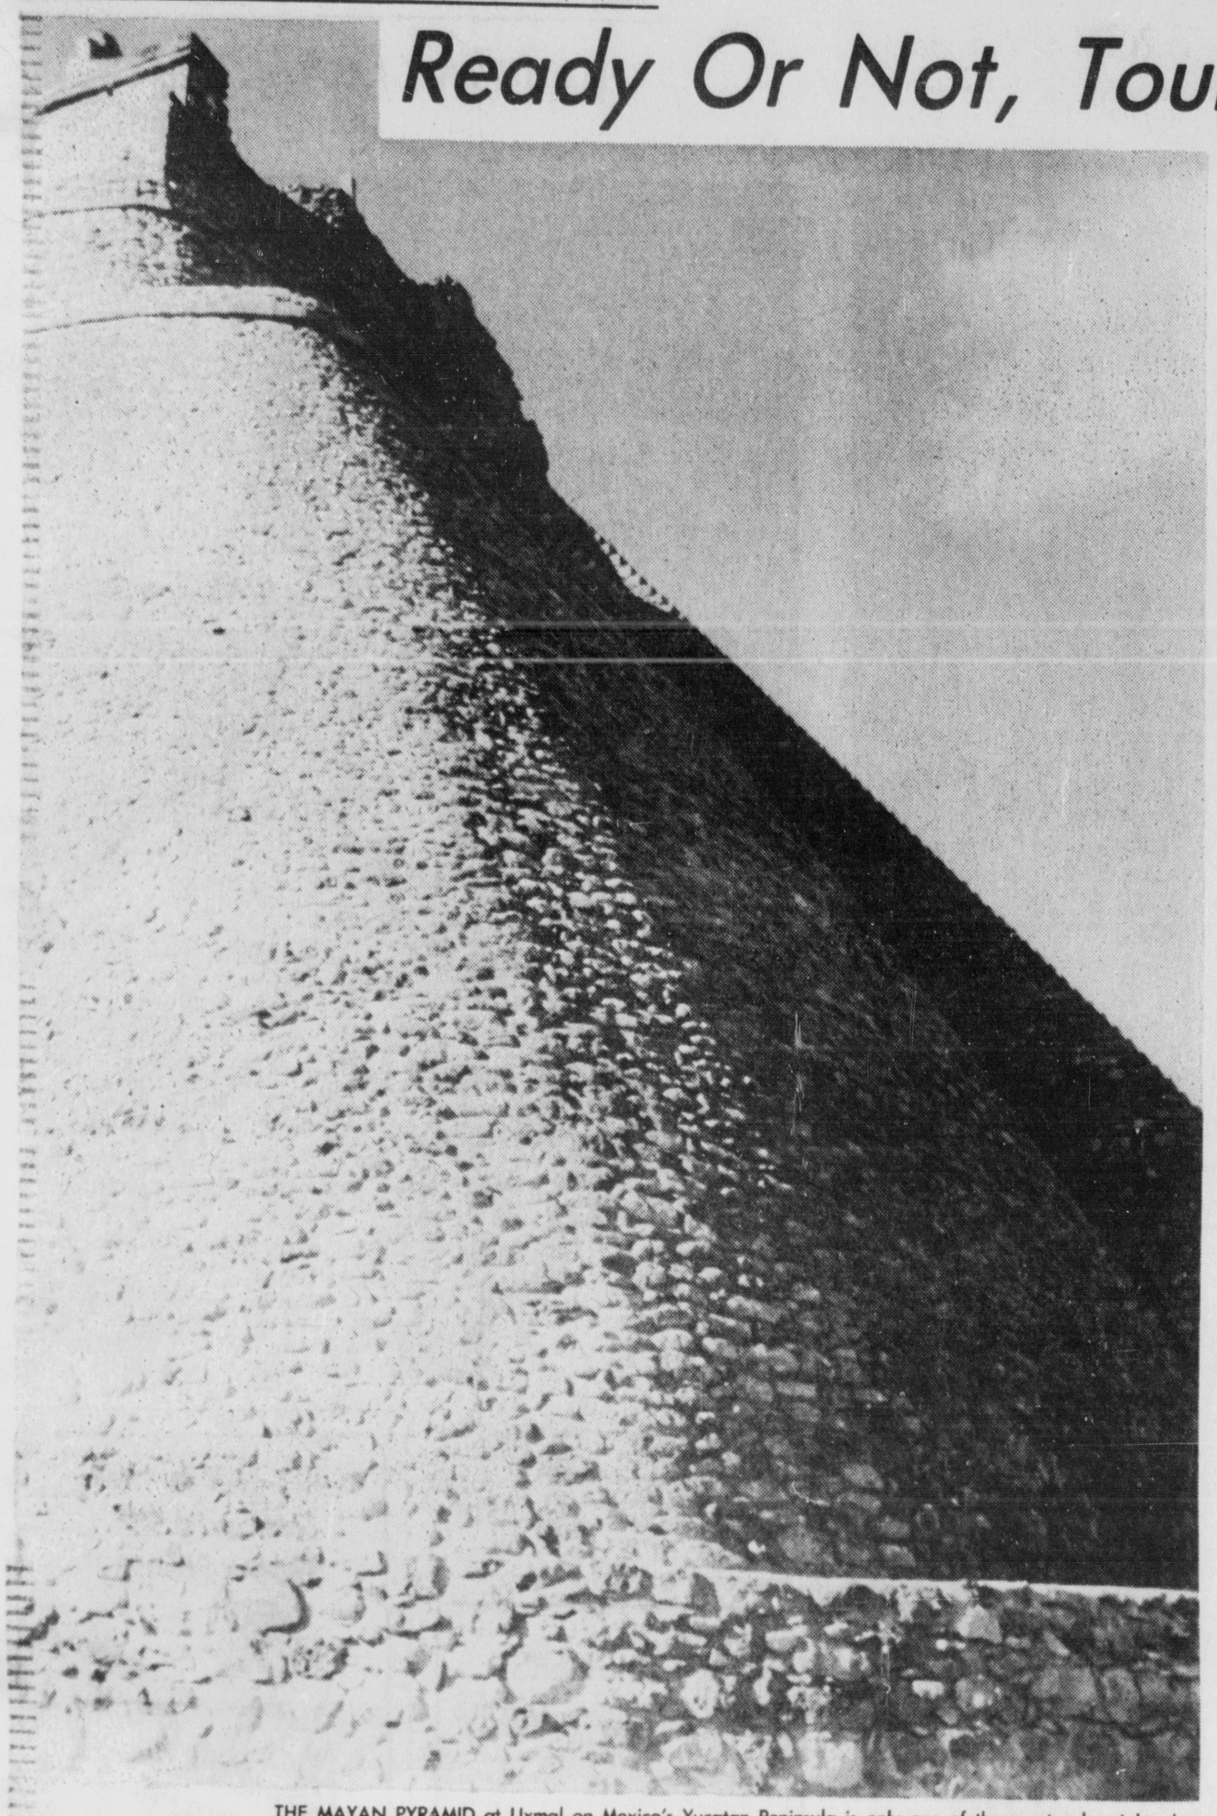
Ready Or Not, Tourists Are Headed For Yucatan



THE MAYAN PYRAMID at Uxmal on Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula is only one of the spectacular sights that are luring travelers to the region, even though the customary tourist amenities are not yet available. The sister pyramid at Chichen Itza is an even more famous attraction.

By JUNE GOODWIN

YUCATAN, Mexico — The only thing wrong with Caribbean vacations is that they can drive a person bananas:

Swaying palm trees, perpetual sun and unending water — all the cliches, and nothing to see.

Enough people obviously like what the Caribbean symbolizes, however, to make Mexico use the word to describe its own peninsula of Yucatan which juts out into the tropic sea.

BUT IT IS EXTENDING the invitation before Yucatan is quite ready for the hordes. There is some question, too, that the underpopulated and underdeveloped area will ever be ready for what's going to hit it.

August is the off-season down here (torrid and prone to hurricanes and rain), but this past August hotel space, nevertheless, was scarce.

The number of North American tourists is bound to increase, too, because the Mexican peso has maintained its same rate of exchange to the U. S. dollar as before devaluation. Plenty of French and Italians have already discovered the Yucatan, moving in enormous buses from ruin to ruin across the flat land.

STILL, THE YUCATAN is one excellent solution for vacationers who are driven around the (Caribbean) bend. In Yucatan there are things to SEE.

The awesome pyramids of Chichen Itza and Uxmal (pronounced oosh-mal), built 300 to 900 A.D., rise up from jungle growth as mysteriously as they are supposed to. They were pictured that way in National Geographic, that way in films and, really, they are that way in real life.

You don't have to imagine very hard to be awed by how the short, round-headed Mayans made these startling gray stone cities, invented the calendar which the Aztecs took over, and spread all the way to today's Guatemala.

THE TWO MOST indelible Mayan images, aside from the pyramids themselves, are of the god Chac-mool (a manlike figure reclining on his back with a plate on his stomach), and the stylized rain god whose nose curls up like a New Year's whistle.

Certain tastes you also will inevitably take with you from the Yucatan:

One is of lime, which is used on every food imaginable. Another flavor is of watermelon, sold in slices on the streets.

One reason the Yucatan is likely to be inundated soon by tourists is that a new ferry has begun operations from Miami to Puero Morelos on the Caribbean side of the peninsula. The ferry will carry cars and a lot more U. S. license plates may pop up here, if the gasoline situation doesn't intervene.

A CAR IN FACT is the best method for getting to the ruins. Second-best is to fly into Merida (Aeromexico is adding more direct flights from the U. S.) and take tours from there. Mexicana also stops at Merida as well as Cozumel.

The Mexicans are not totally without foresight in planning for the coming tourists. A huge development called Cancun is being created, under the aegis of the Bank of Mexico, on what once was an uninhabited, mangrove-infested island off the mainland.

By 1976, a swooping white beach, with absolutely impeccable beach credentials, will sport a string of hotels built by Braniff, Western, Holiday Inn, etc.

BY THEN, THE problem of mosquitos, flies, and sand flies will be solved — if not by the United Nations expert now tackling the job, certainly by the mere presence of so many humans.

If you would like to get there before hordes, you might try one of the Cancun hotels due to open any day. But don't expect to find any postcards or much else around.

There's A Mysterious Sleeping Giant At Our Very Doorstep

By ROBIN WRIGHT

It's one of the world's great continents, massive and powerful, known for its strong character and color.

Yet for all its seven million square miles, fewer Americans visited there last year than the number that toured the tiny 23-mile island of Barbados. And many times less than the much-frequented 21-mile island of Bermuda, which happens to be the second most isolated island in the world.

SO WHAT IS this "abandoned" land? Antarctica, perhaps?

No. This is the mysterious "sleeping giant" at our doorstep. This is South America.

Ignored or forgotten by tourists for years, South America has been the victim of indifference and a western orientation. Americans went to Europe, to Asia, even to Africa in greater numbers than to their southern neighbor, according to the South American Travel Organization (SATO).

SATO figures the lack of promotion resulted in the lack of interest which meant the lack of American tourists. Mexico has been as far south as most Americans were tempted.

BUT IT MAY not be that way for long. A number of factors point to a shifting travel trend:

As the Caribbean gains in interest, people have begun looking even farther south, at least to the coasts of Venezuela and Colombia. Exposure to travel along the northern shores of the continent will then logically draw Americans to the heartland of the continent, to exotic Brazil, romantic Argentina, historic Peru, or elsewhere.

As a greater number of Americans are exposed to the West, primarily Europe, they will become curious about other-parts of the world. South America, being close-by, is a natural to benefit. With the color and character of cities like Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires, South America could well be the next vogue "in" spot.

LINGUISTICALLY AND financially, it's an easy area in which to move. All the countries but one (Brazil) are Spanish-speaking vs. at least six languages of Europe and the Oriental tongues in the East. After French, more Americans probably speak Spanish than any language; and many South Americans also speak English.

Even in Brazil, a Portuguese-speaking nation, it is not difficult to communicate as Portuguese is similar to Spanish.

Financially, the dollar still brings a good deal, allowing a savings on all major travel expenses. At their worst, prices are competitive with Europe and generally much cheaper.

MANY PACKAGES have been developed to eliminate the high costs of individual travel. Many rival and even beat the European travel packages.

Finally and probably most importantly, SATO is leading a major push for American tourists. A new advertising campaign and promotional materials have been developed to draw down their northern neighbors.

Supplementing this effort is the development — with governmental encouragement and incentives from all the countries involved — of the usual tourist trappings. A major luxury hotel chain, for example, is planning to construct between 30 and 50 hotels in Brazil alone.

THE MESSAGE OF all this new development? Simple:

If you want to see South America in the raw, go now. Go before it gets big. The packages and low price levels are ready, exploitation hasn't set in, and the residents are still hungering for both the American and his dollar.

Already package tourism has picked up as much as 50 per cent from last year, with even the unusual trips such as Amazon expeditions doing surprisingly well. During the first three months of this year the number of Americans touring the Latin south jumped over 20 per cent, with Brazil showing a sharp 59 per cent increase, according to Travel Weekly.

In anticipation of the new enthusiasm, SATO now provides free brochures and travel information on all parts South America. Specifics may be obtained by writing SATO, Suite 308, 1699 Coral Way, Miami, Fla., 33145.

Yes, You Can Ski In Hawaii

Schussing the 13,000-foot slopes of a volcano in the tropics is bound to be a novel experience for any skier. And it is just such a lure that brings skiers to Hawaii's "Big Island" of Hawaii where Mauna Kea's high altitude snowy slopes provides ski runs for the intrepid schussboomer.

Mauna Kea's 13,796-foot peak is nearly matched by its sister peak, Mauna Loa, 13,677 feet, the tallest points in Hawaii. But Mauna Kea is where the skiing is done.

When it comes to snow sports, Hawaii doesn't try to compete with Sun Valley or Aspen. But, the island's snow falls during the winter and early spring months do add to the wide variety of recreational activities available to visitors.

The average temperature at Mauna Kea summit during the cooler months is 31 degrees. The lowest temperature on record for the area is 11 degrees on February 11, 1973. Average annual precipitation at Mauna Kea is 8.08 inches.

There's A Bill Of Rights For The Airline Traveler

With the airlines sharply cutting back on schedules to conserve fuel, it is only natural that air passengers are concerned with getting "bumped" from an over-booked flight.

The Air Transport Association assures travelers that even the elimination of hundreds of flights will still leave operating a widespread national system of scheduled air service.

But even with the airlines' assurance that they can accommodate peak air travel demands, any airline passenger still can run into long pre-flight delays and suffer damage.

THE AMERICAN Automobile Association says such an incident does not have to ruin your vacation. Travelers should know that they are protected by a set of rules enforced by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

If you get "bumped" or refused seating on a plane, even while holding confirmed reservations, the airline is obliged to try to book you on the next available flight of any airline to the same destination.

The CAB rules allow overbooking with no penalty to the airlines, so long as a passenger's schedule is not delayed more than two hours on domestic flights, or four hours on overseas flights. Otherwise, you are entitled to a full refund of the ticket price (up to $200) and free passage on the next available flight.

The airlines call it Denied Boarding Compensation, but in order to receive it you must obtain a written statement from the airline personnel immediately after being denied boarding. You are entitled to your refund within 24 hours, or you can file a complaint with the CAB which will corroborate your claim through airline records.

OF COURSE, AS the CAB points out, the best way to avoid getting "bumped" is to arrive at the airport early, allowing plenty of time for heavy traffic and anti-hijack screening.

Norman Philion, senior vice-president-traffic, of ATA, urges air travelers to make reservations as early as possible and to allow for a more flexible time of departure.

"With this planning, fuel resources will be conserved and maximum numbers of people will get where they want to go," Philion said.

Perhaps even more vexing than being delayed or "bumped" is getting to your destination only to learn your luggage is missing. Though the airlines report that only a small percentage of the luggage is mislaid, that's no consolation for the traveler arriving in a strange city with nothing else but the clothes on his back.

AAA ADVISES THAT lost baggage be reported immediately and that you should make certain that airline personnel fill out the loss or damage form for your baggage. If your luggage is not found within three days, your claim will be evaluated and compensation made. Hang onto your claim check as it is the only proof that you actually had luggage. If your luggage is damaged, you should also notify airline personnel immediately.

The damaged item will be repaired, replaced, or you will be compensated in cash.

However, the most common problem that passengers encounter is delay caused by bad weather or mechanical difficulties. If you are kept waiting for more than four hours, you are eligible for special amenities from the airlines. This includes meals, hotel accommodations and transportation to and from the hotel.

A list of these amenities must be available to passengers at ticket counters under CAB rule 380. In asking for the list, cite the rule number.

THE SAME RULE applies to another common inconvenience, the interrupted flight. You are entitled to the same amenities you would get if your flight were delayed. The airline may offer you alternate transportation by train or bus, but you do not have to accept.

To learn more about your rights as an airline passenger, AAA suggests that you write Civil Aeronautics Board, Office of Consumer Affairs, 1825 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20428, for a free booklet, "Air Travelers' Fly Rights."

Yes, Tune-Ups, Slow-Downs Do Save Gas

Results of tests conducted by the California State Automobile Association confirmed that minor engine tune-ups and reduced speeds do add up to substantial fuel savings.

Two sets of tests were conducted at the CSAA Diagnostic Center in San Francisco.

The first showed that a minor tune-up would improve gasoline mileage by an average of 9.6 per cent. The other indicated that driving at 55 miles per hour rather than 65 miles per hour would save 12.2 per cent in gasoline consumption.

The association used a late model Ford, Chevrolet, Dodge and Volkswagen in the tests. Before being tuned each vehicle was "driven" over a simulated commute trip of about seven and a half miles taking 22 minutes. Speeds varied from 0 to 57 miles per hour. The engines were then tuned and driven over the same course.

Gas mileage improved between 6.4 and 14.7 per cent, with an average of 9.6 per cent. The tuning consisted of adjusting the timing, air fuel ratio and carburetor setting to specifications.

In the second test the vehicles were driven at a constant speed of 65 miles per hour and then at 55 m.p.h for 22 minutes. At the slower speed gasoline consumption was reduced between 11.5 and 14.1 per cent, with the average reduction of 12.2 per cent. The CSAA cautioned that tests were conducted at a constant speed, something that is seldom achieved in actual driving.

Shaping A Corporate Ruler Elite

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO THE HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL by Peter Cohen; Doubleday, 331 pages, $10. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

The playing fields of Eton shaped the men who built the British Empire. And the friendships and common experiences of public school life became the basis by which the British civil service was forged into an elite, bound together by "the old school tie."

In "The Gospel According to the Harvard Business School" Peter Cohen suggests that Harvard's "B" School may be at least as significant an influence in the shaping of corporate leadership of the United States.

Consider the statistics he presents — one in 11 of Fortune's 500 largest industrial corporations is headed by the holder of a Harvard M.B.A. — 45 in all. If you add to this group those who have graduated from the school's management training programs and the others who began but did not complete the M.B.A. program, it turns out that the president or chairman of one out of seven of the "500" wears the same "old school tie."

Cohen gives us an insider's look at how this elite leadership cadre is trained.

We accompany the 94 members of Section B through the rigid schedule of the first year and the innumerable cases upon which the Harvard M.B.A. program is based. We share the boot camp intensity of the bi-weekly WAC (Written Analysis of Cases) assignment which must be turned in by 6 p.m. every other Saturday evening.

Social life at the "B" School, such as it is, never begins before the WAC assignment is turned in, and much of the daily life outside of classes revolves around preparation of the WAC case. It hangs over the students' heads like Joe Bsflk's black cloud in " 'Lil Abner,' accompanying them from the morning tooth-brushing ritual to the semi-conscious wakefulness on the edge of sleep.

The case method is designed to put the student in the managerial role. The cases are real, even though the companies may be disguised. Given the information that the actual managers had, the students are faced with the question, "What would you do?" It is all part of the process of learning how to think, decide and act like a manager.

The second year is less structured than the first and includes the interaction between job-seeking students and the company recruiters. The pressure is no less intense. Both years are pressure cookers capable of exposing the weaknesses of any of the participants in the program. Three of them, two students and a faculty member, commit suicide during the two-year period Cohen chronicles. Others retreat into themselves or lose their self confidence.

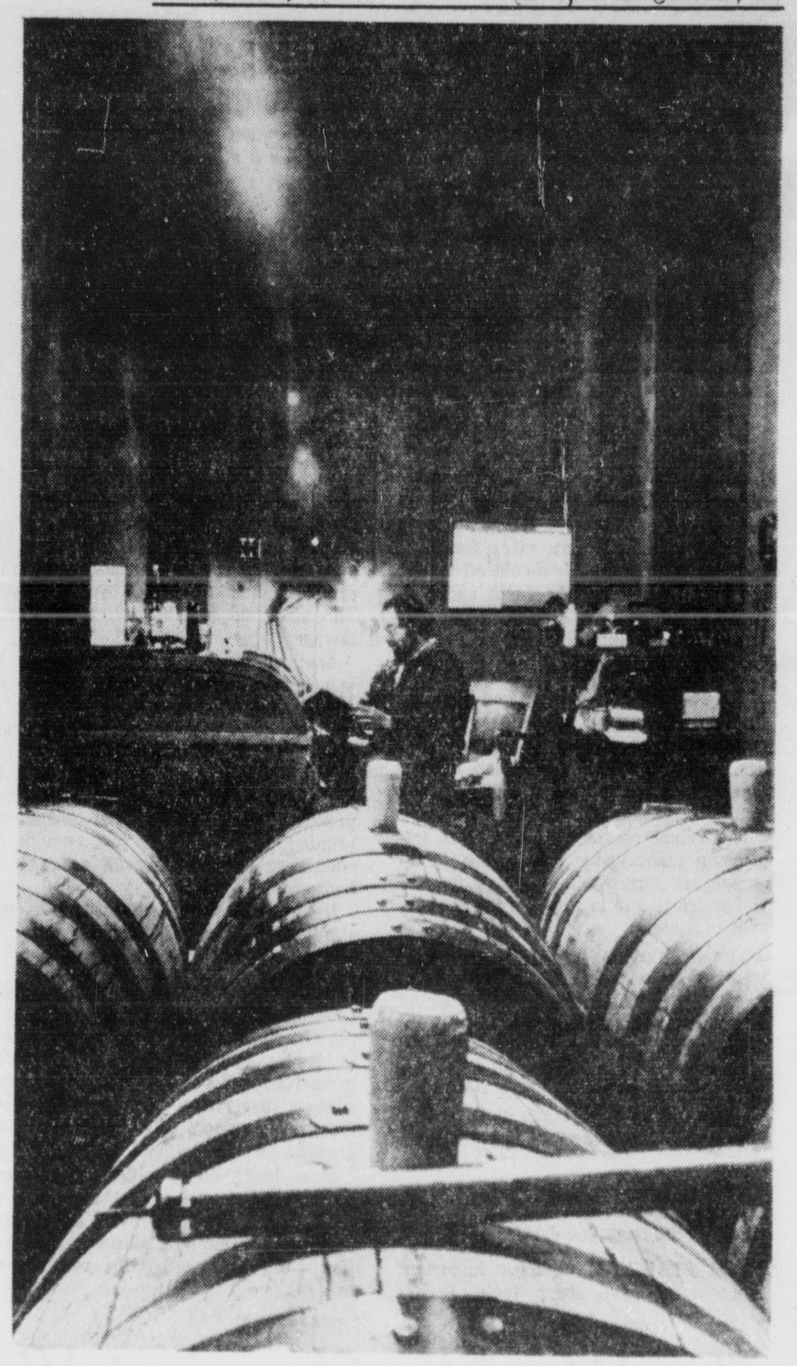
Cohen admits that a great deal of learning takes place. He questions whether this result is worth the price, but he lays the process out so that the reader can understand it, feel the pressure vicariously and make his own value judgments.

The Harvard School of Business is certainly entitled to a chance for rebuttal, but anyone considering applying would be forearmed by reading this subjective worm's eye view. Like the English "public schools," the Harvard "B" School exacts a heavy price for an admission ticket to the ruling elite.

BOOKS AND RECORDS

GROWING AND KNOWING THE GOOD GRAPE

AT LEFT, the new Penn-Shore Winery on Lake Erie suffers through a January blizzard that is the nightmare of grape growers. At right, winemaker Paul Draper of Ridge Vineyards, Cupertino, Calif., relaxes in his office among the kegs. The photographs are among the many illustrations in the new book, "The Treasury of American Wines" by Nathan Chroman, Beverly Hills lawyer and viticulture scholar who writes a wine column for the Los Angeles Times, buys wines for the famous Hollywood restaurant Scandia and is a contributing editor to Wine World magazine. In the book, published jointly by Crown Publishers and Rutledge Books, priced at $14.95, and printed in a coffee (or vino) table-size format, Chroman covers American grape growing and wine making, from California's valleys to New York's Finger Lakes District. And he spices his authoritative text with a good seasoning of his candid opinions. Chroman is not hesitant about putting forth his own beliefs and evaluations. But he tends strongly toward the laudatory. Of the Windsor Vineyards owned by Marin's Tiburon Vintners, he writes: "The enterprising winery . . . will certainly make its mark among premium wine producers as more of its vineyards come into production. It will be interesting to observe how seriously the winery makes its bid for a place at the top — which hasn't been reached yet, but recent bottles indicate that at least the winery is on its way." And he writes of the old imported vs. domestic wines argument: "It is not that one country's wines are greater than another's. I don't like comparing wines between regions. It is that they are deliciously different." A system for rating the outstanding wines will interest connoisseurs, and no doubt provide fuel for argument. Maps showing the principal wine-growing regions of the United States are a worthwhile addition. And the illustrations, including color plates, are sometimes outstanding, sometimes ordinary.



The Quotable Isaac Bashevis Singer

A CROWN OF FEATHERS by Isaac Bashevis Singer; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 342 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Jorie Parr.

"Isaac Bashevis Singer is the Chagall of Jewish literature. You can almost see animals all over the sky," commented one of my friends.

"Singer spins old wives' tales," said another.

They are both right, as is the author himself, when he notes that if there is such a thing as truth it is as intricate and hidden as a crown of feathers. The artist creates his own universe.

In this exquisite collection of stories, Isaac Bashevis Singer (it seems disrespectful to separate his names) fascinates with plots and characters from old country and new, crackling with supremely Jewish humor. The Jews, it is said, made jokes on the way to the gas chamber.

Intensely quotable, Singer's text ripples with wit.

On demons: ". . . they are not in New York . . . (they) would get run over by a car . . ."

On love: "In love you don't do favors . . . You have to be an egotist or else you destroy yourself and your lover."

And: "Once an artist possesses a woman, she remains his captive forever."

On redecorating: "Millions of things have been invented, but no one has found a way to avoid the crisis of painting an apartment . . . You see the bitter truth: that a home, like everything else, is just illusion."

On secrecy: "We had never been together in public. We spent our time in the dark, like two bats."

On smoking: "It keeps me indifferent."

On California: "Where do they live?" "In California, like all crackpots."

On debt: "You must buy everything . . . Sooner or later everybody sends you a bill."

On dying: "If you die, you die, but if you live you have to go through the whole comedy."

Meanwhile, the lesson to be learned from Singer is that you don't fool around with the Jewish God.

NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

That indispensible friend of the free-lance writer, old pro or beginner, full or part-time, "Writer's Market," continues to grow, and the 1974 edition totals 910 pages and lists 5,178 paying markets in 152 categories, from greeting card publishers to book publishers.

Its publisher, Writer's Digest of Cincinnati, Ohio, has priced the new version at $9.95, a considerable bargain considering the contents.

Jane Koester and Rose Adkins are the co-editors, and they have done the usual excellent job of producing a practical, reliable reference.

If you are still working out of the 1973 edition, the editors claim that 90 per cent of the listings have undergone changes in the new book. Not a few publishers who have gone out of business have been dropped. And 1,200 of the markets are newcomers to the lists.

The writer attempting to operate without "Writer's Market '74" is imposing a needless handicap upon himself.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

SOME LIE AND SOME DIE by Ruth Rendell; Doubleday, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

It looked like it might be a policeman's nightmare — 80,000 young people thronging onto an English estate for weekend rock festival featuring Zeno Vedast, idol of the moment.

Chief Inspector Wexford, though, hopes the festival succeeds and even wistfully remembers his own youth, which did not include such outings.

His optimism is not shared, however, by his assistant, Inspector Burden, whose own teen-age son is one of the local youth who have joined the out-of-towners at the festival.

At first the festival is almost idyllic — the English sun shines, the young people quietly enjoy the music, and a bit of trash and some nude bathing are the only problems. Then a huge storm blows up, and two young lovers discover a badly mutilated body in a quarry.

The discovery coincides with the end of the festival, and soon the police release the thousands of young people, by now disconsolate and quiet from the murder news and the dripping rain, allowing them to return home however they can.

The police, though, are stuck with a grizzly, messy murder, which ironically seems unconnected with the rock festival.

It's good little tale, with Miss Rendell weaving a counterpoint between the police and the rock music world, and a tidy ending.

There's Only One Rock Composer, And His Name Is Pete Townshend

By BRUCE MEYER

Rock has produced many songwriters, some of them very good. But rock has produced only one composer worthy of the title. His name is Pete Townshend and his orchestra is called The Who.

The Who is one of the teacupful of significant British bands to emerge from the 1960s unscathed. Its original members — Townshend on guitar, John Entwistle on bass, Keith Moon on drums and Roger Daltrey as lead vocal — are still around. Their style, though it has evolved a great deal since the first Who single "Anytime You Want Me" was released in 1965, is intact.

The Who has not yet found the bottom of its considerable pool of creative talent, which is probably why the band is still together.

Townshend's latest opus is "Quadrophenia" (Track MCA2-10004), which is being hailed by some critics — the kind who are always looking around desperately to justify rock as art — as the greatest achievement in music since Beethoven's 9th.

Though "Quadrophenia" is a fine album, the use of such superlatives for what is still essentially rock 'n' roll is neither justifiable nor necessary.

"QUADROPHENIA" is a two-record set, and comes complete with a summary of the story line, lyrics, and a book of nice black-and-white photos to accompany the music. It is basically a much more down-to-earth story than the pinball wizard-cum-savior sage of "Tommy," The Who's first rock "opera." It's all about an English kid named Jimmy, growing up absurd during the mods-and-rockers period of the middle 60's.

The suggestion is that Jimmy is mad — a "quadrophenic," or double schizophrenic. But in reality his main affliction is one that can only be cured by time: youth.

Jimmy is a pretty average mixed-up kid, messing around with drugs, booze and the opposite sex and doing his level best to stay out of touch with reality.

That's plenty about the story line. It really isn't very important, serving primarily as a vehicle for the music, to use a semantic reversal of the McLuhan equation.

"Quadrophenia" is the most perfectly conceived and executed "concept album" ever made. Townshend has worked very hard to achieve continuity and "flow" from track to track, and he has been almost completely successful. It is at once the album's triumph and most significant flaw.

IT IS A TRIUMPH because it accomplishes the goal that dozens of rock bands have been trying to do since the Beatles popularized the "concept" idea with "Sgt. Pepper."

But this near-perfect continuity also grinds away at the individuality of the tracks — and it shows even in the way the band performs the music on stage.

Keith Moon is a truly great drummer, but halfway through "Quadrophenia" his patterns begin to sound alike — and much the same goes for Townshend's patented chord riffs.

Daltrey's vocals are superb — but so similar to his work on "Tommy" it is hard to believe that album is now going on five years old.

Only Entwistle seems to have remembered that "Quadrophenia" — however unified a work it may be — is not a single two-hour tune. His bass lines are innovative and non-repetitive throughout.

Don't get me wrong on all this. I think "Quadrophenia" is a superb album — and The Who is one of my all-time favorite groups. But if I had to pick just one Who album as the best so far, it'd still have to be the two-year-old "Who's Next."

ON THE STEREO SCENE —

Laughing It Up With The Comics: Hope And Gregory Are Funny Fellows

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Bob Hope has been in show business for 50 years, spending most of them as a standup comedian before a live audience.

He is one of those rare persons who can make biting comments on the passing scene without making the butts of his remarks angry. Often he can make the objects of his barbs laugh at themselves.

When Hope first appeared on radio during the Depression years, he cheered up the country with a seemingly endless delivery of one-line wisecracks. It was a successful format in those days and he has never abandoned it.

Audiences expect laughs from Hope. Everything he says is not necessarily funny but the crowds in front laugh anyway.

Bob's latest venture is a comic album, "Holidays" (Spear 4700). There is no hint on the record jacket as to when the recording was made but it must have been some time ago because the material is dated. For instance, there are references to Gertrude Ederle, first woman to swim the English Channel, as though she were strolling the beaches, and to "Dragnet," the TV series which was popular in the 1950s and since has been revived.

One of Hope's dated gags involves the landing of the Pilgrims: "Look, it's America, just as Drew Pearson predicted."

Nevertheless, the album is good for many laughs. Hope pokes much of his fun at Bing Crosby and Jack Benny. In the "Father's Day" segment, Hope speaks of Crosby's children: "Last year they gave Bing the Bank of America. They didn't know he already owned it."

One crack that gets a good laugh is: "All my relatives will be at our Thanksgiving dinner. I know they will. They are circling over the house right now."

LIKE BOB HOPE, Dick Gregory has a sense of timing that delights an audience.

In what is billed as his last live appearance, "Caught in the Act" (Poppy PP-LA176-G2), Gregory keeps his listeners chuckling.

It is a two-record album made last August at Paul's Mall in Boston and is based mostly on Gregory's observations of the political scene, especially Watergate.

Gregory, as usual, gets off to a casual start to get closer to the audience and from then on leads them into a merry romp.

Sometimes Gregory mumbles. At other times he goes into a high-pitched nasal delivery. Yet he never loses the attention of the audience. If you listen to this performance you will find it difficult to stop even though it spans almost two hours.

THIRTEEN YEARS ago, Mel Brooks became one of the funniest comedians on the scene with his characterization of the 2,000-year-old man. In those Carl CarlReReiner played the straight man, feeding Brooks questions that brought hilarious answers.

After more than a dozen years, Reiner and Brooks are back with "2,000 and Thirteen" (Warner Bros. BS 2741). Although there are many laughs as Brooks recalls his part in history, it is not quite as amusing as the earlier recordings. The old man remembers Paul Revere as an anti-Semite and asked why replies: "He yelled, the Yiddish are coming! The Yiddish are coming!" That gets laughs.

And of his parenthood over 2,000 years, the old man says: "I have had 42,000 children and none came to visit me."

THE REASONS FOR SHORTAGE

To bring the real world depressingly close to home, there are the vinyl and paper shortages, which mean there will be fewer records. Particularly critical to the music industry is the lack of polyvinyl chloride, the gooey petroleum-based substance from which records are stamped. Adding to the problem is the paper shortage, which means fewer book-type jackets for single-disc LPs, and a sharp cutback on separate lyric sheets and posters to go in the albums.

Pruning Is Essential To Good Gardening, And Now Is The Time

Pruning is one of the most important and probably one of the least understood aspects of gardening.

The dedicated gardener does his pruning on a year-round basis. He's always pinching back to shape a plant's growth. The novice gardener seldom prunes, and when he does, it may often be by guess.

During the current cool months when plants are dormant, most pruning jobs will be done in California. Deciduous fruit and shade trees, grapes, roses, fuchsias, and certain evergreens should all be cut back — before growth starts again in spring. The gardener who neglects to prune only has himself to blame for any lack of results.

YOUR NURSERY IS a good place to start to learn about pruning or pruning methods. There are manuals on pruning, and some excellent ones that include illustrations and specific information on a wealth of plant materials.

The prime reason to prune is to improve a plant under cultivation; to increase and improve the crop of flowers and-or fruit; and to enhance the appearance of a plant.

The orchardist prunes because he wants the maximum crop consistent with fruit quality and size. The rosarian prunes because he knows that flowers are produced only on new wood and he wants to reduce the proportion of old, non-producing growth on the plant. Pruning is also done to repair damage from wind or frost and to remove dead limbs from a plant.

Lastly, it is done to improve the shape of things grown. This includes training plants in the form you desire.

FOR STARTERS, A most important thing is to have sharp tools. Shears should be razor sharp and a saw should be able to cut cleanly. More plants are damaged by dull tools than by in-experience or wrongly placed cuts. On material over one inch in diameter, nurseries have pruning paints to spread over the cuts. This seals out possible infestation from disease.

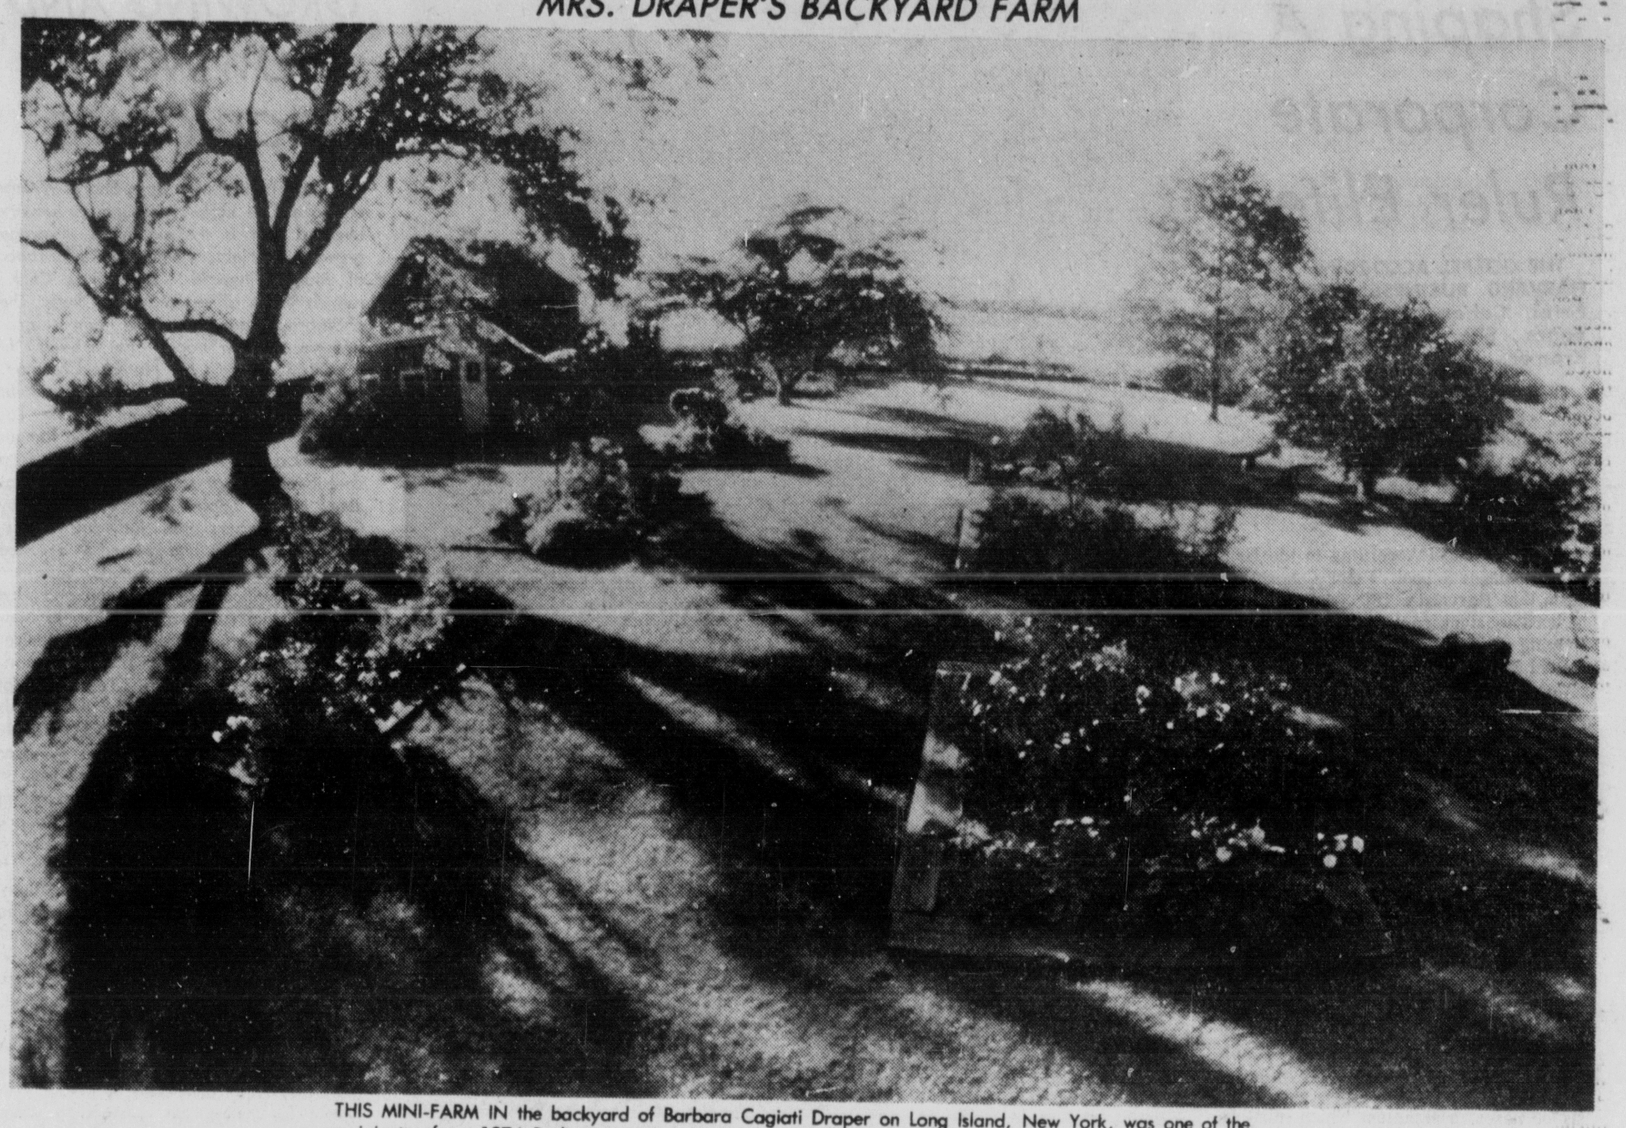
Another important consideration is to know which plants to prune and when. Deciduous fruit trees may be pruned now and so may grapes. In pruning fruit trees, remember excessive pruning results in vigorous new growth, but it is mainly non-fruiting growth. The approach should be to find the balance in pruning where you do just enough to encourage both new growth and a good fruit crop.

If you're growing grapes on a trellis you prune differently. Here's where a manual on pruning is highly valuable.

CERTAIN OVERGROWN ornamentals, such as Rhododendrons or Camellias, may be shaped just before growth starts in spring. These would be normally pruned after flowering. But, if they are rank or overgrown, it may be best to forego some bloom in favor of new fill-in growth.

If in doubt, check with your nurseryman on the various plant materials in your garden. He can provide advice and direct you to the best source of information — to help assure the results you expect.

MRS. DRAPER'S BACKYARD FARM



THIS MINI-FARM IN the backyard of Barbara Cagiati Draper on Long Island, New York, was one of the recipients of a 1974 Burlington House Award for American "Gardens." Judges cited it for its excellent overall design, which, despite limited space and sun, combines miniature fruit-bearing trees, vegetables and flowers planted in a series of eight-by-eight-foot beds, bordered by railroad ties. Gray weathered shingles on the barns add to the poetic effect. Mrs. Draper is an organic gardener. This marks the first year the Burlington House Awards program has been extended to cover gardens as well as interiors.

The World's Showiest Vine Is The Lovely Wisteria

With its grace, beauty of flower, foliage and even fragrance, the Wisteria is the world's showiest vine.

The twisted trunk in itself is an adornment when properly displayed, and even in winter, when the Wisteria has lost its leaves and the great clusters of fragrant flowers are only a memory, the trunk and spreading "limbs" of this vigorous vine hold one's interest.

There are Wisterias ranging in color from white through the lilacs to rich purple and some are quite blue. There also is a delightful pink.

TO GET THE most out of the vine it is wise to select the color to suit the background (or the background to suit the color if that's practical and you want a special color).

Wisteria is a very flexible member of the pea family and can do more than simply cover a wall through spring, summer and fall.

Without difficulty it can be trained up as a small tree and its crown shaped through judicious pruning to take whatever shape you desire. By keeping the strong growing trunk clear of side shoots until the desired height is reached, you develop over the years a sturdy, tree-like trunk. Then you can select the shoots spaced properly to form the crown which you can prune to get a circular shape, rectangular, etc., and head them back when they try to form long whips.

THE WISTERIA IS a vigorous grower and to really make it provide showers of bloom you will have to pinch out the growing tips where possible to encourage the greatest flowering.

Fortunately, very little if anything seems to bother it so your gardening effort in connection with the Wisteria is pretty well confined to shaping it up the way you want it and seeing that it gets enough water and feeding once a month — until July. Don't start feeding again until spring.

Nurserymen have quality Wisteria now — the ones that are certain to bloom well in our area.

You Can Have A Calendar Full Of Camellia Colors

What's the nicest thing about Camellias?

First, the individual blooms are exquisite. The colorations and variegations of color are out-of-this world. And, the plants are excellent choices for landscape situations. The different growth habits, foliage shapes and textures add to their versatility in the garden.

But, perhaps the nicest thing about Camellias is the long, long blooming season.

IF YOU FEEL Camellias are just a springtime color bearer, consider some varieties start blooming in fall, before the start of the football season, and other Camellias provide color into May — into the baseball season.

Your nurseryman can help you plan a Camellia color calendar that stretches over half the year.

The earliest-blooming Camellias are the Sasanquas which start flowering in fall and there are myriad Japonica and Reticulata forms that will provide beauty and enjoyment later — in the winter, spring and early-summer garden.

SASANQUA CAMELLIAS are enjoying unprecedented popularity today. Their willowy growth and many uses in the landscape — as a foundation shrub, accent plant, ground cover, tub specimen or hanging basket plant — and the single and double flowers radiate much beauty in their surroundings. Many Sasanquas are used for espaliering against flat surfaces or on trellises. Nurseries have them pre-started on trellises; shopping undoubtedly will reveal these dependable performers being available as patio trees and in hanging baskets.

The foliage of Sasanquas is smaller than that of their later-blooming cousins and this adds interest in the garden.

In most areas of the state, the earliest Japonica Camellias start blooming by the first of the year, though in many climes they often show color in November-December. Japonicas feature the magnificent flower forms that include formal doubles, big peony-type blooms, and breathtaking singles, to mention but a few forms. To further delight gardeners, these are divided into bloom categories.

There are Japonicas that bloom early, mid-season, or that flower late. Your color parade can continue to provide beauty and enjoyment for months and months.

How You Prune Your Roses Will Determine Their Future

The big challenge for the amateur rose grower; at this time of year, is how to make the most of the rose's potential with proper pruning.

Experts agree that a weak bush should be pruned severely. This practice forces new shoots from the base of the plant which will probably be more sturdy.

With the development of stronger hybrid rose varieties rose growers recommend that the length of cane left be determined according to the strength of the variety being pruned. Some, with a natural upright growth habit and strong canes can be left with canes up to two feet, others cut back to 15 inches.

ONE OTHER consideration in determining the amount of pruning is the type of rose. Climbing roses are only thinned, whereas most other roses are cut to five and six canes of uniform length.

Pruning experts agree it is best to discourage center growth. Keeping an open center by eliminating shoots coming out from the middle of the plant insures that the remaining canes will have plenty of light and air.

The pruner must also select the place at which he makes the cuts very carefully. Each cut should be made one-quarter inch above a bud which faces away from the shrub's center.

THE HOME gardener should note the bearing limit of the canes in each bush and be prepared to select younger canes to take over when the older canes reach their limit. Canes bear anywhere from five to 10 years before they need be removed; the exact time depends upon the tardiness of the variety.

During the year that the home gardener knows is the last for one of his canes; select one of the strong shoots coming up from the ground, or stem of a tree rose, and tip it once to force it to become more sturdy. Then, when mid-winter pruning time arrives, he will have a sturdy young shoot to take the place of the worn out cane.

According to the California Association of Nurserymen, in the mild areas of California, rose pruning may begin in mid-January.

IN COLDER AREAS, the recommendation is that the bushes be cut back a third or more in late fall, and then the job finished in February or March.

The determining factor is how late the winter lasts in your vicinity.

If you are in doubt, consult the nurseryman who knows your neighborhood, and follow his advice.

And while you are at the nursery, take a look at those beautiful new roses that he has in bareroot form for easy planting.

Don't Go Hog-Wild On Species Of Trees

Use restraint in the number of different tree species planted in a land-space development, advises J. R. Welch, landscape horticulturist for Texas A&M University's agricultural extension service.

Too much variety results in confusion and lack of unity, Welch says.

He suggests homeowners consider year-round interest in foliage, flower, fruit and bark as well as placement for proper shade and sun needs and a proper balance between evergreen and deciduous trees.

"Make trees a part of an overall landscape plan," Welch says.

The Hanging Basket Offers Opportunity For Individuality

More and more Californians are discovering that hanging baskets are a refreshing and lovely way to showcase the beauty of trailing plants.

There is a huge, extraordinary selection of handsome plants for hanging basket use, and the myriad types and shapes of suitable containers available today is unbelievable.

Besides the traditional redwood forms, and the wire baskets that are lined with spaghnum moss, nurseries today have ceramic containers for suspending from on high, distinctive plastic creations, and glassware, as well. Some containers are uniquely-shaped and plants merely complement the handiwork.

Shopping for containers and hanging basket-type plants to use in them is a fun experience. Of course, there are many enthusiasts that are just as satisfied with using red clay or terra cotta pots and using wire hangers to suspend the overhead planter. Where spreading plants such as tufted Plectranthus, Sprenger's Fern, and Grape Ivy are concerned, the container is generally hidden.

The gray-green, succulent-like Donkey Tail and uniquely-shaped Sedum seiboldi, are go-togethers with distinctive containers. Other plants to consider for special jardinnieres, or pottery mobiles, include certain Scented Geraniums, Hare's Foot Fern, and dark green Tryshosporum (Lipstick Plant).

When it comes to Ferns, the California Association of Nurserymen reports a pair of relative newcomers is exciting gardeners. A compact form of Sprenger's Fern, featuring needle-like foliage and a semi-arching growth habit, is worth shopping for, as it seems perfect in a hanging basket. So does Meyer's Fern, sold as Asparagus meyeri. The cone-like, arching fronds defy description — the plant is that unusual. Its fresh green appearance and stately beauty accounts for its great demand.

It's also possible to enjoy the floral beauty of Azaleas and certain Sasanqua Camellias from on high. Nurseries offer the plants in ready-to-enjoy hanging baskets.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔Shade trees should be planted now, not later when you think of their shade. Bareroot stock is easier to handle and will make a fast start in the spring if their roots become established now in the winter rains.

✔You can get some good buys in spring-blooming bulbs now. Put them in immediately for a good show of bloom this spring. Tulips, Hyacinths and Daffodils are the big ones.

✔Prune Roses when the buds begin to swell. In some areas this will be now. In others, not until later in the month or early next month.

✔Cut back that Ivy that has grown out of bounds. You can shear it severely with hedge clippers.

✔Clean up any leaves that were overlooked last month. Use a dormant spray to get garden pests before their eggs or larvea develop.

✔A bird-feeder kept supplied will bring life and entertainment into your backyard, even on the dreariest of days.

✔Now is the time to study those garden books for planting and landscaping ideas for 1974. There are a lot of good ones.

Taking The Chill Out Of The Fuel Crisis, And Doing It The Safe And Sane Way

Don't let the home heating fuel shortage get you burned up — literally!

That is the word from the National Safety Council, which warns against using hurry-up "panic-power" sources to heat your home this winter.

"People will seek a variety of ways to keep warm this season and some of their choices will be extremely dangerous," noted Hans Grigo, technical advisor for the NSC's Home Department. "Many people will be dusting off heating devices recovered from the attic, basement, garage or summer cabin. Often the items such as electric, oil, and kerosene space heaters are in bad shape from long years of disuse or abuse. These resurrected heat sources should be carefully inspected by an expert before you allow them to be used in your home.

"I cannot stress enough the importance of having these heaters checked over for safety. Failure to take this step, I fear, is toying with needless tragedy."

OTHERS WILL BE getting into the fireplace habit.

"But fireplaces are a lot of work, as any hearth afficionado can attest to. Novices should make sure they know the basics of fireplace procedures and precautions before they light the first match," he stated.

NSC statistics show that fireplaces are a common cause of fire in the home. Most of these mishaps occur because the fireplaces have no spark screens or are poorly constructed and maintained.

"Check from the hearth up to the chimney with care. An unclean and unrepaired fireplace is a hazard. Not only can a serious fire start from resins coating the flue area, but a blocked chimney can send deadly toxic gases wafting throughout the house."

GRIGO SUGGESTS using hardwoods as kindling since they produce less resin than soft woods.

Keep your fires manageable, since it is not the size of the blaze but the degree to which the masonry is heated that determines the continuing warmth of the room.

Grigo expressed concern about reports that barbecue grills are becoming a hot sales item perhaps in lieu of the traditional gas or electric cooking stoves.

"Charcoal-burning barbecue units have no place inside the home," he warns. The charcoal releases deadly carbon monoxide gases, which in an unventilated area, can kill an entire family.

The traditional coal and wood burning 'pot-belly' stove also is said to be in the throes of revival. Instructions concerning the installation, operation and maintenance of the stoves must be carefully followed. The stove must be properly vented to a chimney, and children must be warned to stay away from the unit.

BUT YOU CAN be both safe and snug this winter. The NSC Home Department has come up with these commonsense home heating tips.

Make sure your home is well insulated with good and sound weather stripping and caulking around windows. Install storm windows and storm doors. Don't, however, completely seal off your house with these materials.

Seal off the openings in unused chimneys and close dampers in idle fireplaces.

Zone your house. Close off the unused or infrequently used portions of your house or apartment and reduce the heat in those areas if possible. Keep closet, pantry and storage area doors closed.

Use heavy drapes to keep in the heat and block out the cold during evening hours and very cold spells.

Keep your bedroom doors closed at night. This practice keeps your bedroom cooler and inhibits deadly gases from entering the room in case of night-time fire. If you are fearful of not being able to hear your children at night, you may want to invest in an intercom system which can be bought at nominal expense.

Keep all heating devices in top shape. Make sure they are properly maintained and cleaned.

Make sure you are using the proper fuel for your heating devices. Never use a substitute fuel without first checking with an expert.

SPACE HEATERS can warm up a room, although they are not an efficient or economical means, and precaution should be taken to insure their safe use. Make sure your electric heater has a tip-over switch which shuts off the device automatically, should the unit be accidentally tipped over. Avoid using any fuel-burning device that isn't vented to the outside, especially in bedrooms. Extra fuel for your liquid-fueled space heaters should not be stored near the unit while it is in operation.

An electric heater should not be used in the bathroom because of the danger of fatal shock.

"Using your heating devices wisely, you should enjoy a warm and safe winter this year. Get used to wearing a sweater in your home during the power pinch. And don't take chances with makeshift, make-do heating methods," Grigo cautions.

Caulking Has Taken On A Greater Importance

By ANDY LANG

Exterior caulking has always been essential to the well-being of a house.

The energy crisis has catapulted it into new prominence as a vital ingredient in a program to keep heat inside a house during cold weather and outside of it during warm weather.

Those who have been conscientious about caulking inspections have done so chiefly to prevent the entrance of water, which can damage inside walls, ceilings and floors. Rain entering a tiny gap in the outside of a house can move along a beam and show up on a ceiling many feet away from the original point of entry.

Such an opening always did admit air and thus play havoc with heating and air-conditioning systems, forcing them to work overtime and thus waste energy, but not until now has there been a recognition of this aspect of gaps in the exterior of a house.

IN LOOKING FOR openings, particular attention must be paid to window and door frames and wherever dissimilar materials meet; in short, wherever there are joints. Ideally, such inspections should be made twice a year, in the spring and in the fall, but if you haven't made one in a long time (or perhaps never), do it now.

There may be a gap which admits air and yet has never come to your attention simply because no leak has shown itself inside the house.

Caulking compound is available in bulk and in disposable cartridges. While the bulk product that comes in a can is a bit cheaper, the cartridge is easier to use. It is merely slipped into an inexpensive caulking gun and activated by pulling a trigger.

THE BIG VIRTUE of good quality caulking compound is that, while it develops a semihard surface, it remains elastic underneath. This enables it to "give" when the materials around it expand and contract.

When an opening is discovered, an old screwdriver, awl or similar tool should be used to clear out all pieces of old compound or anything else that is loose to the touch.

The caulking gun is held at the angle to the surface, and the trigger squeezed with a steady pressure. The bevel on the nozzle should be held parallel to the surface. It takes just a little practice to get the hang of it.

Occasionally, an opening is large enough so that it may be wise to stuff most of it with oakum, a rope-like material, or a type of caulking compound that also has the appearance of rope. When I have had to use oakum, I pushed it into the opening about half an inch below the surface, then filled up the remainder of the opening with caulking compound.

CAULKING COMES in a variety of colors, but most stores carry only white, gray and black. The white and gray can be painted successfully, but the black contains asphalt and may bleed through paint. That is why black is used around roof and gutters, where it can be left as is.

The cartridge or container usually will tell you whether that particular brand or type can be painted.

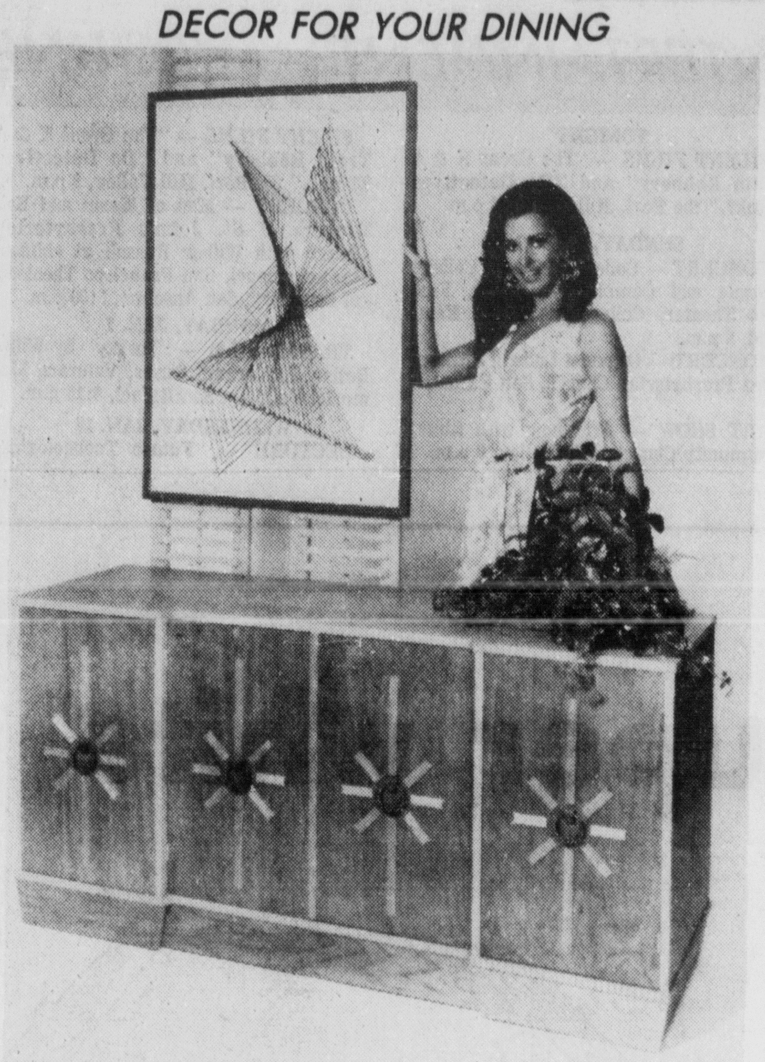
DECOR FOR YOUR DINING



IF IT'S DISTINCTIVE decor you wish for your dining, then build the handsome buffet being shown above by actress Edy Williams. It is wide enough to service an entire buffet dinner. Yet, it's main purpose is the storage of linens, silver and dinner ware. It is ideal as well as a liquor cabinet. And could even house a television or stereo set. The buffet shown was built of birch plywood, but you can use any of the fancier dark plywoods. For Buffet Pattern 412, send $1.50 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. And if, at the same time, you would like to dress up the plain wall behind the buffet — or elsewhere in the house, send another $1 to the same address and ask for Abstract Pictures Pattern 413. With celotex background, moulding frame, map tacks and yarn (choose your own colors), you can create the geometric pattern in three dimensions being shown by Miss Williams.

HERE'S YOUR ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I bought a new flush door to install between the major part of our basement and the laundry room. An opening is already there, so I got the door to fit. But what I am not sure about is exactly where to install the hinges and the lock. I thought I would measure the other doors in the house to find the correct distances, but I find the hinges and locks are located at different positions. Are there any set places for the hardware?

A. — While there are some differences, due to sizes and weights of the doors, they are very slight. Since a flush door usually is very light, install the upper hinge about seven inches from the top, the lower hinge about nine inches from the bottom. The height of a doorknob is usually 36 inches from the floor.

Q. — I am having some trouble getting water to flow away from one of the downspouts on our house. A neighbor of mine has placed underground drainage tile from the bottom of a downspout to a dry well. In our case, there is a drainage ditch about 20 feet from the house. Could I lay the underground tile so that it runs into the ditch?

A. — If the drainage ditch is on your property, go ahead. Otherwise you may have to get someone's permission. In placing the tile, there should be a downward pitch of one inch or more for each foot of tile.

Q. — The hardware store in our neighborhood has nails of different sizes placed in separate bins. Each bin has a designation, such as 4d, 5d and 6d. Why aren't nails specified by length to make it easier for the customer?

A. — Some stores already have adopted that system, but many, such as yours, still use the old English designation of d, which means "penny," presumably because nails originally were sold by weight— that is, a certain number of ounces per penny. The best idea for you is to save the following information for reference:

A nail called 2d is one inch in length, 3d is 1¼; 4d is 1½; 5d is 1¾; 6d is 2; 7d is 2¼; 8d is 2½; 9d is 2¾; and 10d is three inches. These designations are for common nails.

How Handy Are You With That Hammer? There Is A Technique

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

We've all heard the expression "he can't hammer a nail straight."

Well, a lot of persons can't.

Not because they are clumsy or lacking in coordination. It's simply because they aren't using hammers correctly.

If you have been using a hammer all your life and have never bent a nail or cracked a thumb, you may be doing it right instinctively. Or maybe you're just lucky. To the thousands of others, I'd like to pass along a few fundamentals that not only will enable you to hammer property but will appreciably cut down fatigue when a lot of hammering is to be done.

THE HAMMER should be held down at the bottom of the handle. It should be swung with the wrist. Your wrist should bend back towards your body on the upward stroke and away from your body on the downward stroke.

You need use only the wrist for small nails and light tapping. For harder blows, the entire arm comes into play, but always in conjunction with the movement of the wrist.

The nail should be held in place for the first tap or two with one hand while the hammer is held in the other. This is the kind of tap in which only the wrist comes into play. Once the nail has entered the wood far enough so that it can stand by itself, the non-hammer hand can be removed.

NATURALLY, YOU must strike the nail squarely with the face of the hammer if you want it to enter the wood in a straight line. If you have started it properly and deliver the blows as previously explained, you will have no trouble doing this. If, despite your best efforts, the nail does bend, it is better to withdraw it and start a new one than attempt to straighten it out by hitting it at an angle, as so many persons do.

The hammer most of us use is called a claw hammer because of the claw-like portion opposite the face, which is the striking part.

The claw is for withdrawing nails. It is placed under the nail head and pulled towards you. When the handle has reached a vertical or nearly-vertical position, a piece of wood should be placed under the hammer head. This increases the leverage, avoids strain on the hammer handle and prevents damaging the wood.

Even The Novice Handyman Can Install Hardboard Panels

Some remodeling jobs are easier said than done. But prefinished hardboard wall paneling can actually be installed by a relatively inexperienced "hand."

The job does require some carpentry tools, some work room and some patience. It's also essential to heed manufacturer's instructions. Basically, though, these are the steps that lead to a spanking new paneled wall:

1. Measure the length and height of the walls (subtracting window and door openings) to determine the number of panels needed. Standard size hardboard panels are four-by-eight feet.

2. Panels can be installed right on the wall if it's smooth and even. If it's not, put up furring strips first. When paneling over masonry, waterproof the wall before furring.

3. It's wise to condition panels before installation to minimize dimensional changes that might otherwise occur after the panels are up. All that's involved is standing the panels on edge around the room so that air can circulate freely around them for at least 24 hours. If the room has abnormal moisture conditions, further preparation may be necessary. Check with dealers on this.

4. Always start installation in a corner. Use an accurate level to make sure the first panel — and each succeeding one — is perfectly plumb before it is fastened.

5. For simplified fastening, special adhesives are available. They're waterproof and come in caulking type "guns" for easy, even application to furring strips, wall surfaces and studs. Follow directions carefully to assure good bonding. The wall surface must be clean, and panels must be supported firmly in place until the adhesive sets.

If nails are preferred, the color-matched kind eliminates the need for countersinking and puttying holes.

6. Hardboard panels should not be butted tightly together. Leave a slight space (about the thickness of a matchbook cover) between. This allows for the natural expansion due to temperature or moisture changes that can occur in any wood product.

7. When paneling around windows and doors or over electrical outlets, be sure to measure exactly and cut panels precisely. Sometimes window and door frames must be built up a bit to equal the thickness of furring strips before the paneling is applied.

8. For a finished look, install moldings, around the windows and doors, in corners, and at baseboard and ceiling. Vinyl-clad moldings and baseboards which match prefinished panels are available to simplify the job.

Hardboard panels can be cut and worked with ordinary carpentry tools. They saw smoothly and withstand hammer blows and other surface impacts without denting, splitting or splintering.

Prefinished panels, which come in a wide variety of woodgrain designs, colors and patterns, don't need painting or staining. An occasional damp wiping keeps them looking new for a long time.

THE ENTRY to a split-level house as shown at right gained new eye appeal and new utility through the simple strategy of switching the roles of the closet and the shelves. The wider but shallow closet was opened to serve as bookshelving, with a bench for built-in storage added. What was originally a too-narrow bookshelf was deepened and converted into a closet, enclosed with folding louvered wooden doors. Presto! A new look! And much greater functionality.

Books And Bench Brighten Entry

Adding entryway built-ins for storage, display and seating can greatly increase the usefulness of this often ignored part of the house, while enhancing the first impression offered visitors.

The entry is the best easy-access area for storing outdoor gear used during different seasons of the year, but some entries have little storage space. And others have idle walls or space that is inefficiently planned.

A brighter reception area and a more useful storage arrangement were gained in the split-level entry of one home by reversing the placement of closet and shelves on the upper level landing.

A WIDE SHALLOW closet at the head of the stairs was opened and transformed into a bookshelf alcove, with a long cushioned bench for reading or to sit on while putting on foul-weather footwear.

Four full-length shelves of one-by-10-inch western pine boards were added, for books and to display an interesting collection of baskets. A reading lamp on an end wall makes this comfortable part of the adjacent living room.

The built-in bench has a hinged seat that lifts to provide storage and the bright blue cushioned cover adds a color accent to the room.

NEXT TO THE new alcove, the area that formerly was bookshelves and storage was made deeper and enclosed with louvered wood doors for expanded closet space. A smaller coat closet on the lower landing was retained.

In smaller entries where there is only a coat closet, storage shelves can be added above the coat rack, or on the floor under that part of the rack used for jackets and short coats.

In houses where there is no entry closet, a free-standing room divider-closet can be framed with two-by-four-inch western wood and enclosed with louvered wood doors.

The Right Brush

In painting the wooden frame of a screen, use a small, oval-shape sash brush.

Adding Some 'Elbow Room' To The Overcrowded Home

How can a mere 48-square-foot addition costing $600 or less for materials make a home more livable?

Simply by adding a six-by-eight-foot alcove through an outer wall of any room that needs space relief, advises Alex Pierce, Portland, Ore., architect.

As a bunk room, such an alcove opens up a small bedroom for play and study space for young borhters. As a sewing room, it knocks out the need for stowing everything away at mealtime.

This little "elbow room" can serve as music space, den, game room, bar, kitchenette or pantry.

The home handyman can handle the whole project, attaching it to the side of the house and opening the wall for access. Expensive heating, rewiring and foundation work are not needed.

Sorting Bins Aid Recycling

Organization takes some of the nuisance out of recycling paper, glass and metal. One installation solves the separation and storage problems simultaneously.

Framing an enclosure with hinged lids in utility room, back porch or garage for three open refuse cans keeps cans, bottles and garbage separate.

If the storage is along an outside wall, doors can be cut into the wall to facilitate emptying cans from the outside. An open frame of two-by-four-inch lumber will hold recyclable newspapers neatly until pickup.

The Collector At Columbia

Most people who collect records are dedicated to music, whether it is rock, classic or in between.

Generally, they do not wish to part with even one record in a collection of thousands. As the years go by, some of these records become valuable items while others are worthless, despite their age.

Robert Altshuler, an executive at Columbia Records, has amassed a library of more than 150,000 records — most of them 78 rpm's by jazz artists.

Although Altshuler keeps close guard on his collection, he has made records available to other recording companies which need rare items to round out jazz anthologies.

Some of Altschuler's records, most of them on the old Brunswick label, may be heard on an outstanding album of jazz music from the past, "Teddy Wilson and His All-Stars" (Columbia KG 31617).

THE FASCINATING CITY of Istanbul is one of the places the armchair traveler visits in Willis Butler's color travel film, "Turkey," to be shown Monday at 8:15 p.m. in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center. It's a rare opportunity to view close-up an off-the-tourist-trail land seen by only a relatively few westerners.

Color TV Comes To Zanzibar

By ANDREW TORCHIA

ZANZIBAR (AP) — At the end of a steamy day, electronic voices bounce off the crumbling walls of this ancient Arab town. Shadows flickering across carved doorways take on rainbow hues. Zanzibar tunes in for another night of color TV.

It's the only color television in Africa and, to Western eyes, it couldn't win a ratings fight with the tiredest Hollywood rerun. But it's bringing unexpected social change among 350,000 TV-hungry Zanzibaris.

THIS ISLAND repository of strict Moslem morality and Chinese-style socialism now boasts cigarette commercials, a popular quiz show and a pretty girl news announcer.

Recorded testimony from the treason trial of 63 accused in the killing of Sheikh Abeid Karume, the island leader, offers an unprecedented glimpse of judicial processes.

There's no intention, though, of opening Zanzibar to "I Love Lucy" and other commercial Western influences. The main aim is indoctrination, not entertainment.

Nor are Zanzibaris much interested in non-commercial films provided by foreign embassies.

"Why should we show a U.S. Information Service film on the astronauts when most people on Zanzibar don't believe men have been to the moon?" one asked.

"WE THINK WE can educate the masses better through television than by opening afternoon classes," said Aboud Jumbe, a former biology teacher and Karume's successor.

Color TV is a double oddity on Zanzibar, which retains semi-independence under the Republic of Tanzania government in Dar es Salaam. Karume's order for $2,800,000 of British Phillips Pye equipment defied Dar es Salaam's ban on television as a luxury in a country among the 25 poorest in the world.

Most African states with TV run black-and-white stations on a shoestring but Karume could afford the additional cost of color. Zanzibar keeps its accounts separate from the mainland and has 84 million dollars in foreign reserves from selling cloves.

Telecasts from two studios in a converted municipal building began last March. Three thousand 26-inch sets sold out in 15 days at a duty-free price of $300.

"WE HAD problems," said Anthony Mendes, a 55-year-old mechanical engineer who had seen television a few times before taking over as TV director. "We had no scenery, no technicians, no producers. We didn't know what television was."

Training trips to England got Mendes and his men over the first hurdles. Two men picked to become Zanzibar's first TV producers are returning soon after studying techniques in the United States.

The programming one recent evening seemed guaranteed to glaze anyone's gaze. Talk shows explained how schools and health services operate. Newscasts ignored the Middle East war and any other events outside the island.

A MAN demonstrated how to ride a bicycle by riding around the studio. Other programs urged Zanzibaris to clean up their front yeards and to grow green peppers.

But Mendes worries about how to fill prime time as the trial, his mainstay for more than six months, nears an end. He hopes for help from a new $700,000 broadcasting van that will permit telecasts from locations outside the studios.

Meanwhile, Mendes takes quiet satisfaction from the sale of 120 TV sets in Dar es Salaam, the capital that had banned television. The mainland gets the message every night from Zanzibar — and in color.

The one for CBS is "Steam Bath," based on Bruce Jay Friedman's New York stage play of recent memory. "Room Mates," the ABC venture, is about the adventures of two young women in a contemporary California setting, one a female activist and the other a traditional type.

Gary Crosby, one of Der Bingle's progey, has become a regular on NBC's weekly "Chase" series in the role of Officer Rice. Gary has been seen for some time in the recurring role of Officer Wells on the "Adam-12" series.

JOHN WAYNE stars in his Academy Award-winning role as Deputy Marshal "Rooster" Cogburn, a one-eyed, hard-bitten, hard-drinking lawman who sets out in search of a brutal killer on "True Grit." Kim Darby, also in photo, and Glen Campbell also star in the movie to be shown Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

It's A Little Hard To Categorize TV's Gary Owens

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Owens, known to millions as the hand-to-ear announcer on "Laugh-In," is a man of many parts.

The author part was in town the other day to discuss literary matters.

The matter was his third book. It concerns what to do while holding the phone. One suggestion: "Write a 10,000 word essay on why Vincent Van Gogh would not have enjoyed stereo."

THE 119-PAGE volume also has many historical facts about phones, but Owens forgot to talk about them. In fact, he forgot to talk about the book because other matters came up.

Most people think of Owens — a slender, vaguely professional native of Mitchell, S.D. — as America's weirdest announcer because of "Laugh-In," which NBC cancelled last year after six seasons.

But he insists: "I'm not really an announcer. It's a misnomer."

Finding the right nomer is hard. He's an actor, with some 50 other TV shows in his logbook. He's a voice on TV cartoons and on the 400 or so radio and TV commercials he estimates he does in a year. He also writes and has made five comedy albums.

ON TOP OF ALL that, he's a top-rated disc jockey at KMPC in Los Angeles, a city where he and deejays like him emit the wildest, funniest brand of humor heard anywhere in the United States.

Owens said he got his "Laugh-In" job in strange way.

He and George Schlatter, then head of the show, were lunching one day at a Burbank restaurant near the "Laugh-In" headquarters.

They went into the bathroom to wash up. Owens, noticing how their voices bounced off the tiles, cupped a hand to his ear like an old-style radio announcer and intoned: "My, the acoustics are good in here."

Whereupon, he said, "Schlatter says, 'Oh, hey, keep that in.' And I said, 'What, you want me to wash my hands on the show?'

"I RETAINED that one character throughout the show," he said, cupping a hand to his ear. "I came on like a 1930s announcer and said thing like: 'The Eiffel Tower in Paris, France, is not really made of Eiffel after all.' "

Owens, who began as a disc jockey in Omaha, disclosed that his career also has included a brief stint as a TV newscaster, a stint that laid an egg because of a chicken suit.

He wore the chicken suit as host of a daytime kiddie show on TV back in 1957. Thirty minutes later, he's show up again on the air in a business suit, doing five minutes of news.

AFTER THE kiddie show one day, he stopped to talk and lost track of time. Suddenly, he had only three minutes before his news show and there he was, still in his chicken suit.

"There wasn't time to change, so I go on, with my beak and feathers, and I say, 'Good afternoon. Federal mediators on Capitol Hill today . . .' The manager said I'd set news back 100 years."

PHILIP CARY, left, and Peter Graves join forces to tack down a vicious killer wolf that seems to have supernatural powers in "Scream of the Wolf," a tale of terror on the "Wednesday Movie of the Week" at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

In Hollywood, Wolves Have Gone To Dogs

Hollywood wolves aren't what they used to be. In fact, they never were.

Now, before upsetting anyone, it should be pointed out that this refers to the four-footed kind, not the biped variety, whose reputation shall remain unsullied.

Producer-director Dan Curtis, in looking for a large wolf to play in "Scream of the Wolf," an ABC Television Network movie to be shown this Wednesday at 9:30 p.m., couldn't find one.

Property master Ted Berkeley scoured the animal rental spots around Hollywood and came up with one wolf. However, the lobo blew his chance to be a howling success when Curtis judged him too small for the menacing role.

"I was looking for a large timber wolf type," said Curtis, whose company (with Metromedia) produced the movie with stars Peter Graves, Clint Walker, Jo Ann Pflug and Philip Carey. "The wolf that came into the office was the size of an average dog. I needed an animal who could fill the bill as a killer whose size and strength boggles everyone in the story."

CHRISTIAN JUTTNER, playing Mouse Fawley, huddles against a wall in fear of a bully in a scene from the "ABC Afterschool Specials" presentation of "Pssst! Hammerman's After You!," airing on Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11. It deals with how an 11-year-old learns to deal with the threat of violence, and is based on Betsy Byar's book, "The 18th Emergency."

BERKELEY FINALLY has veteran animal trainer Cindy James bring in a giant German Shepherd named Concho. Berkeley had Cindy spray Concho a wolfish gray-brown first, and then introduced the dog to Curtis. Concho was hired on the spot with a paw shake.

"Wolves are very difficult to train, almost impossible," pointed out Cindy, who is the stepdaughter of the late Edgar Rice Burroughs, creator of Tarzan. "There have been wolves in films but they are so unpredictable that actors are afraid to work with them. You can make a movie dog act mad or vicious and when the scene is over, the dog stops acting. Not so the wolf. Once he's mad, he stays mad."

Cindy points out that there nave been many cases of domesticated wolves, but they are kept as pets and not trained to act as wild wolves.

"THAT'S ANOTHER thing," she continued, "how wolves act and how people expect them to act are very different. The popular image of the wolf is a snarling animal, fangs bared, ready to rip apart any living creature. When they're attacking and mad, yes. But normally, the wolf is a family animal, loyal and kind to his mate and cubs and other members of the pack. But even your pet dog turn vicious on provocation."

As for Concho, a pooch in wolf's clothing, he acts exactly like everyone's idea of a wolf — he snarls, bites, claws, and in general, scares the daylights out of the entire cast. But, then, Concho has been a "wolf" before, in the film, "Man in the Wilderness" and in two other TV shows.

There is one thing that bothers Curtis, however: "What if there's a wolves lib movement. Can you imagine the howl they'll set up?"

FORMER ASTRONAUT Neil Armstrong, the first man to set foot on the moon, relates the adventures of five city-oriented youths who are exposed to the wilderness of South Africa when he narrates the special, "Trial by Wilderness," Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Youths Learn Lessons In African Wilderness

Mary Unwin, an 18-year-old high school graduate from Norwich, England, and James Allen, 19, a college student from New York, have seen the wilderness of Africa, and city life will never be the same.

They are two of the five urban-oriented young adults whose trek through the wild country of South Africa's Zululand region was filmed for the special, "Trial By Wilderness," which is narrated by former astronaut Neil Armstrong.

It will be colorcast on the NBC Television Network Thursday at 8 p.m.

THE FIVE SET out to learn how to live in the wild and how to better appreciate and protect the unspoiled land. They were guided by Barry Clements, director of The Wilderness Leadership School, a non-profit organization dedicated to the conservation of wildlife and the environment.

In an epilogue to the program, Mary and Jim reveal how the trek has affected them.

Said Mary: "One feels the need to hang on to what we've got in the way of wilderness areas in the world. And they shouldn't be allowed to shrink into nothing. It really does humble you, this wilderness."

IN HIS REACTION Allen stresses the freedom and the awareness he felt as an individual walking through the open country. Then, he contracts his stay in Zululand to being on the streets of New York City. "But now, in the city, I found myself, step by step, shutting off parts of my hearing, parts of my vision. You know. . . not looking at the garbage; not hearing the air hammers. Gradually, by shutting off part of my senses, I've had to shut down part of myself."

Among the challenges presented to the quintet by Clements was a 15-mile march without water to a river.

Allen recalled the incident recently. He said: "At the start, it seemed to be a regular hike and the idea of water being at the end of the march made the whole thing easy. Psychologically, the empty canteens had their effect. We became thirstier as we walked. On the march Clements told us to think about water, about how we use it at home and how we waste it.

"I REMEMBER IT was about four in the afternoon when we were told we were approaching a river. We could drink and then swim — it sure sounded cool and inviting. When we got there we found it was a dry river bed. We weren't mad. Just tired.

"Then Clements told us if we really wanted water we could dig for it. We did and there was the water darkening the sand. At the time, I thought it was the sweetest water I had ever tasted."

Mary remarked on the camper's lack of privacy. "It involved a certain amount of compromise among ourselves. We fitted in very well, I felt, as a group. We required very little tolerance at all. It was something in itself to wash in the Umfolozi River without worrying too much to see whether everyone else could see you. This sort of thing became secondary to the experience of being in the wilderness itself."

RECORDS IN 1973

The Year That Dawn Struck Like Thunder

By MARY CAMPBELL

"Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Ole Oak Tree," a song that lots of people insist is a true story about a man coming home from Vietnam or prison, sung by Tony Orlando and Dawn, was the biggest-selling pop record of 1973 — with sales beyond five and a half million copies.

It was Dawn's biggest year by far, with more giant hits with long titles, "Say, Has Anybody Seen My Sweet Gypsy Rose?" and "Who's in the Strawberry Patch with Sally?"

Second biggest hit record of the year was "Bad Bad Leroy Brown" by Jim Croce, who was killed at age 30, just after that hit and as he was making it big as an entertainer. His chartered plane crashed on takeoff after a concert Sept. 20 at Northwestern Louisiana University in Natchitoches. After his death, his records continued to become hits, "I Got a Name," "Time in a Bottle."

NEXT BIGGEST selling singles of the year, according to Billboard Magazine, are, in order: "Killing Me Softly with his Song," Roberta Flack; "Let's Get it On," Marvin Gaye; "My Love," Paul McCartney and Wings; "Why Me?", Krist Kristofferson; "Crocodile Rock," Elton John; "Will It Go Round in Circles?", Billy Preston; "You're So Vain," Carly Simon, and "Touch Me in the Morning," Diana Ross.

Deodato had the top singles pop instrumental of 1973, the music from "2001." Eumir Deodato, 29, pianist from Brazil, arranged the "Also Sprach Zarathustra" for his 10-man group, Deodato.

Kristofferson married singer Rita Coolidge in 1973 and they started making duet records. Billy Preston went on the Rolling Stones's European tour, performing with his own all-keyboard band, the God Squad, and then joining the Stones during their set.

TOP SELLING albums of the year, also according to Billboard, were, in order: "The World Is a Ghetto," War; "Summer Breeze,", Seals and Crofts; "Talking Book," Stevie Wonder; "No Secrets," Carly Simon; "Lady Sings the Blues," Diana Ross; "They Only Come Out at Night," Edgar Winter Group; "I Am Woman," Helen Reddy; "Don't Shoot Me, I'm Only the Piano Player," Elton John;

"I'm Still in Love with You," Al Green; "Seventh Sojourn," Moody Blues; "Dark Side of the Moon," Pink Floyd; "Hot August Night," Neil Diamond; "Loggins and Messina;" "Catch Bull at Four," Cat Stevens, and "Billion Dollar Babies," Alice Cooper.

Wonder was injured in an automobile accident Aug. 6 in Salisbury, N.C., but made several appearances to show how well he'd recovered. Miss Reddy piled up the hit singles: "Delta Dawn," "Leave Me Alone." Diamond wrote the music for "Jonathan Livingston Seagull," claimed that some music had been cut without his approval.

COOPER GAVE a big bash on Halloween night at New York's Waldorf Astoria, recorded with just about everybody, played a 58-city tour that grossed between four and six million dollars. Another big, fancy party was for Procol Harum's "Grand Hotel" LP, at the Plaza; some guest found wearing formal clothes fun the first time they'd tried it.

The top country single of the year was Conway Twitty's "You've Never Been this Far Before." Charlie Rich was second with "Behind Closed Doors." That one, plus "The Most Beautiful Girl," also by Rich, were among the very few country records to cross over and sell pop in 1973.

Top soul singles were "Let's Get it On," Marvin Gaye; "Superstition," Stevie Wonder; "Neither One of Us Wants To Be the First To Say Goodbye," Gladys Knight and the Pips; "Me and Mrs. Jones," Billy Paul.

PAUL SIMON had an LP, "There Goes Rhymin' Simon," out of which came several hit singles — "Loves Me Like a Rock," "Kodachrome." Art Garfunkel got an LP in the charts, "Angel Clare." Ringo Starr had the LP, "Ringo," to which all the Beatles contributed songs, vocals and instrumentation for the first time since their breakup.

The Who brought out the first album in two years, "Quadrophenia," about a person with four-way mental disorientation, each one based on a member of Who.

In England, where the teenybopper is supreme, the Osmonds were mobbed. Jermaine Jackson, 18, middle member of the Jackson 5, married Hazel Gordy, 18, daughter of Motown boss Berry Gordy. Smokey Robinson wrote a song for the occasion.

The four Pointer Sisters rose from the ghetto of Oakland to stardom in 1973, dressing and sounding like the Andrews Sisters, whom they'd never heard of. Patty and Maxine Andrews signed to do a Broadway show.

BOB DYLAN formed a record company, Ashes and Sand. Bette Midler and Liza Minnelli announced three-week seasons in Broadway theaters and tickets sold out for both runs before opening night. There was a run on banjos after "Deliverance" and Martin Mull wrote his answer to "Dueling Banjos" — "Dueling Tubas." There were a lot of rock shows on TV and some felt it hurt attendance at live shows. Melanie had a daughter, Leilah.

Carl Reiner and Mel Brooks, who once had a comedy record out about the 2,001-year-old man, put out "2,000 and 13."

None of the Watergate comedy albums sold very well. Sen. Sam Ervin made a record of down-home anecdotes. There was some reggae, an uptempo Jamaican rhythm meant to be danced to.

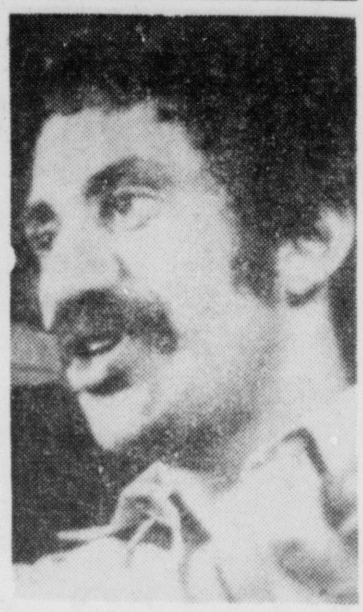
Near the end of the year, there was a shortage of vinyl and paper, for making records and sleeves, and some colleges are thinking about closing part of the spring semester and not holding concerts on Sunday, cutting down the market for rock groups — who travel by plane and bus.

CLIVE DAVIS was fired as president of Columbia Records in the flurry of a federal investigation into drugs and payola in the record industry. Irwin Segelstein became president and Goddard Lieberson, president of CBS-Records Group. David Geffen became president of Elektra-Asylum and Kenneth D. Glancy, president of RCA Records. Both their predecessors moved into the parent corporations.

There was a one-day "summer jam" at Watkins Glen, N.Y., which drew 600,000 and made $200,000 profit for its two young promoters. The Band, Grateful Dead and Allman Brothers played. Villagers were annoyed by the traffic jam.

Books included "Bird Lives," about Charlie Parker; Duke Ellington's "Music Is My Mistress"; Myra Freidman's "Buried Alive" about Janis Joplin, and several about George Gershwin, who would have been 75 in 1973.

AMONG THOSE who died during the year were Gram Parsons, 27, former member of the Byrds, whose body was stolen and burned in the California desert, apparently as he had wished; Max Yasgur, 65, who owned the 600-acre farm where the Woodstock Festival was held in 1969; Ron "Pigpen" McKernan, 27, blues singer and harmonica player with the Grateful Dead; Tito Rodriguez, 50, the Frank Sinatra of Latin music; Paul Williams, 34, baritone and original member of the Temptations, apparently a suicide; Allan Sherman, 49, who had a comedy hit record, "My Son the Folksinger" in 1962, of emphysema; Roger Lee Durham, 27, of Bloodstone, after a lengthy illness. Sister Rosetta Tharpe, 57, a top gospel singer since the 1930s.



JIM CROCE
An untimely, early death

Vaughn Monroe, 62, nasal baritone of "Racing with the Moon" fame and a bandleader, after surgery; drummer Gene Krupa, 64, a star of Benny Goodman's band in the 1930s, of leukemia; banjoist Eddie Condon, 67, often called the father of the Chicago school of improvisational jazz, of cancer; stride pianist Willie "the Lion" Smith, 79; saxophonist Ben Webster, 64, who had played with the Ellington band, of cerebral thrombosis.

Andy Razaf, 77, lyricist for more than 1,000 songs including "Honeysuckle Rose" and "Stompin' at the Savoy"; jazz trombonist J. C. Higginbotham, 67, who had played with Fletcher Henderson and Louis Armstrong; song writer Sir Noel Coward, 73; Clara Ward, 48, leader of the Ward Gospel Singers, of a stroke; Kid Ory, 86, who wrote "Muskrat Ramble" and had King Oliver, Sidney Bechet and Louis Armstrong in his band; Wilbur de Paris, 72, Dixieland trombonist; trumpeter De De Pierce, 69, who with his wife Billie led the Preservation Hall Jazz Band in New Orleans, of pneumonia.

A Game Show From Vegas

"Dealer's Choice," a new game show with Bab Hastings as host, will be telecast Mondays on Channel 5, beginning this coming week.

The first naticnally televised series to be produced and taped in Las Vegas, "Dealer's Choice" will give thousands of dollars in prizes and cash away each week.

Contestants will have the chance to play games such as Black Jack, the Wheel of Chance and Win Without A Pair.

ABC To Carry Canadian Golf

ABC Sports has acquired the exclusive telecast rights for the 1974 Canadian Open golf championship at the Mississaugua Golf Club in Mississuagua, Ontario, July 27 and July 28, it was announced today by Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, and Bruce Forbes, executive director of the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

Occurring two weeks after the British Open and two weeks before the PGA Championship, the 1974 Canadian Open has a purse of $175,000 with $35,000 and the Peter Jackson Trophy going to the winner.

The Mississaugua Golf Club has been the site of five other Canadian Opens and is one of Canada's finest courses. Tom Weiskopf is the defending 1973 tournament champion.

They're At Home

Jack Weston and Marge Redmond, stars of "For Better, For Worse," half-hour comedy program development project for NBC-TV, are natives of Cleveland, Ohio, locale of the story. The pair also are husband and wife in private life.

FOR DR. ALLEN HYNEK, astronomer at Northwestern University

When you were in charge of the Air Force's UFO inquiry, you rejected the existence of UFO's. Now you verify the experience of two men in Mississippi who say three creatures spirited them aboard a flying saucer. What gives?—Jan L. Ruehling, Biloxi, Miss.

● I did examine these men under hypnosis, and have stated their experience was very real. I have not changed my mind about space visitors. But I have changed my mind about UFO's being simple misperceptions of common things. I am now quite convinced that we do have a very real and as yet unexplained phenomenon going on. I believe people who report UFO's are sincere, and I, for one, cannot explain many of the things they describe. We must, however, remember that the "U" in UFO simply means "unidentified"—not necessarily visitors from outer space.

FOR CAROL CHANNING

Your hit song, "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend," turned diamonds into your trademark. How do you feel about them in private life?—A. Woolitt, East St. Louis, Ill.

● I don't really like them! I'm too big for them. I'm six feet in heels. Diamonds are just too small. Well, maybe the Hope Diamond would be all right. . . . Besides, diamonds are too much like business to me now.

FOR SUZANNE PLESHETTE of "The Bob Newhart Show"

Your name sounds French. Did your ancestors come from France?—F. S., Washington, D.C.

● I am second-generation American-born on both sides of my family. I spoke French quite well until I was six, but only with my grandparents. I haven't spoken it since. So my French accent is excellent, but my vocabulary is that of a six-year-old!

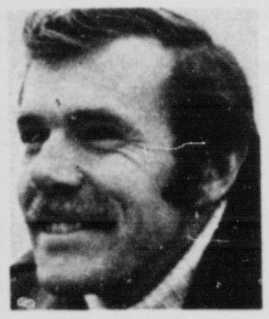
FOR TONY BENNETT

What was the turning point in your life?—A. Newkley, Urbana, Ill.

● When Bob Hope saw me performing in Greenwich Village in 1950. Pearl Bailey was the star of the show. Hope asked me to go on tour with him. That kind of changed things for me. It was my first taste of big time. And I liked it!

FOR RICHARD BACH,
author of "Jonathan Livingston Seagull"

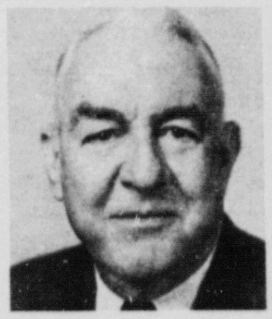
I read that you tried to stop release of the movie "Jonathan Livingston Seagull." Why?—C. Gabrovic, Mascoutah, Ill.



● The film is an incredible sticky mess that has almost nothing to do with the ideas or characters in my book. The producer told me that he'd make no changes without my approval. When I saw the movie he made, I didn't approve, but I couldn't stop the film or even remove my "credit." It sounds like the old Hollywood story—and it is—but it's not over yet.

FOR SEN. SAM J. ERVIN (D-N.C.)

Do you think it's right for the FCC to be able to use its "fairness doctrine" to shut down radio stations for being too one-sided?—G. A. Lasko, Minneapolis, Minn.



● I fear the practical result of this doctrine is that very few radio stations say anything about anything from any point of view. I would hazard to say that the doctrine has served to stifle the presentation of controversy and variety more than to promote it.

FOR TERRY ANNE MEEUWSEN, 1973 Miss America

I read about the Miss America contest being picketed by Women's Lib. What's your reaction?—P. T., Marion, Ind.

● I certainly don't think the Miss America Pageant downgrades womanhood. It's a scholarship contest. I see nothing wrong in wearing a one-piece bathing suit. Certainly the ones worn in the pageant are far more modest than what most girls wear on the beaches. Besides, I find it hard to believe that it is particularly thrilling for men to look at a row of contestants.

FOR VERA MILES, actress

As a mother of four—are you friends with your children?—K. T. Z., Waco, Texas

● I think so. There's a certain age where a mother has two choices: She can be bitter enemies with her children or good friends. I believe in letting them learn by their own mistakes. I'll be there to pick up the pieces when they need me, and they know that.

FOR WILLIAM D. RUCKELSHAUS, former Deputy Attorney General

Did public reaction to the Cox-Richardson-Ruckelshaus affair prove anything?—John Miller, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● Yes. One, the people reinforced the primacy of law. Two, they don't like the investigator of the President being fired by the President. And three, the people showed they still have tremendous power to control events in this country.

FOR DAVE POWERS, former aide to John F. Kennedy

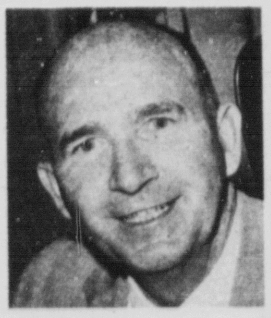
So many men claim they were aboard President Kennedy's PT-109, it would have had to be as big as a battleship. Do you agree?—Vincent Gallagher, Green Bay, Wis.



● Do I ever! One day after I hung up from talking to a caller, Senator Kennedy said, "Who was that?" I said it was the elevator operator of the PT-109. He said, "What in the world are you talking about"? I answered that with all the men who were supposedly on the craft, I figured it must have had five decks and at least one elevator!

Humanizing America: John D. Rockefeller Proposes a 13-Year Bicentennial

"It took 13 years—from 1776 to 1789—to move from independence to union. I propose that the Bicentennial cover a similar period of time, that it be conceived as an era lasting from 1776 to 1989."

Elizabeth Gee

John D. Rockefeller and his wife Blanchette. He believes in a Bicentennial that will "move beyond celebration for its own sake to a Bicentennial that serves America's best purposes in this time of ferment and change."

At first glance, America's Bicentennial may not seem a very important subject. It is, after all, merely an anniversary—a 200th to be sure, but still just an anniversary. In the light of the Bicentennial's inauspicious beginning, is there reason to think it will become more than that, more than "just another anniversary"? My response is an unequivocal yes—provided we Americans see the full potential of the opportunity it offers and are prepared to commit ourselves to realizing that opportunity.

Today, just as 200 years ago, we are at a crucial turning point in our history. Our society is in ferment. We face difficult unresolved problems, a crisis of confidence, an uncertain future. There is as much divisiveness and fear and alienation today as there was then. The profound currents of social change in our society now are concerned with the same humanistic ideals and values that motivated the men and women of Colonial America—freedom and justice and truth; "quality of life" is the modern translation of Jefferson's immortal phrase, "the pursuit of happiness."

One of the most daring acts of our Founding Fathers was the explicit statement, in writing, of the rights of men and the values and ideals upon which the society was to be based. The Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights together presented a new and breathtaking vision of a just and humane society, one based on the dignity of the individual, on his inalienable rights.

It is true, of course, that some of those rights and values and ideals were violated right from the beginning. Throughout our rich and tumultuous history, we have at times lived up to our ideals gloriously—and at other times ignored them shamefully. We subordinated them in the great materialistic surge of the Industrial Revolution and in our ethic of perpetual expansion and growth. Never have the rights of Americans been truly available to all Americans.

Yet the remarkable fact is that although we have been far from perfect, we persist. Our founding values have been preserved, even if most of us take them for granted, while some of us have access to them only with great difficulty. In many ways we have matured rapidly as a society in recent decades. We have outlived some of our myths—the myth of our invincibility, for example, or the idea that a "melting pot" will mold everyone into some standard and comfortable notion of what an American should be. We are questioning the soundness of perpetual growth. We are increasingly able to look at our past more honestly than was possible a decade ago.

And, more importantly, we are a society on the move. We are in the early stages of the Second American Revolution. What began in part as the black revolution and youth revolution has spread to some extent throughout virtually all elements of our society. We have Women's Liberation, the consumer movement, the concern for our environment, a new interest in corporate responsibility, a new consciousness on the part of native Americans, a growing concern over the nature of work, increasing involvement in political life, a new directness and ease in human relations.

The common thread running through all of these and similar phenomena is a reconsideration of the values by which we order our lives and our society. This is the core of the Second American Revolution, whose purposes are to improve life for all our citizens. It is a revolution of fulfillment rather than overthrow, a humanistic movement toward a higher level of human existence.

This growing concern for what life is all about, so characteristic of our time, is made possible in large measure by the advanced state of the American economy. We are moving into what economists refer to as a post-industrial society. Industrialization is not an end in itself, but preparation for the next higher stage of human development.

True, the Second American Revolution could become distorted. It could degenerate into violence. But I am optimistic because I believe that understanding and involvement are increasing—particularly among the "moderates," the vast American center that includes so many millions of people of goodwill, who wish only the best for their country and their fellow citizens.

Here lies the challenge: How do we move beyond celebration for its own sake to a Bicentennial that serves our best purposes in this time of ferment and change? It seems to me that there are three major requirements.

FIRST: The time span of the Bicentennial: My proposal is that we reject the notion of the Bicentennial as only a national birthday party on July 4, 1776, or even as a one-year anniversary during 1976. Rather, we should see it as covering a substantial period of time, as a Bicentennial Era.

The founding of our nation did not begin and end with the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776. The war was formally ended in 1783. The Constitution was not drafted until 1787. And it was not until 1789 that the Union truly began—with the first Congress, the first Supreme Court, and the first President.

Humanizing America

It took 13 years—from 1776 to 1789—to move from independence to union. I propose that the Bicentennial cover a similar period of time, that it be conceived as an era lasting from 1976 to 1989.

SECOND: What of the inspirational quality of the Bicentennial? I believe most of us would agree that today we are not an inspired people. Despite the indications of vitality in our society, weariness, uncertainty and complacency seem increasingly to inhibit our efforts.

Have we lost our way? Is this great nation really on the decline? Or can we come together in renewed dedication to live out the promise that was articulated so well 200 years ago? We will find out the answer to that question during the Bicentennial Era. It offers us common ground, a chance to unite in common purpose if we will but take it and make the most of it.

Considering the history of blacks in our society, it would not be surprising if they were totally uninterested in the Bicentennial. Yet the significant fact is that a number of black leaders have taken a different position. It was perhaps best expressed in an address given a year and a half ago by Vincent De Forest. He said that the interest of blacks in the Bicentennial was not inspired by "the idea of organizing malcontents into a chorus of troublemakers. To the contrary," he said, "we wish to be positive, to affirm America and its people and their continuing revolution."

THIRD: We must concentrate on achievement. We may be lifted and stirred by the Bicentennial. But will we also be motivated to achieve?

There is a tremendous range of opportunities for achievement. How can we make our cities more livable? How can we better draw on rural America? How can we best protect and enhance our environment? How can we establish and assure the rights of all our citizens? What should be the nature of our economic system? What should be the role of government in the years ahead? We need to assemble our best talent to consider these and other difficult questions.

A number of cities have begun efforts to capitalize on the Bicentennial for purposes of urban renewal—cities such as Baton Rouge, La.; Lansing, Mich.; Pensacola, Fla.; Niagara Falls, N.Y. We will need to make a national commitment to provide the leadership, organization and resources to create realistic opportunities for goal-setting.

The opportunities for every organization and individual to be involved are virtually unlimited. But I underscore my strong belief that our ability to set goals for the future, and work to achieve them, to address our most serious social problems effectively, will be the true test of our society. If we dedicate the Bicentennial Era to these ends, we will have earned the right to celebrate as never before.

If the Bicentennial is to become the positive force that it can be, I believe there is still another requirement. It is that the Bicentennial will be meaningful and productive only to the extent that it becomes an era during which the power of individual initiative is rediscovered. This is the key to progress, to a successful Second American Revolution.

I believe there is a great potential interest among individual Americans in the Bicentennial. But much of it will remain latent unless we begin to take initiative—both as individuals and within the organizations and groups of which we are a part—to find ways to energize people in order to provide the needed leadership and framework and resources.

The fact is that we have heard virtually nothing about the Bicentennial from our great corporations, from the labor unions, from the foundations, from many of our largest nonprofit organizations, indeed even from our universities.

Clearly, unless we greatly reinvigorate our tradition of private initiative our 200th anniversary is going to be a charade, and the opportunity it offers for moving our society forward will be lost. Hanging back and waiting for government approval before doing anything is sheer nonsense. If we had done that 200 years ago, we would still be a British colony.

Now is the time for all of us to be patriots in the best sense of the word, not content simply to enjoy the blessings of the system we have inherited, but to try to make our nation better, to hand on to the next generation a better America, truer to its promise, its potential and its own ideals. I submit to you that this vision of a better America in the future can be fulfilled, but only if we—you and I—become involved and committed now.

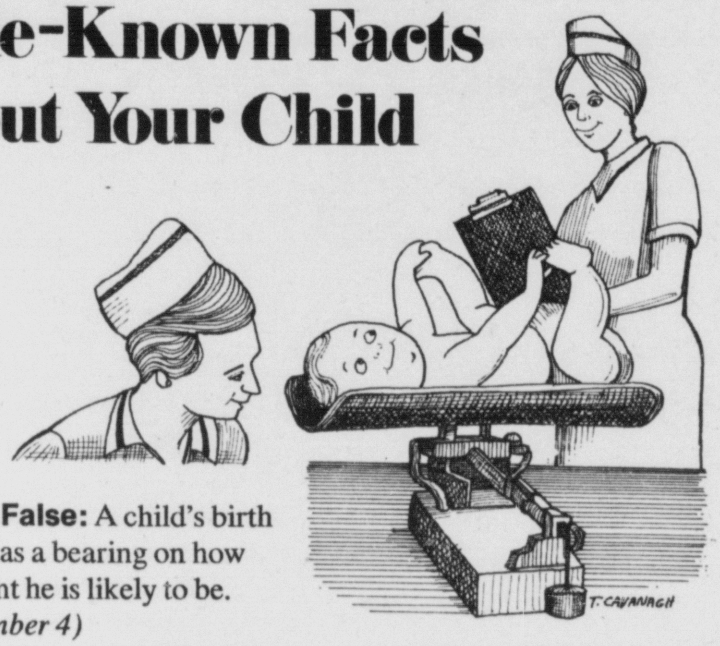
People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

Little-Known Facts About Your Child



True or False: A child's birth weight has a bearing on how intelligent he is likely to be. (See number 4)

Childhood is something that happens to everybody, and children are creatures that most people have at least two of. And that's what this True-or-False quiz is all about.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If your child is a good listener, he's likely to have a good IQ.

2. When parents have difficulty relating to their children, it's likely to be a case of history repeating itself.

3. Boys' fears tend to be focused on the future, while girls' fears are more apt to be related to the present.

4. A child's birth weight has a bearing on how intelligent he is likely to be.

5. Gifted children have the happiest childhoods and the best relationship with their parents.

6. When an adopted child grows old enough to wonder about his identity, you should satisfy his curiosity by answering his questions as best you can.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to studies at Southern Illinois University, where children's IQ scores were compared with their ability to listen attentively. It was found that children who made good scores on listening tests evidenced high ability on intelligence tests.

2. True. A psychiatric study of parent-child relationships has shown that individuals who experience a difficult relationship with their children "will usually be found to have had difficulty in handling their own hostility in childhood against parents, brothers and sisters—or both."

3. True. Florida State University studies show that girls' fears tend to focus on the immediate present—the here and now. And in that area their fears are more numerous and more intense than is the case with boys. The investigation showed, however, that boys had "significantly more intense fears of the future."

4. True. Consensus of studies on the relationship of birth weight to intelligence—the ability to think, reason and absorb new knowledge—shows that people whose birth weight is not appreciably higher or lower than the normal range average the highest IQ's. This doesn't mean that higher IQ's do not occur in other birthweight ranges—but that they occur less frequently.

5. False. Findings of researchers show that creative children often have extremely unhappy childhoods, lack of rapport with their parents, and are forced to fight an uphill battle to "find themselves" and realize their own potential. Their self-confidence is often undermined by parents and others "who suppress new ideas and espouse negative attitudes." When you add to this the attitudes of playmates who are jealous of the gifted child's superior endowments, it becomes clear that his lot is not wholly to be envied.

6. True—according to the findings of a University of Michigan study of the pros and cons of this question. It's concluded that "there is far too little communication between parents and their adopted children on this sensitive issue." It's pointed out that inevitably the child must cope with the reality of the situation. It's also observed that withholding information from the parents about their child's background may both intensify their worries about his heredity and deprive the child of his right to accurate and complete identification of himself.

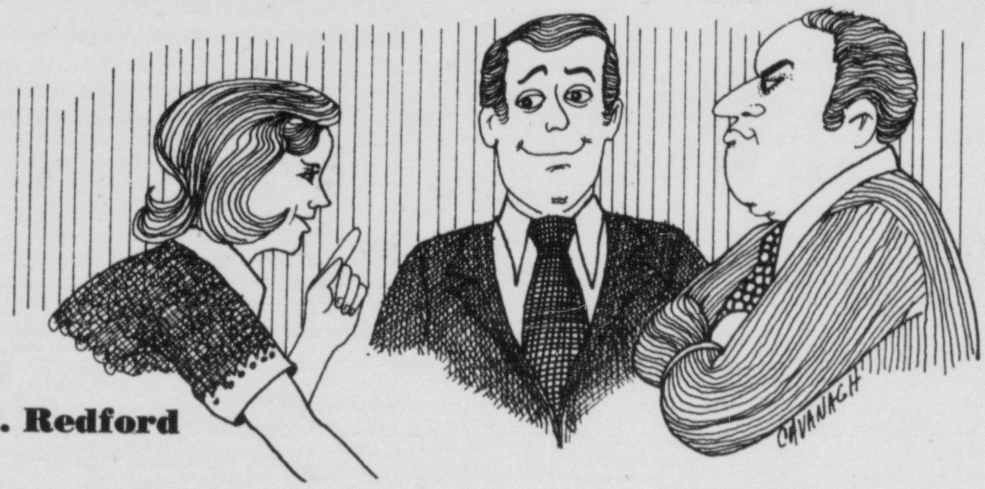
Ranked in Order: 14 Complaints Secretaries Have About Bosses



By S. R. Redford

"In any job, personality differences can induce a feeling of chronic fatigue when endured five days a week, eight hours a day."

Sometimes when there's a problem, people forget to ask the real experts. As demand for competent secretaries has risen during the last few years, everyone from personnel manager to corporation president has issued lists of "do's" and "don'ts" for creating goodwill between boss and secretary. But it's difficult to find any in-depth study of what secretaries themselves want and don't want in a job and in a boss.

Since 1960, "P.S. for Private Secretaries," a biweekly newsletter of information for secretaries published by the Bureau of Business Practice Inc., has featured a lively section called "Secretarial Clinic." From all over the U.S. and Canada, secretaries write to air their job problems and to request advice from other secretaries. We asked Mrs. Irene Stone, editor of "P.S. for Private Secretaries," to review her files of letters and find the most important problems and complaints as the secretaries saw them.

As you read the list, which is numbered in the order of the items' importance, remember no secretary may ever tell you any of these things directly, not even if she quits. Long ago, industrial psychologists proved that most people don't tell the complete truth when they leave. Typical explanations such as, "I need a job closer to home," "My husband doesn't want me to work," "My children's school lets out earlier than it used to," lull a boss into believing it wasn't the job and it certainly wasn't him. But an alert supervisor has to realize that in many cases a secretary would keep the job, almost no matter what—if she enjoyed it sufficiently.

Many people do not understand that being a boss in the year 1974 in a democratic society is a complicated skill. Far more is involved than just giving sensible orders. The first two kinds of secretarial complaints make this fact clear.

1. His* method of dealing with people is difficult to understand, and he's aroused a great deal of resentment.

2. He doesn't know much about office procedures and sharing ideas with others. He's inconsiderate and immature, and won't accept new ideas or other people's ideas readily.

In our modern, classless world, the power of the boss's position can take a boss just so far. Tact and human relations skill are business necessities. Says an expert quoted recently in "Personnel Journal": "The difference between the man who has a topnotch secretary and one who does not, may be the man. Personnel departments can do just so much for a boss in finding candidates . . . but the rest is up to the executive—the interviewing, training, and willingness to share responsibility with his new assistant."

Other important complaints indicate that some bosses may be so busy pushing through their day's output that they become insensitive to the fact that secretaries are people.

3. My boss expects too much of one person.

4. He doesn't believe in vacations for secretaries. But he doesn't mind asking me to work overtime without extra pay or giving me extra duties. And he rarely expresses his appreciation.

5. I work for more than one person and get conflicting assignments.

When any of these situations occurs regularly, it tells a secretary her boss doesn't think enough of her to develop a reasonable overall workload for her; nor does he consider how many work hours are needed for her to carry out individual tasks he assigns. The problem runs far deeper than inconvenience—though that in itself is serious. As one secretary put it, "When he acts like that, I feel like an extension of the office furniture. Sure, he's routinely polite, but I can't help feeling he values me as just a cog that's useful to him." A recent job-turnover survey of office workers revealed that when a secretary believes her boss has stopped seeing her as a person, her mind often turns to job hunting.

The next complaint is a fine example of chronic personality conflict between boss and secretary:

6. He's too stiff to work for. There's never any variation from the norm.

Problems like this are no one's fault. Yet in any job, personality differences can induce a feeling of chronic fatigue when endured five days a week, eight hours a day. Other personality-conflict examples:

7. My boss and I are both "drivers" — and sometimes our drives conflict.

8. We're both sticklers for detail and sometimes our ideas of detail differ.

It all depends on how serious the personality conflict seems to the secretary involved. Suggesting that a person "adjust"—especially the secretary—is one usual solution. Frankly, though, for a competent secretary there are plenty of good jobs in the world. If problems like Nos. 6, 7, 8 become really important to her, probably the healthiest solution is a change of position to a boss whose temperament is more congenial.

And then there's the famous problem: the Go-fer, or Personal Chores, problem:

9. He asks me to handle personal chores like buying gifts for his wife, typing his son's term paper, etc. etc.

Though "P.S. for Private Secretaries" found that this is one of the 14 most common complaints secretaries make against their bosses, there is a wide range of secretarial reaction. Some secretaries were informed when they accepted the position that they'd be expected to do such chores. Others object not to the work itself but to how they're asked. They prefer, "Do you have time?", or "Would

*Though we use "he" for boss and "she" for secretary, we do realize that approximately five percent of secretaries in the United States today are men and an ever-rising percentage of bosses are women.

Secretaries

you mind?" This provides the opportunity to refuse gracefully. It also indicates the boss realizes personal services are a favor.

Still other secretaries say they don't mind personal chores "as long as I have my lunch hour and after-work hours free and do his personal typing, bookkeeping, and shopping on his time." And yet another group of secretaries is adamant in finding all these tasks demeaning!

If No. 9 is an old problem, No. 10 is rather new. More so than in the past, many secretaries today are ambitious for responsibility and promotion.

10. He's unwilling to turn loose some detail work that only clutters his desk and day.

In a "Be Nicer to Secretaries" memo issued by the State Department, the government plowed into the boss who won't recognize a secretary's intelligence, expand her authority, and ultimately, if she wants it, offer her a promotion. "Do not assume secretaries to have disabling intellectual limitations" was the government's way of putting it.

The last four complaints may not seem very important to a busy supervisor. Yet year in and year out secretaries write emotion-charged appeals about these situations to the "Secretarial Clinic." Nothing that produces so much emotion can be dismissed as trivial.

11. He doesn't tell me the things I should know ahead of time.

12. He doesn't tell me where he's going around the building.

13. He neglects to tell me when he'll be out of town on a business trip, or just where he is when he's out of the building.

14. Sometimes both my bosses go out and forget to come back when I have an appointment for lunch.

As one desperate secretary put it in an emotion-filled letter to the "Clinic": "The worst part is that my boss frequently disappears just as I receive a long-distance call for him or before someone from another department drops in to see him. How do I correct this, short of hanging a bell around his neck?"

Little things attended to, we've all often been told, create contentment. Problems 11-14 make it obvious that little things, regularly ignored, can roil emotions and even create deep resentment.

Overall, being aware of the other person's reactions is probably the best way for a boss and secretary to solve the 14 commonest conflict situations.

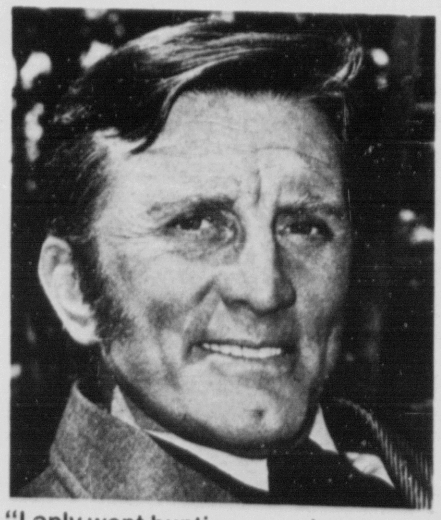
KIRK DOUGLAS:
"My Wife's Coat—And the Terrible Price It Cost"



"I only went hunting once in my life. It was on an African safari to shoot wild game. I killed a tiger and a leopard. I thought it would be nice to get my wife a leopard for a coat. What I didn't know was that it would take four or five leopards to make that coat. . . . At first I thought it would be difficult for me to kill an animal, but once I started shooting, it came easily. It was only later that I began thinking about what I had actually done. I started having pangs of guilt, and I have never hunted since. I won't go so far as to say that all hunting should be cut out. I'm not that nice a guy. But if you look at all of those species that are now being threatened with extinction, it's obvious that something must be done. Tighter restrictions on hunting—that's the only solution I can think of." Mr. Douglas recently directed his first film, "Scalawag," in which he also stars.—Interviewed by William Wolf

WHY PLANT A GROUND COVER?

In many areas and situations, ground covers are more appropriate and more satisfactory than turf. They are able to grow and thrive in sun OR shade, and in poor soil.

On steep slopes where mowing is difficult, ground cover is much more effective and much less laborious to maintain than grass. Ground covers hold the soil as well as turf and the textures are far more interesting.

Small areas of grass are a continual chore to keep mown and trimmed but ground covers require almost no care. They are excellent protection and soil conditioners. They hold the fallen leaves from blowing away, thus helping to add annually to the humus content.

WHY CREEPING RED SEDUM?

One of Sedum's most valuable assets is its full time beauty. Lush foliage begins in early spring, and star-shaped wine red flowers delight the viewer from late June through September. The attractive semi-evergreen foliage lasts well into winter, maintaining its rich green and bronze color nearly all year round.

Besides being one of the loveliest of the ground covers, Sedum also rates high on the other requirements. It is hardy, grows well in sun or partial shade, in sandy soil, clay soil, or good soil.

Its thick foliage and root system hold the soil on slopes or banks. The neat 3-4" cover forms a dense perennial mat to bring green and wine red beauty to slopes, borders, rocky areas, anywhere beauty and durability are needed.

Each plant will easily and quickly spread to fill one sq. ft. Sedum spreads evenly, maintains its uniform smooth beauty at all stages of growth. Unlike some other ground covers, Sedum, also called "Dragon's Blood," stays where you put it — does not straggle out into places where it doesn't belong. Sedum is almost indestructible, enduring and persisting against heavy climatic and nutritional odds.

FULLY GUARANTEED

All items guaranteed to be of high quality, exactly as advertised and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY —you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

Now is a Good Time to Plant RED SEDUM!

Your young Sedum plants will establish themselves and begin to spread a few days after planting. In a month or so they will already be 3-4 inches in diameter. Smart Cooking

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares several recipes from "The Calculating Cook," a gourmet cookbook by Jeanne Jones for people on special diets. Marilyn says: "So often I get letters from diabetics and other dieters. Isn't there some way, they ask, to make dietetic meals appetizing? Of course there is! I've taste-tested these recipes—and they're delicious by any standard!"

Rapid Roast That's Great for Dieters

SEMITROPICAL FRUIT CUP

1 cup (½-pint container) plain yogurt
1 ripe banana, sliced
1 orange, peeled, seeded and diced
1 cup diced fresh pineapple (or canned unsweetened pineapple chucks, halved)
Cinnamon, mint leaf (optional)

1. Put yogurt and sliced banana into blender container, cover. Blend until smooth.

2. Pour banana and yogurt sauce over the diced orange and pineapple. Mix well, then spoon into sherbet glasses. Serve immediately. Garnish each with a sprinkle of cinnamon and a mint leaf (if available). Makes 6 servings, 40 calories per serving

Jeanne Jones, a gourmet cook, also happens to be diabetic.

RAPID ROAST

1-6 lb. beef roast, such as prime rib or boneless top sirloin
1 clove garlic
Salt

1. Preheat oven to 500°F. Rub roast with garlic and sprinkle with salt.

2. Place roast in preheated oven. Roast for 30 minutes and then turn the heat off. Do not open the oven door for exactly 2 hours, then open it and remove the roast.

3. Allow the roast to stand 15 minutes before carving for easier slicing.

4. Thirty minutes roasting time will make a rare roast. If you wish more well-done meat, roast for 33 or 34 minutes at 500°F. before turning the heat off. The general rule is: 5 minutes to the pound for rare and 5½-6 minutes to the pound for more well-done meat. Each slice (3x2x⅛ inches) contains 73 calories

SPINACH SALAD

1½ lbs. tender, fresh, washed, torn spinach leaves, chilled
¼ cup Bacon Dressing, recipe below
2 hard-cooked eggs, shredded

1. In salad bowl, toss spinach with bacon dressing until leaves are well-coated.

2. Divide salad onto 8 salad plates. Top each serving with shredded egg. Makes 8 servings, 63 calories per serving

BACON DRESSING

1 slice bacon, very crisp, cooled and blotted
1½ teaspoons red-wine vinegar
½ teaspoon hickory-smoked salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon water
5 tablespoons vegetable oil

1. Crumble the crisp bacon and add it to the vinegar in a jar with a tightly fitted lid.

2. Add the hickory-smoked salt, dry mustard and pepper. Mix until the salt is dissolved. Add water and oil. Cover jar tightly and shake vigorously for 30 seconds. Store covered in refrigerator. Makes about ½ cup, 1½ teaspoons contain 45 calories

"'The Calculating Cook,'" says Marilyn, "is a fine cookbook that has been approved by the Diabetes Association of Southern California. It is available in bookstores, or else by writing the publishers, 101 Productions, 79 Liberty Street, San Francisco, Calif. 94110."

I believe that my MINK OIL will make your WRINKLES VANISH!

By Billie Ann Bender

You can find out for yourself without risking one penny! Here's what I did about my wrinkles . . . I always pampered my skin . . . Special creams, lotions, exotic balms . . . I used them faithfully. Yet nothing helped. I was ready to give up. You see unsightly premature wrinkles are caused by changes in climate, temperature, humidity, dryness, pollution even soaps and detergents.

Then something struck me—something I never would have known if my husband hadn't owned and managed a mink farm where we lived.

One day I was serving coffee to three of the men who handle the mink pelts. These men had worked for my husband for years. As I gave them their coffee, I couldn't help but notice their hands. How smooth and soft they were! I thought about them all that day. In my opinion it had to be something in the body or skin of the mink that made their hands so smooth and soft. And if it was good for hands, then it must be good for the face and throat. Could this be the answer to the signs that alarm every woman?

I told my husband what was on my mind and asked if he could possibly extract some of the oil from the mink pelts. At first he laughed at me, but then agreed I might have a point. He consulted a chemist friend and together they compounded the mink oil with a pure balm base. It was a costly process, but what it produced I believed was priceless.

After I'd used the mink oil my complexion looked fresher, clearer, smoother. There was no doubt about it. My formerly dull, dry skin now had a glowing, dewy look. I was really thrilled! The little lines had been eased away. Even my throat seemed petal-smooth and more firm looking. I could hardly believe it. My friends and relatives were astonished at the change in my appearance.

So I gave my precious mink oil a name and put it on the market. It's called Emlin®Mink Oil Essential Creme. It contains no hormones, estrogens or steroids—only the pure oil and balm. Already I've received hundreds of letters from delighted users. Many said the effects were beyond anything they had hoped for. These reports make me say "I believe that my mink oil will make your wrinkles vanish."

And mind you, there's nothing complicated about the application. (Who has time for elaborate beauty rituals? I'll bet you don't). Just apply Emlin®Mink Oil Essential Creme at bedtime and leave it on while you sleep. That's when it works its wonders, helping to penetrate below the surface of your skin replacing lost natural oils, restoring moisture balance, leaving a beautifully lovely skin you never dreamed possible.

I'm so confident my Mink Oil cream can do marvelous things for your skin. I offer it to you with an unconditional guarantee. Just try it. See for yourself, in your own mirror, how it helps ease away unwanted dreadful lines. Many women wrote of gratifying results after only two weeks. Some take longer. But I want you to understand this. If, for any reason, you are not pleased with Emlin®Mink Oil Essential Creme just return the unused portion to me, and I'll mail you a full refund, plus postage with no questions asked.

Now it's up to you. Here is your chance to have beautiful, attractive skin —at no risk. Fill out the coupon and mail today.

After losing 101 pounds, I weigh less than when I was 22 years old.

By Mary Falt Smith — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Here I am at age 22 and 148 pounds. This was taken during my honeymoon, so I was in pretty good shape . . . for me.

Nobody I'm sure will believe I'm only 51 years old here. But that's what 235 pounds and a head of gray hair did for me.

How's this for a change? At 52, I'm down to 134 pounds, have touched up my hair and feel spry as a spring chicken.

For someone like me who's gone through life being called Piano Legs, the Beef Trust and a Sherman Tank, it's almost unbelievable to lose 101 pounds and find you weigh less now than when you were married — at the age of 22.

Fortunately, my husband Smitty was never interested in a real skinny bride. He married a girl who liked to cook and loved to eat. In fact, he could outdo me in both departments. Why, it was nothing for us to have a lavish meal with homemade bread or muffins and hot baked pies, then go into the evening snacking on pretzels, potato chips, pizzas and beer. There was one difference between Smitty and me, though. Since he was over six feet tall, it took a lot more eating to fill him out than it did me.

Oh, I was intelligent enough to realize that I was over-eating. But somehow, my fat never seemed to bother me much. Maybe because I knew I was loved and I felt secure and comfortable. Then, one day a simple thing happened that changed my outlook and my life. Smitty and I decided to go to Maine on vacation and I wanted a pants suit for traveling. Well, I shopped and shopped, saying each time I left the house: "I'm off to Tent City." But at size 24½, I found nothing. And for the first time in my life, I admitted that being fat was no joke.

After the vacation, when we got back home to Pearl River, New York, I decided to try to lose some weight. A couple of my friends suggested that reducing-plan candy, Ayds®, since one of the "girls" had lost 20 pounds on the plan and couldn't say enough good things about it. Like Ayds contain vitamins and minerals; that they have no drugs; and that the plan leaves you really satisfied.

Frankly, with the tremendous amount of weight I had to lose, I was certain that the Ayds plan wouldn't work for me. Nevertheless, I bought a box of the vanilla caramel Ayds at the drugstore and began following the plan on the QT. The only person I told was my neighbor. She had a scale and weighed me secretly every week. She also gave me no end of encouragement and even volunteered to take in my clothes as I took off the weight.

It was not until I'd taken off 25 pounds, however, that my other neighbors began to notice. My family, too. I'll tell you, those Ayds candies really helped curb my appetite.

I want to mention here, though, that I did one thing differently on the Ayds plan and it worked perfectly for me. At breakfast, instead of chewing my Ayds, I'd put one into a cup of hot tea and it looked just as if I'd added milk and sugar. Tasted delicious, too, and all I had was 26 calories. At lunch, I'd go back to chewing two Ayds with tea. Then I'd have a lettuce and tomato salad and cold roast beef or chicken. And at dinner, I'd have Ayds and tea again with meat, a green vegetable and salad. Why, with the help of Ayds, I was even able to cut out all the starches I used to have and, honestly, I didn't even miss them.

One thing I'd like to say is this: putting too much pressure on a person, whether to reduce or to stop smoking or to give up gambling just makes him or her rebel. Each person has to decide for himself what he's going to do.

In my case, I had to get my own "nettle" up first about losing. But once I did, it took me only a year to go from 235 pounds to 134, thanks to the Ayds plan. It was when I hit that low figure that I couldn't resist getting out an old snapshot and comparing what I looked like when I was in my twenties with what I look like today. That's when I decided to color my hair, buy a new pants suit and be what I am — a "liberated" woman who still loves to cook for her man.

Is Your Dog Expecting?

If your dog is going to have a litter of healthy pups, it is important that she be well cared for during her pregnancy (from 60-66 days). Take every precaution to insure that she does not become infected with internal or external parasites—the No. 1 enemy of your future pups. Have her examined for worms before the third week (if she was not wormed before mating). As her appetite increases, give her larger quantities of food divided into additional feedings. Avoid gigantic single meals. No roughhousing; it can endanger both mother and pups. Though her regular schedule should be maintained, extra trips out decrease the chance of accidents in the house. Children should be encouraged to give their "dam" (mother-to-be) gentle affection during this time. In sharing this experience, they learn to understand and appreciate the birth cycle in a natural way.—By Felicia Ames

Sports Mini-Profile

WALT FRAZIER:
They Call Him "The Black Joe Namath"

Walt Frazier, All-Star guard for the New York Knicks, is known as "Clyde Cool." The nickname "Clyde" was hung on him because he steals basketballs the way "Clyde" of the celebrated "Bonnie and Clyde" movie stole from banks. The "Cool" identifies Frazier's style, for he never shows emotion or excitement as he exhibits his dazzling footwork, shooting and passing skills. . . . Off-court, Frazier is the No. 1 exponent of the New York life-style. Some people call him "The Black Joe Namath." He wears expensive suits and wide-brimmed hats, drives a burgundy Rolls-Royce with the license plate "W.C.F.," and lives in one of Manhattan's most expensive penthouse apartments. The rooms are a symphony in red and black, with the nickname "Clyde" etched in huge letters near the top of one mirrored wall. . . . Frazier can afford to live in high style. Salaried at close to $200,000 a year, he has all kinds of sideline pursuits via his "Walt Frazier Enterprises." . . . A Georgian by birth, he's come a long way from his Southern origins, where he was born into a poor family of nine and was regarded as shy and tongue-tied. Yet he led Southern Illinois to the championship of the National Invitation Tournament in New York and gained a new sense of confidence when the big-city fans went wild over his flashy plays and wide moustache. . . . In 1967, he became the Knicks' No. 1 draft choice and was a key factor in leading the New Yorkers to two national championships.—By Barry Abramson

The original cigarette.

The Original Length.
Others have added millimeters, filters and traps, but nobody ever found a way to pack in more flavor than the original Camel.

The Original Camel.
His name was Old Joe and he was just another face with Barnum & Bailey. Our artist sketched him, and 60 years later Old Joe remains world famous as the symbol of the finest cigarette made.

The Original Disappearing Pyramid.
Once we took this pyramid out to give Old Joe more walking room. Several tons of angry mail later, it was back in place forever.

The Original Blend.
The original measure of a cigarette was taste. So we blended the Burley, Virginia and Turkish tobaccos that deliver the most taste. Result: Camel, still the best tasting cigarette in the world.

Camel. You don't change a good thing.

Star Chat

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Lucille Ball:

"If You Can't Take Care of Yourself, How Can You Take Care of Anyone Else?"

I met Lucille Ball on location about an hour's drive north of Los Angeles, where the exterior of a Georgian mansion had been built for "Mame," Lucy's big new film.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Mame brought up her nephew in quite a freewheeling manner. Do you believe this is the proper way to raise a youngster?

LUCY: Maybe Mame goes a bit farther than I would in that respect, but she does one thing that I firmly believe in: She puts curiosity into the kids—makes them unafraid to tackle anything, mix with adults of any age, go anywhere. I don't believe in talking down to kids. As you know, I've always included my kids in everything I've ever done. The TV series, vacations—everything.

FW: But don't you feel that in some ways Mame is much more liberal than you? You have a reputation for being conservative.

LUCY: Not politically. I don't know what it means to be conservative politically. But in my own private life, yes, I guess I am.

FW: How do you interpret being conservative?

LUCY: To me it means doing things in moderation and not in excess. I've seen the folly of that too often. I've seen people so involved with their careers, for instance, that they don't take care of their children. To me, conservatism means taking care of yourself and your family. If you can take care of yourself, everything else will fall into place somehow. If you can't take care of yourself, how can you take care of anyone else?

FW: Is there anyone in particular who led you to this kind of thinking?

LUCY: Yes, Norman Vincent Peale. I have him to thank for it.

FW: Beatrice Arthur plays Vera in "Mame," and the rumor is that you two had quite a feud. Is that true?

LUCY: No, not at all.

FW: Then how do you think the rumor got started?

LUCY: I honestly don't know. I asked for Bea before we even had a director and the rest of the cast. I knew it would be difficult to get her. She had just started "Maude," and we had to wrap our schedule around hers.

FW: Why did you want Beatrice Arthur so badly?

LUCY: I'd seen her play the part with Angela Lansbury on the stage, and I loved Bea's strength and authority. I needed it.

FW: Did you ever have a feud with any of your co-stars?

LUCY: Not with any of my co-stars, but I once had a great—let's call it a misunderstanding—with director Henry Hathaway. That was years ago.

"I think the family has to be the censor for their own children."

And because of him I had great difficulties with the rest of the cast of the movie I was working on. We didn't speak to one another for five years.

FW: Did you ever make up?

LUCY: Yes, with the help of Ann Sothern. Now we're friends again.

FW: What was the film you did together?

LUCY (hesitating): I . . . can't remember. . . . I must have blocked it out of my mind. . . .

FW: How do you feel about R- and X-rated pictures?

LUCY: I think it puts a terrible load on young people who see these films. How can they equate it with the way their parents try to bring them up? I think it will lead to a society that is much too permissive.

FW: Then you do believe in censorship?

LUCY: I honestly don't know how to answer that, because I know what censorship can lead to. Once it starts, it's hard to stop. I think the family has to be the censor for their own children. But then I realize that this isn't always easy, particularly when kids grow older. It's difficult to find enough films they can see.

Lucy believes in "conservatism"—at least in her family life.

FW: Do you think you were too permissive with your own children?

LUCY: Certainly not. But I must say, I did spoil them. Maybe I gave them too much. And maybe I allowed other people to give them too much as well.

FW: What about you as a child—were you spoiled?

LUCY: We never had very much. At the same time, we never were in want of anything either. So in a way I was spoiled, but on a different economic level. That's why I can't disapprove too much of my own actions.

FW: How were you spoiled?

LUCY: My mother went deeply into debt to get me the things I wanted.

FW: Such as?

LUCY: Such as piano lessons at $2.50 an hour, which was very expensive in those days. And at the time, she really couldn't afford it. Or saxophone lessons. Or banjo. Anything I showed an interest in. The same held true for my brother. All the things we wanted to do, she helped us do.

FW: Did she punish you as well?

LUCY: Did she! Many a day I had to cut a switch off the lilac bush for my own switching! And when I got older, I was deprived of things like going out on Saturday night.

FW: If you could live your life over again, would you raise your own children—Lucie and Desi—differently?

LUCY: I don't think so. Three years ago I wouldn't have anticipated the things that happened. For instance, little Lucie never cooked in her life, never did any shopping, hardly put her clothes away—and now she's become a marvelous housekeeper.

FW: Were you disappointed when her marriage broke up?

LUCY: Yes. Very much. But she's adjusting to it, and she spends a lot of time with her dad in Baja California. She's become a very well-adjusted young lady. Do you know that she works for five different charities?

FW: Desi Jr., was going with Liza Minnelli for some time. Do you think he should have married her?

LUCY: I think he's too young to get married. He wants responsibility awfully badly, but frankly, he's got enough responsibilities already—only he doesn't recognize them.

FW: What will you do now?

LUCY: Another 24 TV shows.

FW: Do you ever get tired of the series?

LUCY: I wouldn't do it if I did. We consider each episode as if it were a brand new idea. That's the reason the show's so successful. We believe in unbelievable situations, then make them come true.

When your child can't sit still, is it nervousness or is it Pin-Worms?

Fidgeting, distraction, fitful scratching of rectal itch—many people don't know these "nervous habits" can be caused by Pin-Worms. These almost invisible parasites are so common, medical authorities have said 1 out of 3 children examined, and many parents, may have Pin-Worms.

They can infect anyone—young or old, rich or poor. Worst of all, Pin-Worms are highly contagious, so they can spread from person to person, until the whole family is infected.

Fortunately, there is an easy-to-take medication called Jayne's® P-W® tablets that gets rid of Pin-Worms. Your pharmacist will tell you that Jayne's P-W tablets are specially formulated with an effective medical ingredient that drives Pin-Worms out of your system. Ask for Jayne's P-W tablets at your drug store.

MARISA BERENSON
A touch of class

"There's nothing wrong with nudity if it's done with class," said Marisa Berenson when she first began her modeling career. Subsequently she was photographed in her birthday suit by the famous photographer Irving Penn for "Vogue" magazine. After appearing on "Vogue's" cover five times, she was photographed by England's David Bailey for "Playboy" magazine. This latest picture of Marisa—fully clothed, we hasten to say—was taken in Paris by movie star Peter Sellers. "I started at the top and went on from there," says the 26-year-old beauty who starred in "Cabaret" and has just completed a film in Italy called "A Way to Be a Woman." The fact that she switched from modeling to acting must be the reason Peter Sellers has been taking her picture recently . . . or could there be another reason?

QUOTE: Michael York, a low-key personality with a lot of star quality, says the following about the acting profession, a career he has pursued since he was a boy: "It's a worthwhile job, entertaining people and showing people what they are and why they are and how they behave. It's Shakespeare's mirror held up to nature. Sometimes it's shocking. Sometimes it's funny. But there it is. There is no explaining how one achieves stardom. There is no specific reason why it happens or how it happens. It's a sort of charisma." UNQUOTE.

MINISTER'S ISLAND
Getting there is half the fun

One solution to keeping unwelcome guests away from your country retreat might be to own a plot on Minister's Island. This 500-acre island can only be reached by car at low tide when the waters of the Bay of Fundy recede enough to uncover the Bar Road leading from the mainland of New Brunswick. There are legends of island visitors who miscalculated ebbs and floods and drowned when the tide came in. Once owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway tycoon, Sir Wilfred Van Horne, the island was bought several years ago by a land developer from Maine who is subdividing the area—for those who know the tides, or else have amphibious cars.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

MIRROR, MIRROR, MIRROR

When shopping for clothes, I confess
I'm a fearer
Of that fiendish reflector, the three-sided mirror.
My front, though not pleased with,
at least I am used to,
Yes, rather relaxed with and sometimes amused, too.
However, the sight of the rear and the side of me,
The oddly constructed and somewhat too wide of me,
The view seen so seldom, less lovely than hately,
Is why I've not been to a clothing store lately.
